BRITISH SEIZE IRISH CHIEFS; REVOLT FAILS

MUCH OF CITY BURNED.

EUROPEAN WAR SUMMARY

Ten thousand British at Kut-el-Amara, Mesopotamia, surrendered to Turks. Move made by Gen. Townshend to prevent his troops dying from hunger.

"President of Irish republic" surrenders and commander is killed. Revolt in Dublin being crushed.

French beat off German attacks both east and west of Meuse near Verdun.

Germans storm Russian position and capture over 5,600 men, including some high officers. Petrograd reports other Teuton attacks repelled.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, April 30, 1 a. m.—Peter Pearce, "president of the Irish republic," has surrendered to the loyal British troops in Dublin, and James Connolly, "vice president and commander in chief of the army," has been killed, according to a report made public by the British official press bureau last night.

Pearce, who was headmaster of St. Endas secondary school, was created provisional president in a proclamation issued by the Sinn Fein rebels, declaring Ireland to be an independent republic. The same proclamation designated Connolly commander in chief.

Dublin's general postoffice, which has been serving the rebels as headquarters, has been burned to the ground, the press bureau report adds.

REVOLT IS NEARING END.

Dispatches from Ireland received yesterday indicated that the revolution is rapidly approaching its end. At last account the rebels were trapped in the center of the city by a powerful cordon of government troops.

The fires in the various parts of the city were reported to be dying out, and all reports agreed that the government troops were steadily gaining the upper hand.

An exact list of casualties could not be obtained, but it is considered certain that today's toll exceeds by far those of the previous days. This is due chiefly to the fact that the government troops, once their "iron ring" around the rebels' stronghold had been closed, let loose a terrific fusillade of light artillery against the buildings.

500 HOUSES DESTROYED.

A Dublin dispatch gives some details of the extent of the fire losses. It was dated Friday and said:

"Sniping continues and fires are still raging. Sackville street, as far as the customs house, has been destroyed. Five

Judges to Seek Collusion Hint in Bacon Case

Tuthill Decision Before Jurists Tomorrow at Session on Dignity.

NOT LEGAL MATTER?

Circuit Judge Richard S. Tuthill's famous decision that Bacon wrote Shakespeare will be discussed tomorrow at a special meeting of the judges of the Circuit court.

Chief Justice Frederick A. Smith yesterday issued a call for the meeting, which, says the call, will be held for discussion of subjects affecting "the dignity and standing of the courts."

The special meeting follows an investigation already made by the court's executive committee, composed of Chief Justice Smith, Judge Jesse A. Baldwin, head of the chancery division of the court, and Judge Charles M. Walker, head of the court's law division.

Consider These Points.

The questions to be considered at noon tomorrow by the twenty Circuit judges, it is said, are these:

Was there collusion in the filing of the suit by Col. William N. Selig, motion picture multimillionaire and producer of Shakespeare pictures, against Col. George Fabyan, publisher of a new book on Baconian cipher?

Why was the suit, a chancery matter and in the first instance assigned by the clerk of the court, following routine, to Chief Justice Smith, taken by the lawyers for Col. Selig to Judge Tuthill, sitting in law cases?

As to Presenting Evidence.

Was there collusion in presenting the evidence which resulted in the peculiar decision?

Did the bringing of the suit before Judge Tuthill have any connection with Judge Tuthill's generation long friendship with Col. Fabyan, and with Judge Tuthill's belief, avowedly by him held for the last fifteen years, that Bacon wrote Shakespeare?

Why did Col. Selig present as evidence only a typewritten paper by Bishop Fallows, whereas Col. Fabyan presented a number of thorough, comprehensive books favoring the Baconian theory?

Jumped Appellate Court.

Why did Judge Tuthill grant Col. Selig leave to appeal directly to the Supreme court in place of allowing appeal first to the Appellate court?

Why did not Judge Tuthill, when he concluded that Col. Selig's prayer for an injunction against Col. Fabyan should be denied, content himself with ruling merely that the equities were with the defendant, in place of journeying past the situation's immediate need and handing down a sweeping decision upon a subject on which professional students of literature have for at least a century actively disagreed?

Has a judge of the Circuit court the power to pass upon a question concerning authors dead these 300 years—a question naturally involving no copyright dispute, but having to do simply with expressions of opinion about the true authorship of works?

Discussed at Meeting.

The judges of the court held their regular monthly meeting at noon Friday in the Hotel Sherman. Only nine judges were present among the absentees being Judge Tuthill. The Shakespeare-Bacon decision arousing comment, it was decided that there be called for the next Monday a special meeting, which all the judges should be urged to attend.

"It is exceedingly doubtful whether any judge has jurisdiction to hear such a case," said one of the Circuit judges yesterday. "If the authors had been yet living and the plays had been recent there might have been presented to the court a copyright dispute.

"I believe we should investigate whether there was collusion in the bringing of the suit and the obtaining of the decision. I haven't found that the complainant presented any evidence at all."

Reply by Tuthill.

"No. I didn't receive the call for the special meeting," said Judge Tuthill. "Well, I know how this started. It's all the work of one judge. He doesn't think I ought to have heard the case, because I'm on the law side.

"I don't know why they brought the case to me. I don't think the lawyers knew that my private opinion had been that Bacon wrote the works for so long attributed to Shakespeare."

COLONEL GIVES HIS KEYNOTE TO CHICAGO

Monroe Doctrine Is No Stronger than United States Navy!

Col. Theodore Roosevelt brought 1,500 Illinois and Chicago lawyers to their feet in wild cheering at the Illinois Bar association banquet at the Hotel La Salle last night, when he demanded universal service in the United States, modeled on the Swiss and Australian systems.

The demonstration came after he had been urging for an hour the gospel of "genuine Americanism" with no hyphen.

When the demonstration, that lasted a full minute, subsided he threw his manuscript aside and with unconcealed emotion he poured out his thanks to the audience for such enthusiasm.

ELATED BY THEIR CHEERS.

"This means more to me than you can imagine," said the colonel, extending his clasped hands in a gesture of greeting. "It shows that the hearts of our people in the great democratic middle west are right.

"It encourages me to go forth from here with an uplifted heart and head to continue the preaching of the sound doctrine of adequate preparation, not for war but to defend ourselves as men against any war that may be forced upon us."

Repeatedly Col. Roosevelt was interrupted with applause and cheering as he shot his verbal shafts at the administration at Washington for failure, as he saw it, to make preparation of any kind even after, he said, they had issued ultimatum after ultimatum to Germany.

WANTS BROAD PREPARATION.

He declared for preparation among the industrial and social forces of the country as well as material preparation.

He asserted that a nation that only looked to the garnering of dollars in its industries and paid no heed to the preparation to defend itself did not deserve to live and have a place among the forces of the world that make for humanity's progress.

Another great demonstration followed his declaration that if this nation was forced to "back into war" by the rulers at Washington he and his four sons would go to the war, expecting to sacrifice their lives on the altar of criminal unpreparedness by the rulers.

POINTS ROAD TO SAFETY.

Applying his "pacifist" doctrine, the prevention of war by being prepared to go into war if necessary, he said, throwing his manuscript aside again:

"If in the first week of this war our American navy had been brought together in the Atlantic ocean, set to gun practice, and in other ways displaying its power, do you suppose the Lusitania ever would have been sunk? Not much."

Again he lifted them almost to their feet with this statement:

"Lincoln said this country could not endure half slave and half free. I say to you it cannot endure with a divided allegiance. There can be no divided loyalty in this country. The politico-racial hyphen is the breeder of moral treason."

DEMANDS 250,000 ARMY.

The colonel demanded a standing army of 250,000 men at once, not next June, he said, "but this very week," and declared that it would no more smack of militarism than would the Chicago police force.

Again they were on their feet, when he held up his hand and said solemnly:

"The Monroe doctrine will be no stronger than the American navy."

When the applause subsided he continued:

"I didn't know whether you would like that and I didn't care a dam, for these

COLONEL'S GOSPEL FOR THE NATION

Extracts from Col. Roosevelt's Address Last Night. No pussyfooting.

We must not stand merely for America first. We must stand for America first and last.

There can be no divided loyalty in this country. The politico-racial hyphen is the breeder of moral treason.

If the republic founded by Washington and saved by Lincoln is to be turned into a mere polyglot boarding house, where dollar hunters of twenty different nationalities scramble for gain, each nationality bearing no real allegiance except to the land from which it originally came, then we may as well make up our minds that the great experiment of democratic government on this continent will have failed.

We need beyond everything else a first class navy. . . . The navy should be trained in deep water, in salt water. . . . The Monroe doctrine will never be one particle stronger than our navy.

It is short sighted folly of the most sinister kind not to provide at once for a regular army of 250,000. . . . Relatively to the nation's population this army would be no larger than the police force of Chicago. My proposition no more smacks of militarism than does the Chicago police force.

I believe with all my heart in universal training and universal service, in some modification of the Swiss and Australian systems. Such training would better fit our young men for their life work, make them more valuable socially and industrially. . . . It would be an antiseptic for militarism.

Industrial service also is essential. The need is to educate business firms by small orders in time of peace for the things which the government would need in enormous quantity in time of war.

"MAN WITHOUT A CHANCE," LONG IN PRISON, ASKS JOB.

Convict for 19 Years, Disgusted with Evil Ways, Appeals for Work to Save His Life.

The following letter was received by THE TRIBUNE yesterday. The name and address of the writer are in the possession of the city editor:

"Dear Editor: I am an ex-convict. Have spent about nineteen years of my life in prison. I have finally learned my lesson through the bitterest experience and want to be a better man, but can't get employment. I am desperate, and as a last resort take this means to obtain work.

"Would you not please try to obtain some for me through your columns? What is left for one like me to do if no one will help me? Please help me out of my darkness and don't turn down this favor I ask. I have never yet had a chance. When a child I was cast upon the streets of this city selling newspapers. Dry goods boxes and hallways became my home. I fell in with bad company and thus was led astray.

"O, help me become a better man by granting my request. Am 47 years old, but the wrong life has made me much older, and while I can't do hard work, surely there is something I can do. Am disgusted with the wrong life and employment will save my life."

FEARS TO TELL OF DEATH.

Boy of 7, Finally Coaxed, Admits Missing Brother Slipped Into River.

Antone Palachowski, 9 years old, and his brother Joe, 7 years old, strayed from their home, 1042 Wright street, yesterday and went playing on the bank of the north branch of the river at North avenue and Sweetwood avenue. Joe slipped and fell into the river. Antone ran home. It was some time before his mother could coax him to tell what had happened. The police were notified and dragged the river. The body was found.

SLEUTHS EXPOSE "MUTE" BEGGAR

He Admits He's Ex-Convict; Turned Mendicant to Make Living.

Long experience led Detective Sergeant Michael Hogan to regard with suspicion a man who tapped him on the shoulder yesterday in a Harrison street car and handed him a card which read: "I am deaf and dumb. Please help me."

The detective sergeant observed the man closely as he went among the other passengers distributing the cards, then collecting them and contributions of nickels and dimes. He saw nothing to verify his suspicions, but still the idea that the mute was not all that he pretended to be held him, and as the car reached State street he tapped him on the shoulder and said:

"You Can Talk."

"Come along with me. I think you can talk."

Halfway to the detective bureau they came across Hogan's partner, Detective Sergt. Thomas Stapleton. One look sufficed.

Still the mute protested with his hands.

The Great Idea.

Then Detective Stapleton, after a moment's thought, announced:

"I give up," said the suspect, disgustedly. "I'm Stubbs. I got out of the pen two years ago, after serving a three year bit. I couldn't get a job, and I hit onto this game. There is nothing wrong in it. I was just making enough money to eat."

POLICEMAN RISKED HIS LIFE.

Gets Honorable Mention for Arresting Ex-Convict Who Attacked Druggist.

Honorable mention has been given Policeman William S. Baynes of the North Halsted street station for his work in capturing George Vasiliou, a noted ex-convict, on the night of April 20. Vasiliou had knocked down a druggist at 1832 Wells street and was escaping when Baynes pursued and caught him after the robber had tried to kill the policeman.

POLICE JOIN PURSUIT OF BRIDE AND GROOM.

Reserves on Duty to Guard Roosevelt at Banquet Startled by Woman's Cries for Help.

Last night Theodore Roosevelt was the guest of honor at a banquet on the nineteenth floor of the Hotel La Salle. On the mezzanine floor was a dinner party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Goodell Hill. The bride until last night was Miss Georgine Dyeser of 535 Briar place.

Scattered through the house to guard the sage of Oyster Bay were house officers and policemen aplenty, both "plain and harness," when suddenly from the mezzanine floor resounded an agonized shriek of:

"Help-p! O, help!"

There was a rush for the stairway leading to the mezzanine floor, House Officer Warren leading, with half a dozen policemen following closely.

Members of the Hill wedding party had attempted to kidnap Mrs. Hill. She called for help, the bridegroom responded and tore her away. Then the two were chased downstairs, out into La Salle street, and around the corner, and back to the banquet room again.

And the police! An excited guest ran up to one of them and asked:

"What's the trouble? What's the trouble?"

Gazing at him sternly, the policeman, who is said to be married, replied:

"Trouble? You said it. It's a wedding."

All Members of Cabinet to Have Pictures Hung in City Hall.

Mayor Thompson is proud of his cabinet, both because of the achievements which he attributes to the members, and because of their personal pulchritude.

RUMOR OF VILLA DEATH A FACTOR IN ARMY PARLEY

RESUME AGAIN TODAY.

BULLETIN.

El Paso, Tex., April 29.—A new factor is believed to have been injected into the Scott-Obregon conference over American troop dispositions tonight by the receipt of fresh reports that Francisco Villa is dead.

Mexican Consul Garcia said Col. Carlos Carranza had telegraphed him from Cusihuiriachic that he had been unable to find Villa's body but that he had established beyond dispute that the bandit leader was dead and he hoped to recover the body in a few days.

BY WALTER NOBLE BURNS.

El Paso, Tex., April 29.—[Special.] The first conference between Gens. Scott and Funston, representing the United States, and Gen. Obregon with several aids, as Carranza envoys, over the withdrawal of American troops from Mexico, ended after a two hours' debate without any visible tangible results.

None of those present at the conference would divulge what transpired behind the locked doors of the big green tinted room in the Juarez customs house which Francisco Villa used as his council chamber when he dominated northern Mexico and Juarez was his headquarters.

WELCOME SCOTT AND FUNSTON.

The Mexican conferees were already in the council chamber when Gens. Scott and Funston, with their aids, arrived. Gen. Obregon came to the door and welcomed the Americans. The conference got under way without formality.

Those on the outside had the privilege of viewing the conference by peeking through the windows into the chamber, brilliantly lighted by its cut glass chandeliers.

At the opening of the conference Consul Garcia did all the talking. He talked for half an hour without interruption. Then Gen. Scott took the floor and read from a white piece of paper that looked as if it bore the letter head of a department of the government at Washington. When he had concluded reading he made a few remarks.

FUNSTON IS AROUSED.

Gen. Funston then arose and talked with spirited gestures. After him, Gen. Obregon discussed some question with vigorous gestures of his one arm. A general discussion followed.

Only guesses and surmises can be written of what transpired in that closed room.

Mr. Garcia is believed to have explained to the American generals that Carranza troops were perfectly able to control outlawry in Mexico and in time to capture Villa.

READS WILSON ORDERS.

Gen. Scott in reading from the official looking paper is thought to have set forth the instructions from the United States government under which he and Gen. Funston are acting.

Gen. Funston is believed to have expressed himself in his usual vehement fashion against the withdrawal of the troops. Gen. Obregon is believed to have made as vehement a reply favoring their instant withdrawal.

It is said tonight on what should be good authority that Gen. Obregon demanded the withdrawal of the American troops. Whether he demanded their immediate withdrawal or set a time limit of thirty days or more is not known.

A rumor is current that Gen. Scott is not averse to the withdrawal of the troops and that Gen. Funston is vigorously opposing him.

WILD PREDICTIONS MADE.

Many predictions are being made as to the outcome of the conferences, predictions of the kind of course being wholly imponderable and without value.

One says that if upon Gen. Obregon's demand the American troops are not withdrawn, there will be war between Mexico and the United States.

Another says that if the troops are withdrawn it will increase the contempt in which Mexicans hold gringos and may result in war any way.

The general view is that the troops will not be withdrawn but will be be drawn back from the front to Colonia Dublan and there go into quarters from which they will patrol the country south of the international border, and guard against any more raids like that of Villa at Columbus.

Another Parley Today.

Another conference will be held tomorrow and it is generally believed all questions will be settled by Tuesday at the latest.

After the conference the Mexican generals went into a council that lasted two hours. Those present were: Gens. Obregon, Luis Guitterez of Chihuahua City, Jacinto Trevino of Torreon, Gabriel Gavira of Juarez, Plutarcho Elias Calles of Sonora, Francisco Serrano, Obregon's chief of staff; Frederico Sorriano, Calles' chief of staff; R. Valdez, and José Santos of Vera Cruz.

Returns Courtesy Visit.

Gen. Alvaro Obregon crossed the Rio Grande to the American side today and returned the courtesy visit paid by Gens. Scott and Funston the night before.

The one armed popular hero of Mexico looked finely military in his modest gray uniform without epaulettes or insignia of rank.

If he plans to demand the withdrawal of the American troops within thirty days on penalty of war, his sphinxlike smile did not betray his secret.

He saw a sight in El Paso that might well make him think twice before precipitating war between his country and the United States. He passed through a mile and a half of streets lined with the flower of the American army, representing the three branches of the service, artillery, cavalry, and infantry.

Troops Line Streets.

From the international bridge to Gen. Scott's private car at the Stanton street station of the Southern Pacific road within a stone's throw of the heart of town The organizations consisted of the Fourth The organizations consisted of the fourth and Fifth artillery, Eighth cavalry, Seventh, Twentieth, and Twenty-third infantries. They were as fine a looking body of soldiers, one was ready to believe, as could be found in the world. They were in service equipment with packs on back and saddle and their sabres and rifles brightly burnished and reflecting back the sunlight.

It was a sight to kindle patriotism in the coldest breast to watch the long lines come to "present arms" when Gen. Obregon's carriage hove in sight. A thousand soldiers handled their rifles as one man with machinelike precision.

Look Little Like Soldiers.

He left the custom house in Juarez at 3:30 o'clock. A little Mexican band played "Adelita" in suave, tinkling music suggestive of moonlight and guitars. He entered an automobile and drove to the bridge along the Avenida Laredo through columns of Mexican infantrymen.

Poor, pitiful little peons they were, with their baggy, shapeless uniforms appearing as if they were pinned on with clothespins, handling their rifles with classic clumsiness, looking as much like soldiers as a draft horse looks like a thoroughbred.

A Mexican fife and drum corp that played out of tune saluted Gen. Obregon and his staff as their automobiles bowled upon the Mexican approach of the international bridge. At that point the Mexican minister of war left Mexico and its undrilled, unscientific, unequipped, pathetic little soldiers behind.

In the middle of the bridge Gen. Obregon was met by Gen. Bell. The Mexican general and American general alighted from their automobiles. There above the midcurrent of the Rio Grande, on the exact imaginary boundary between the United States and Mexico, the two generals shook hands and Gen. Obregon was bowed into Gen. Bell's automobile.

As the party drove off the bridge onto American soil, a battery of the Fifth field artillery fired a salute of nineteen guns in honor of Gen. Obregon, and the bands of the Fourth artillery, and Seventh and Twenty-third artillery struck up "Under the Double Eagle."

One hundred picked troopers from the Eighth cavalry fell in about the carriages and through lanes of soldiers the party sped, the cavalry soldiers at a brisk troop or cantering, around Devil's Corner into El Paso street, and so into the main city through Chuhuahuita, that purple patch of Mexico transplanted to this side of the Rio Grande.

"Present arms."

Up and down the avenue as far as the eye could see American soldiers in their clean khaki uniforms obeyed as one man. The sabers of the cavalrymen leaped from their scabbards, flinging off the sun in a million brilliant sparkles. The infantrymen stood like frozen images with their brightly furbished rifles at salute. Artillerymen stood at attention beside their shining cannon.

So Gen. Obregon and his party passed from medieval Mexico and its pitiful little Indian men at arms in five minutes to a great modern nation with real soldiers.

The bridge that crosses the Rio Grande spans a thousand years of civilization. The American army never presented a more spectacularly imposing appearance. If Gen. Obregon was not deeply impressed he is singularly stolid.

EL PASO POLICEMAN ARRESTS MRS. OBREGON FOR SPEEDING IN AUTO

El Paso, Tex., April 29.—Senora Obregon, bride of Carranza's war minister who is here to confer with Gens. Scott and Funston on the withdrawal of American troops from Mexico, was arrested today for speeding in her auto.

Her chauffeur was driving at high speed when a motorcycle policeman overtook the auto and escorted the pilot and Mrs. Obregon to the police station.

The famous Sonora beauty was released when she made her identity known, the chauffeur pleading ignorance of El Paso speed laws.

Villa Bands Broken Up.

Gen. Pershing's Headquarters, Near Namiquipa, Mexico, April 28 [wireless to Columbus, N. M., April 29.]—All fight has been taken out of the Villistas, according to officers of the Seventh cavalry who arrived today at Providencia camp, along the American communication lines. The bandits were hit so hard and so often since the punitive expedition entered Mexico, according to the cavalry officers, that no large group of Villistas remains.

The Carrancistas were credited with having given the Seventh cavalry valuable assistance, and the arrival in the Guerrero district of de facto troops from remote sections who have nothing in common with the Villista sympathizers in the western Chihuahua mountains was counted on to keep the bandits from regathering in large numbers. The last band of any size was shattered by Col. Dodd at Temachic a week ago.

Doubles Mexican Taxes.

Washington, D. C., April 29.—Gen Carranza, it was announced at his embassy today, has issued a decree doubling the amount of taxes of every sort throughout Mexico beginning Monday. The "double tax" will continue in effect until substitution of the new paper currency for the present issue, based on a specific reserve, has been effected.

A second Carranza decree, the embassy was advised, provided restoration of all freight and passenger rates on the National railway to the basis prevailing before the revolution.

WRITER DESCRIBES TERRIFIC STREET FIGHTING AROUND AND IN BURNING BUILDINGS OF DUBLIN

BY SIDNEY B. CAVE.

[London Correspondent New York Sun.]

DUBLIN, April 28, via London, April 29.—"Good luck, gentlemen. I don't know what will become of all of you."

Augustine Birrell, secretary of state for Ireland, thus bade good-by to us early this morning as he climbed up the steep iron ladder leading from the officers' cabin of the British destroyer as it crept slowly alongside the Dublin customs house dock.

The destroyer's three inch gun was trained on a mysterious part of the city from which the clamor of machine gun fire came continually.

On the boat the officers called for firearms, ammunition, and belts. They were taking no chance of a sudden dash from the Sinn Feiners, who had held the city center for three days and nights, one of the most amazing and hardly believed happenings of modern times.

We, as a small party of American and English journalists, had been invited by the British war office to witness at first hand the incredible battle in Dublin city. We were swished across the Irish sea in a British destroyer, which carried the secretary of state for Ireland on his hasty visit to the vice regal lodge to gain personally the details of the great event for the house of commons.

As the destroyer drew up to the side of the dock I could see rising from blocks in the center of the city spiral smoke clouds which marked the destruction by the military of some strongholds of the rebel army. I had seen these clouds miles away, from the sea, the rising sun lighting up the scene with picturesque impressiveness.

Dublin appeared to be a dead city except for these weird evidences of hidden life. It all seemed unreal. The streets, quays, and docks were deserted. Cargo boats with not a sign of life aboard lay moored at the quays. And then as the noise of the ship's engines ceased, from over the butt of the bridge and the back of the famous Liberty hall—now hardly recognized with its smashed roof and battered frontage—came the bang-ping clamor of machine guns and answering rifle fire.

Now a gunboat from the River Liffey is bombarding the high tower of a distillery opposite Northwall station, from which the green flag of the rebels waves and from which snipers are busy. Every street is guarded by soldiers in khaki with fixed bayonets and with bandoliers loaded with ammunition slung over their shoulders. Squads of soldiers patrol every thoroughfare, and at every corner, outlet, and gateway are armed sentries. One cannot walk more than twelve yards alone without being challenged.

Now and again the quiet is broken by a civilian passing along escorted by a couple of armed guards to a place of safety, or a woman out foraging for milk or food under escort, for every street is a dangerous area. Bullets swish along overhead and from the city come bigger crashes of machine and field pieces at work.

In and about midday on Easter Monday, when the revolution began, huge crowds of gayly dressed holiday makers thronged the streets and tram cars and packed jaunting cars and other vehicles were carrying the masses on their way to the Easter race meeting not far from Kingstown.

But observant pedestrians on the outskirts of the city could have noticed an unusually large number of cyclists and others entering from all the approaches and apparently making for one spot. The majority of those were dressed in dark blue uniforms with black shoulder straps, slouch hats, and the familiar uniforms of the Sinn Feiners. Many carried packs and all the usual equipment of soldiers. They were making for the Sackville street district, the Fifth avenue of Dublin city.

Soon the adjoining area around the O'Connell bridge, which practically divides the business portion from the shopping center, was packed with Sinn Feiners, obviously by prearranged planning.

Then suddenly the storm burst. There came shots and the crash of breaking windows; stones hurled through the air; rebel war cries; ugly rushes from all the buildings on Sackville street and adjacent thoroughfares.

Shops and buildings were stormed, rifles appeared from windows and roofs as if by magic, shots sounded, civilians screamed as they scurried for shelter.

It obviously was the intention of the rebels to take possession of as many of the big buildings and hotels as possible in the center of the city before the military arrived. Following out this plan, a party of 400 or 500 made a sudden rush for the general postoffice building on Sackville street.

The rebels swarmed through the doors and windows, smashing and destroying everything in their mad rush. In an incredibly short space of time the postoffice was captured and the Sinn Feiners had commenced to establish themselves against expected attacks.

Boxes of ammunition, provisions, and supplies of all kinds appeared, apparently from nowhere, and soon the building was converted into a comparative fortress. Adjoining this government department stood the Hotel Metropole, an imposing building, fair game, and good hunting for the Sinn Feiners. Simultaneously with the attack on the postoffice many scores stormed the Hotel Metropole, which also was soon in rebel hands. Another good provisioning center was represented in the Hotel Imperial, exactly opposite the postoffice. Similar measures were adopted here. The frightened occupants and staff quickly bundled out and then for some time came the conveying of foodstuffs and drinkables from the hotel to the postoffice.

Simultaneously with the attack on Sackville street and the city center the Sinn Feiners, many hundreds strong, rushed Grafton street, which continues to the south and to St. Stephen's green.

Meanwhile the attack spread to the outlying streets. The rebels occupied many private dwellings, and down by the North Walk jumped Jacobs' biscuit factory, secured the gas works and Boland's flour mills, owned by an Irish member of parliament.

They then debouched to Amiens street railway station of the Great Northern line to Belfast. A strong attempt was made to take the station, but beyond the destruction caused by an attempt to blow up the line with hand made bombs this failed.

On Wednesday field pieces arrived and an attack also was directed on Liberty hall, which the rebels had held from the start, by a gunboat from the river. The first shot took the roof off, the second smashed the entire front. From many buildings the rebels were forced to retire owing to the fierce fire of the troops.

Yesterday afternoon they were forced from Boland's flour mills and biscuit factory, those uninjured making for a big distillery owned by the Dublin Distillery company. This they successfully held. All through the night the guns never ceased. Today strong attacks were made on the postoffice and adjoining strongholds.

From what I have been able to gather from reliable sources no direct attack was made by the rebels upon civilians. But of course in the mad rush and shooting the civilian casualty list is not inconsiderable.

Every soldier apparently was shot at even if walking through the streets unarmed, and men in any sort of uniform, the R. I. C., ambulance corps, etc., were immediately the object of similar attention. Whenever a uniform appeared down the street, ping-ping sang the leaden bullets.

Many soldiers were at once shot dead, many others were seriously injured, and some were taken prisoners by the Sinn Feiners in the postoffice itself, stripped of all their clothes, and thrown into the street.

I am told that nearly all the soldiers' wounds were very bad, for from the booty subsequently captured by the military it was discovered that many of the rifles used by the Sinn Feiners were old twelve bore sporting guns. An officer assured me of the existence of evidence that the ordinary fillings had been taken from cartridges and replaced by jagged pieces of metal, varying from half an inch to three-quarters of an inch long.

One officer had his hand completely blown away by a piece of an iron slug.

Meanwhile the rebels started looting the big shops in the Sackville street neighborhood. Jewelers were the chief sufferers; clothiers, too, and in this I am informed the public joined greatly.

An eyewitness told me that he saw a woman running back to a jeweler's shop from which she had secured a ring to get another because the first did not fit her finger. Another looter, a man, was seen changing his trousers for looted new ones on the curbstone. In fact, there was one mad hour of general looting throughout.

The whole center of the city is on fire, and we are witnessing one of the most remarkable and wonderful sights Ireland ever produced. Huge flames are leaping skyward, fifty feet if an inch; huge, dense masses of black smoke roll slowly over the city. It is a second burning of Rome. The wonder must be seen for fifty miles around probably also from the English coast.

From the roof windows of the hotel the scene is magnificent. A whole block of buildings in Sackville street are blazing. It is impossible to distinguish the exact buildings. Some say the postoffice, the Hotel Metropole, the Coliseum, and the Music hall have gone.

The first started apparently on the south side of the block. Here were a chemist's shop, a photographer's shop, a book establishment, and a jeweler's shop. Some say the Sinn Feiners fired the buildings themselves as they were forced gradually back by the rapid fire of the guns. The roofs are falling and flames shoot up as each fresh smash occurs. Slowly the fire creeps forward up Sackville street, around by the Eden quay and about Bey street.

hundred houses have been demolished.

SCENE OF LAST FIGHTING.

The district to which the last stages of the fighting in Dublin are confined is bounded on the north by the northern part of Sackville street, by Butt bridge on the east, St. Stephen's Green on the southwest, and the Four Courts on the west.

As dusk settled upon the Irish capital last evening the government troops, heavily reinforced, prepared to draw closer and closer around the Sinn Fein strongholds. The firing, which had been only intermittent during the day, increased in violence as the night wore on.

The belief that the rebellion was plotted with the active aid and possibly at the instigation of German government agents became a certainty today. In the immediate neighborhood of a barricade abandoned by the rebels, an ammunition box "made in Germany" was found. It bore German letters and contained rifle ammunition of the latest and most effective type.

Bank Saved by Students.

LIVERPOOL, April 30, 1 a. m.—How Trinity college students saved the Bank of Ireland is told by a resident of Liverpool, who has just arrived from Dublin.

"It was the intention of the Sinn Feiners," he said, "to take this institution and its valuable contents, and a body of rebels came along with the express purpose of putting this intention into execution. Opposite the bank stands famous Trinity college, where an officers' training corps of students is stationed, and the young officers had a warm reception in readiness.

"The rebels came along in great style, anticipating no trouble and shooting down the half dozen soldiers always on guard at the bank. But, as they advanced, there was a rifle volley, and some of the attacking party dropped to the ground.

"The college had been tranformed into a veritable fortress. In the windows were sandbags, loop holed, behind which the officers were waiting to give battle. The insurgents were stupified, and for a moment hesitated as to what they should do. Then several sprang forward, shouting to their comrades, and the rebels pressed on.

"Again came a volley from the windows of Trinity college. More men fell, and the rebels broke in disorder and fled."

BRITISH AT KUT GIVE UP AFTER 143 DAYS' SIEGE

Gen. Townshend and 10,000 Men, Near Starvation, Capitulate.

LONDON, April 29.—The British garrison, numbering nearly 10,000 men, at Kut-el-Amara, Mesopotamia, 105 miles southeast of Bagdad, has surrendered to the Turks, it was officially announced today. The forces surrendering were composed of 2,970 British and 6,000 Indian troops. A Turkish report places the number of British prisoners at 13,300 men.

Gen. Townshend surrendered to the enemy after a siege of 143 days and only after ineffectual attempts had been made to send supplies to his camp. The last failure was chronicled yesterday, when a supply ship went aground in the Tigris within four miles of its destination.

According to the official report all of the garrison's guns and munitions were destroyed before the surrender to the Turks.

REPORT ON KUT SURRENDER.

The official announcement follows:

After a resistance protracted for 143 days and conducted with a gallantry and fortitude that will be forever memorable Gen. Townshend has been compelled by the final exhaustion of his supplies to surrender.

Before doing so he destroyed his guns and munitions.

The force under him consists of 2,970 British troops of all ranks and services and some 6,000 Indian troops and their followers.

The capitulation at Kut-el-Amara is the first instance in the present war and one of the few occasions in more than a century of wars in which a British garrison besieged by the enemy has been forced to surrender.

BAGDAD WAS THE GOAL.

The surrender of Kut closes another phase of the ill fated British campaign in Mesopotamia.

The British campaign, waged along the Tigris from the Persian gulf northward almost to the gates of Bagdad, had as its chief aim the capture of that ancient city. To divert Turkish forces from Gallipoli was another object.

When almost at the point of achieving its main object late last year the effort broke down at Ctesiphon, eighteen miles from Bagdad, when the Turks, alarmed for the safety of the town of fabled memory, rushed up reinforcements, inflicted a defeat upon the British, and compelled their retreat 110 miles down the Tigris to Kut-el-Amara, where the Turks soon had them securely bottled up.

RELIEF ARMY BLOCKED.

Less than twenty miles away, on the banks of the Tigris below the city, is a relief army, which for months had been attempting to reach the besieged forces of Gen. Townshend. A few weeks ago several victories were announced and hope ran high in England that the mission would succeed. Of late, however, the Turks' resistance has increased, and, aided by floods, they have been able to hold the British in check.

No official figures have been given out as to the number of troops which set forth from the Persian gulf in November of 1914 on the expedition which has now ended in surrender. Unofficially, the number has been estimated as high as 50,000, but it was probably considerably smaller than this. This force has suffered heavy losses in severe battles with the Turks.

Bottled Up in December.

It was early in December of last year that the British were beaten at Ctesiphon and retreated to Kut-el-Amara. Since that time it has been besieged by a large army of Turks, cut off from all communication with the outside world, except by wireless.

During the long siege the British beat off many attacks by the Turks. They defended themselves so successfully in encounters about the city that the Turks at length desisted from their efforts to take the place by storm and decided to starve out the British.

From time to time Gen. Townshend sent reports that all was well, but it had been known of late that the situation was becoming a desperate one for the British.

For some time after the Townshend expedition started out from the Persian gulf it was steadily successful. It pushed up the Tigris and Euphrates until, in September of 1915, it defeated the Turks decisively in an encounter at Kut-el-Amara, which later was to be the scene of the British surrender.

British Lose Terrific Battle.

The battle at Ctesiphon was one of the fiercest of the many hard struggles in which the expeditionary force was engaged. The British were said to have been outnumbered six times by the Ottoman troops. Four times Gen. Townshend rallied his men and led them in their charges.

Hardly less desperate a venture was the retreat to Kut-el-Amara which, accomplished under extraordinary disadvantages, was hailed in England as a remarkable achievement. Not only did Gen. Townshend ward off the pursuing Turks with comparatively small losses but he succeeded in taking with him all his wounded.

Throughout the Mesopotamian campaign the fighting has been heavy and the losses severe. On April 14 it was admitted the Tigris army up to that time had lost 8,100 men. Since then there have been several important battles between the Turks and the relief expedition. In one engagement alone at Beitsea, on the right bank of the Tigris, a few miles below Kut-el-Amara, the British lost 4,000, according to an announcement from the Turkish war office last week.

Gives Up When Relief Fails.

Up to the last Gen. Townshend kept alive the hope that he would be relieved. King George sent a message of encouragement to him a month ago, and in a message sent on April 7 the general said he expected to be relieved shortly.

The Mesopotamian campaign has been one of the most difficult the British army has undertaken during the war.

The torrid climate and lack of fresh water, together with the difficulties of transport, made great calls on the endurance of the troops.

Moreover, the positions held by the Turks below Kut-el-Amara, intrenched and strongly fortified, were formidable. The origin of the expedition was composed in part of Indian troops, but the relief force for the most part was made up of men from England and the colonies.

All Germany Rejoices.

BERLIN, April 29.—All Germany tonight is rejoicing over the fall of the British at Kut-el-Amara.

The following are conclusions as to the military, political, and moral effects of the capitulation, as seen by a German military critic:

"Coupled with the victory of the Turks in the immediate vicinity of the Suez canal the capture of Kut-el-Amara gives a decisive turn to the whole military situation in the orient.

"First—It frustrates permanently the plan to incorporate in the British empire Palestine, Syria, and Mesopotamia, the ultimate purpose of which was to connect Egypt with India by changing the connecting territory from hostile into peaceful and subservient people.

"Second—It releases at least two-thirds of the Turkish army, which had been concentrated in Mesopotamia for the aim now attained. Part of the released forces are expected to rush to Anatolia to wrest Trebizond from the Russians and drive the grand duke out of the Anatolian and Armenian Black sea littorals. The remainder will join the Turkish and German forces now operating near Suez and materialize the long heralded plan to invade Egypt.

"Third—The Turks will endeavor immediately to follow up their victory at Kut-el-Amara by engaging the relief force under Gen. Aylmer below Kut-el-Amara, and then to clear the whole of southern Mesopotamia of British forces.

Will Hurt British Prestige.

From a political standpoint, the Turkish success is seen here as a forerunner of the decline of British prestige among the allies. English public opinion, on the other hand, is expected to turn bitterly against Russia for the failure of the Grand Duke Nicholas, after the fall of Erzerum, to drive south against Bagdad, in which he could have been aided by the Russian forces in Persia.

Morally, the fall of Kut-el-Amara is hailed here as having a tremendous inspiration upon the Turkish army, whose spirit has been somewhat dampened by the Russian successes in Armenia and Anatolia. The whole Moslem world, it is believed, will be inspired by the news and the holy war will greatly gain in impetus.

WIMBORNE SAYS REVOLT IS OVER; TROOPS CONTROL

Explains How British Stamped Out Uprising in Dublin and Other Places.

DUBLIN, April 29.—Baron Wimborne lord lieutenant of Ireland, expressed to the Associated Press at the vice regal lodge today the assurance that the seditious movement would be suppressed in the course of a few days. His statement says:

"The outbreak began Monday morning about 11:30 o'clock. About that time information was received that Dublin castle had been attacked, St. Stephen's green occupied, and the post office seized by the rebels. Telephone communication with the Curragh camp was immediately obtained by the authorities, and the reserve troops there were brought to Dublin that night and the following morning.

"Meanwhile, the situation at the castle, which had never been captured by the rebels, was strengthened. The only casualty there was the shooting of a policeman at the gate. A few hours after the outbreak large forces had been assembled in the castle, which, however, was never in real danger.

Only Sniping in Progress.

"On Tuesday morning all the reinforcements we had called from Curragh had reached Dublin, and since that moment the rebels have not attempted anything except sniping from certain localities and houses. It is so easy for them to abandon houses by back doors and to get away to other advantageous positions.

"The military cannot distinguish the rebels from other citizens. Sometimes they leave their houses after hiding their rifles and cartridges and mingle with the ordinary inhabitants. After taking observations of the soldiers' positions, they return to commence sniping again. Most of the houses they occupy they have entered by force and not because the householders sympathized with their movement.

"Since the number of troops has increased, the position of the rebels has remained the same. When their activities at any point become too lively the troops throw a few shells into the houses they occupy and such explosions have caused fires, while other fires have been started by the rebels themselves.

Linen Hall Barracks Burned.

"The rebels had barricaded Sackville street and are in possession of all the houses there, but they were shelled out of Liberty hall by a gunboat on Tuesday and we occupied their headquarters immediately. They burned Linen hall barracks, and other small fires have occurred.

"Everything done has been carried out according to plans. A big cordon has been drawn all around Dublin and shorter cordons around the inner districts.

"Regarding the situation in the provinces on the whole, it is good. Fighting occurred in Galway, near Athenry, where the police are now in possession of the town, but the rebels are encamped in a ruined castle. There also has been fighting in a Galway town, which the rebels attacked and compelled us to land men from the fleet to support the military.

"Encounters took place at Enniscorthy, County Wexford, and there were certain rebellious assemblages in Meath and Louth, but on the whole reports are quiet. This applies also to Cork, Limerick, Kerry, Clare, Kilkenny, Mayo, Sligo, Tipperary, Leitrim, Kildare, Roscommon, and all of Ulster."

AUTO STALLED ON TRACK SMASHED BY FAST TRAIN.

Occupants Saved by Leaping When Crossing Flagman Warns Them of Oncoming Engine.

Three persons narrowly escaped death at 5:30 p. m. yesterday when they leaped from an automobile the engine of which stalled in front of a west bound Burlington passenger train at the Home avenue crossing, Berwyn. The automobile was struck by the train and demolished.

The automobile was owned by Fred J. Reynolds, 3200 Iverson avenue, a salesman employed by Armour & Co. It was being driven south in Home avenue by Lorin Fillmore, 16 years old, also of Berwyn. Mr. Reynolds' son John, 6 years old, was the third passenger.

The car stopped in the center of the railroad tracks. The oncoming passenger train was not noticed by the occupants of the car until F. A. Johnson, gateman at the crossing, shouted.

Reynolds threw his son out of danger and then leaped. Fillmore jumped from the chauffeur's seat just a second before the automobile was splintered.

The engineer put on the emergency brakes. The train stopped two blocks farther along.

Mrs. Delia Feehan, 1116 North Franklin street, received a probable skull fracture last night when she was struck by an automobile owned and driven by William Beck, 1440 Larrabee street, at West Division and North Franklin streets.

WILSONS TAKE MOTOR TRIP.

Washington D. C., April 29.—President Wilson motored to Harper's Ferry, W. Va. seventy-five miles away, late today and took dinner at an inn overlooking the Potomac and Shenandoah rivers. He was accompanied by Mrs. Wilson, Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, his cousin, and five secret service men. The president and Mrs. Wilson visited the same inn shortly before their marriage, and when their automobile passed through Harper's Ferry today they were recognized by many people. They returned here late tonight.

BRITISH CABINET HOLDS MEETING; CRISIS RUMORED

Saturday Session, Hitherto Unknown, Leads to Report of New Dissension.

LONDON, April 29.—The cabinet met unexpectedly this morning, causing the circulation of most sensational rumors in view of the fact that ministerial meetings are never held on Saturday. The meeting was at once connected with King George's conference with Premier Asquith and Lord Kitchener yesterday afternoon and the reports of a new cabinet crisis.

The Daily News declared editorially today that the country is face to face with "the gravest crisis that has arisen since the war began."

"The prime minister withdrew the new service bill after a discussion which served only to reveal that every man's hand was against it," said the News. "The elaborate compromise on conscription has broken down at the first trial and the very existence of the government may conceivably be imperiled by a controversy which is in itself wholly artificial."

COL. ROOSEVELT FLAILS HYPHENATES AS MORAL TRAITORS TO UNITED STATES

UNITE! PREPARE! T. R. TO NATION IN CHICAGO TALK

Colonel for America First and Last, He Declares to Lawyers.

things have got to be said. We must tell the truth now of all times."

In the nearly two hours that Col. Roosevelt hammered for preparedness, against the pacifists, the peace at any price forces, he was listened to by one of the most representative audiences of the state and Chicago.

CHEERS EAR SPLITTING.

In the big audience were prominent lawyers from nearly all of the larger cities of Illinois, together with many Circuit court judges and professional men and merchants. At the close of the speech some one yelled out:

"Three cheers for Gov. Dunne."

The governor smiled while three faint cheers were given. Then another lawyer yelled:

"Three cheers for Roosevelt!"

The yells that then followed were ear splitting.

Col. Roosevelt will attend the Fourth Presbyterian church on Lincoln parkway this morning, and then will go to the home of Harold L. Ickes in Hubbard Woods for a private dinner and conference. He will issue a statement today on the national political situation.

He will start back for New York at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon.

THE COLONEL'S SPEECH

The colonel's formal speech of the day was delivered at the bar association banquet in the evening. Col. Roosevelt said:

"A year and three-quarters have passed since the opening of the great war. That war has been waged on a more colossal scale than ever before in the world's history; and cynical indifference to international morality and willingness to trample on inoffensive, peace loving peoples who are also helpless or timid have been shown on a greater scale than since the close of the Napoleonic wars over a century ago.

"Alone of the great powers, we have not been drawn into this struggle. A twofold duty was imposed upon us by the fact of our prosperity and by the fact of our momentary immunity from danger. This twofold duty was first, to make our voice felt for the weak who had been wronged by the strong and for international humanity and honor and for peace on terms of justice for all concerned; and, second, immediately, and in thoroughgoing fashion to prepare ourselves so that there might not befall us on an even greater scale such a disaster as befell Belgium.

FAIL IN OUR DUTIES.

"We have signally failed in both duties. Incredible to relate, we are not in any substantial respect stronger at this moment in soldiers or rifles, in seamen or ships, because of any governmental action taken in consequence of this war; and moreover, we have seen every device and provision designed by humanitarians to protect international right against international wrongdoing torn into shreds and have not so much as ventured to speak effectively one word of protest. The result is that every nation in the world now realizes our weakness and that no nation in the world believes in either our disinterestedness or our manliness.

"The effort to placate outside nations by being neutral between right and wrong, and to gain good will along professional pacifist lines by remaining helpless for self-defense, has resulted, after two fatuous years, in so shaping affairs that the nations either already feel, or are rapidly growing to feel for us, not only dislike but contempt.

"This is not a pleasant truth, but it is the truth; and as a people we will do well to remember Emerson's saying that in the long run the most unpleasant truth is a safer traveling companion than the pleasantest falsehood. Our duty is to face the facts and then to take the thoroughgoing action necessary in order to meet the situation that these facts disclose.

"Our prime duty, infinitely our most important duty, is the duty of preparedness. Unless we prepare in advance we cannot when the crisis comes be true to ourselves. If we cannot be true to ourselves, it is absolutely certain that we shall be false to every one else. If we are not able to safeguard our own national honor and interest, we shall make ourselves an object of scorn and derision if we try to stand up for the rights of others.

"There are persons in this country who openly advocate our taking the position that China holds, the position from which the best and wisest Chinamen are now painfully trying to raise their land. Nothing that I can say will influence the men and women who take this view. The holding of such a view is entirely incompatible with the right to exercise the privileges of self-government in a democracy, for self-government cannot permanently exist among people incapable of self-defense.

OBJECT TO CHINAFICATION.

"But I believe that the great majority of my fellow countrymen, when they finally take the trouble to think on the problem at all, will refuse to consent to or acquiesce in the Chinafication of this country. I believe that they will refuse to follow those who would make right helpless before might, who would put a pigtail on Uncle Sam, and turn the Goddess of Liberty into a pacifist female huckster, clutching a bag of dollars which she has not the courage to guard against aggression. It is to these men and women that I speak.

"I speak to the mass of my fellow countrymen. I speak to all men and women who are loyal to the principles of those who in the revolutionary war made us a nation, and who have in their souls the high qualities possessed by the men who in the iron days of the civil war followed the banners of Grant and of Lee, and of the mothers and wives of these men.

"My appeal may not be heeded. If so, then either the people will pay heed in time to the appeal of some other man, able to speak more strongly and more convincingly, or else they will when it is too late learn the lesson from some terrible gospel in which it is written by an alien conqueror in letters of steel and of flame.

"The first necessity is that we shall in good faith and without reservation undertake to be a nation, and not merely to call ourselves a nation. I make my especial appeal to the national spirit here in Chicago, here in the great middle west, here in the territory stretching from the Alleghanies to the Rockies.

"The prophets of gloom have said that the west, prosperous and indifferent, secure in her fancied safety because she is in the middle of the continent, cares nothing of the dangers that might befall the cities on the Atlantic or the Pacific coast, cares nothing for what has befallen the dwellers along the Mexican boundary, and is as indifferent to what befalls elsewhere as Peking once was to what befell its outlying Chinese provinces—to the ultimate ruin of Peking, by the way. This I do not for one moment believe. If I did, I should despair of the republic. This is to a peculiar degree the democratic, the intensely and characteristically American, section of our land.

POLYGLOT BOARDING HOUSES.

"If the republic founded by Washington and saved by Lincoln is to be turned into a mere polyglot boarding house, where dollar hunters of twenty different nationalities scramble for gain, each nationality bearing no real allegiance except to the land from which it originally came, then we may as well make up our minds that the great experiment of democratic government on this continent will have failed. No less will it have failed if each section thinks only of the welfare of that section and with crass blindness believes that disaster to some other section will not affect it.

"I appeal to the men of the east to prepare so that the men of the Pacific slope shall be free from all menace of danger. I appeal to the men of the west to prepare so that the men of the Atlantic coast shall be free from all danger. I appeal to the north, south, west, and east alike to hold the life of every man and the honor of every woman on the most remote ranch on the Mexican border as a sacred trust, to be guaranteed by the might of our entire nation—and the life of every man, woman, and child who should be protected by the United States on the high seas likewise.

"I speak of the United States as a whole. We must not stand merely for America first. We must stand for America first and last; and for no other nation second—except as we stand for fair play for all nations. There can be no divided loyalty in this country. The man who tries to be loyal to this country and also to some other country is certain in the end to put his loyalty to the other country ahead of his loyalty to this.

"The politico-racial hyphen is the breeder of moral treason. We are a new nation, by blood akin to but different from all the nations of Europe. In the veins of our people runs the blood of German, Englishman, and Irishman, of Scandinavian, Slav, and Latin. Any one of these people can bring something of value to our common national life. Each can contribute social and cultural traditions and customs of value; and all must join in cordial mutuality of respect for whatever is valuable that each brings; but each must put the contribution at the service of our common and unified citizenship, and by utilizing all that is thus contributed, and by adapting and developing it so that it shall meet and express our common needs, we shall build our own distinctive national culture.

"There is no room in this country for German-Americans or English-Americans, Irish-Americans, or French-Americans; just as there is no room in this country for a political party based upon fealty or opposition to any particular creed, whether Protestant, Catholic, or Jew. There is just one way to be a good citizen of the United States, and that is to be an American and nothing else.

"Preparedness must be both of the soul and of the body. It must be not only military but industrial and social. There can be no efficient preparedness against war unless there is in time of peace economic and spiritual preparedness in the things of peace. Well meaning men continually forget this interdependence. Well meaning men continually speak as if efficient military preparedness could be achieved out of industrial and social chaos, whereas such military preparedness would represent merely a muscular arm on a withered body. Other well meaning people speak as if industrial preparedness, social preparedness, would by itself solve the problem.

THE FATE OF BELGIUM.

"This is worse folly than the first. Let these men look at Belgium and compare her fate with that of Switzerland. Belgium was one of the countries in Europe in which the greatest advance had been made in industrial efficiency and as regards social justice she was at least well ahead of us. But there had been no corresponding military preparedness. There had been great success along the lines of business materialism, great success along the lines of humanitarianism, but no development of military efficiency. The result is that both the materialist and the humanitarian have been ground into the dust together, simply because the men so successful in peace have not in peace trained themselves so as to be able to defend themselves in war, and to make other nations realize in advance that they were able to do so.

"I have before used the effect of nonpreparedness on China as an argument for preparedness. Really the events of the last twenty-one months, including especially the events of the last month, show that no argument is needed save our own history during these last twenty-one months. On Aug. 1, 1914, the great war began; and it had already become clear that the already dreadful situation in Mexico was going steadily from bad to worse.

THE CASE OF MEXICO.

"It should have been perceptible to any nation—and it is not to our credit as a nation that it was not evident to us—that there was the gravest danger of our being involved at some point with the European belligerents and the almost certainty that we would have to take action sooner or later as regards Mexico. Even the first few weeks of the great war made it evident that the prime factor in success in war was preparedness in advance and that it was impossible adequately to prepare after war had begun. Yet our well meaning, foolish, peace-at-any-price people clamored so loudly that we must not prepare because preparedness would increase the chances of war that we followed their advice.

"Then after six months Germany announced that she would conduct a submarine blockade of England under circumstances which rendered inevitable the loss of American lives. We sent her an ultimatum announcing that in such case we would hold her to a strict accountability. I use the word 'ultimatum,' for it is the only word to describe the document containing the words 'strict accountability,' if these words mean anything. When we took that action we placed ourselves in a position where it became a crime against ourselves not immediately to prepare.

"Fourteen months have passed since. Germany has again and again done what we said she should not do. We have protested, sometimes strongly, sometimes weakly, against what has been done; but we never took a single step in the way of preparation to enforce our words if, unhappily, it should become necessary to do so. At present we have sent another ultimatum to Germany, stronger than the one sent fourteen months ago, but the circumstances of its delivery are such as to seem to indicate that more weight must be attached to it. Yet we are still not preparing in any way.

"The lower house of congress has taken what measures it could to interfere with the organizations on which we should have to rely in any belated and hurried efforts to meet our needs should we have to act in support of our note, and has passed legislation excellently designed to prevent all efficiency from the military standpoint.

THE PENALTY.

"At this moment, after nearly six weeks of effort, we have been unable to scrape together an army sufficient to capture the bandit Villa. We have not an efficient body of troops of a size that would make it a tangible asset in the huge death wrestle that is going on around Verdun. We have not in these twenty-one months prepared in any shape or way to make good on any field of action any demand we might make for our own rights or the rights of humanity.

"If we meant what we said in our strict accountability note fourteen months ago, then we have followed a policy both wicked and cruel in its neglect of the lives of our men, women, and children by deliberately refusing to follow up any program of preparedness, whether with our army, our navy, or our industries. Now if under these circumstances war does come, all of the men who think as I do will stand promptly by the country. We will go to the war, but we shall expect to pay a heavy penalty with our own blood and the blood of those dearest to us for the failure to prepare during the last twenty-one months.

WAY TO AVERT WAR.

"And what I ask now of our professional peace at any price friends, of the professional pacifists, is that they get clearly in mind the fact that the preparedness I, whom they call a militarist, have unceasingly advocated for so many years and above all the preparedness that I have advocated with all my strength since this great war began, would in all probability have averted all need of our sending the strict accountability note fourteen months ago. If now there is no war, it will be proof positive that if fourteen months ago we had made it evident that we meant what we said Germany would have abandoned her submarine policy and the lives of thousands of noncombatants, including many hundreds of women and children, would have been saved, so that their blood is at our doors because we failed, when we sent that note, to show that we meant what we said.

"If, on the other hand, war does come, it will be a cruel and a dreadful thing that, having had the amplest opportunity and time to prepare for it on the largest scale, we drifted into it sternforemost, having shown ourselves helplessly unable to provide in the smallest degree to make our vast strength effective.

BIG NAVY CHIEF NEED.

"We need beyond everything else a first class navy. We cannot possibly get it unless the naval program is handled with steady wisdom from the standpoint of a nation that accepts the upbuilding and upkeep of such a navy as cardinal points of continuous policy. There should be no party division along these lines. The navy should be trained in deep water, in salt water; and it should be trained always with one end in view, to increase its fighting efficiency.

"It is not an educational institution. It is Uncle Sam's right arm of defense; and that arm is meant to hold the sword and not the pen. The minute the effort is made to turn a battleship into an ambulatory schoolhouse, we spoil the battleship without getting the schoolhouse. The minute we fail to treat the navy as the one most vitally important international asset of the nation, which it is imperatively necessary to keep to the highest standard of efficiency, disregarding all other matters in connection therewith, that very minute we lay the seeds for the conditions which result in submarines that cannot go under water and aeroplanes that do not fly. The navy is by no means all-sufficient, but the special part it plays is of more importance even than the very important parts to be played by other arms.

"It is a prime necessity for any great nation which expects to be taken seriously always to correlate policy and armament. There never should be a treaty made or a policy announced save after careful consideration whether our prepared strength is sufficient to make that treaty respected or that policy observed. The Monroe doctrine will never be one particle stronger than the navy. Our hold on the canal, our power of protecting our own citizens abroad and defending our own coasts, all these depend upon other considerations also; but among the various vital factors, none of which can be neglected, the navy stands foremost.

ARMY UTTERLY INADEQUATE.

"The regular army is indispensable. Surely the utter inadequacy of our army must have been made evident to every thinking man by what has occurred on the Mexican border. After tame submission to innumerable injuries, one bandit raid was so flagrant that our army followed the raiders. The army was in such condition that the immediate pursuit which would have insured prompt success could not be undertaken and after over a month had passed by and after well nigh our entire mobile army had been called upon we were still entirely unable to deal adequately with the situation.

"Remember that a month covered the time from the opening of the great European war to the battle of the Marne. Remember that if a disaster happened to our navy a month would be sufficient for any one of several of the old world military powers, without subtracting from its army a force whose loss would be in any way felt at home, to land in San Francisco or New York a force five times as great as our mobile army. In actual practice we have been unable within six weeks to gather enough troops to cope with the situation created by Villa's raid.

WANTS ARMY OF 250,000.

"Think deeply, friends, what this means and the impotence it reveals for meeting any kind of serious assault made on our shores by any military power of the old world; and remember that this war has shown that save in the teeth of a navy of great size and at the highest point of efficiency the ocean is a highway for the rapid transport of troops. It is short sighted folly of the most sinister kind not to provide at once, immediately, for a regular army of a quarter of a million men, in order that we shall have within our own limits a mobile army of 125,000 men so constantly trained and maneuvered that inside of a week they could be concentrated in the highest condition of fighting efficiency at any point of our border or coast line.

"Relatively to the population of the country, this army would be no larger than the Chicago police force is to the city of Chicago. My proposition no more smacks of militarism than does the Chicago police force. I am asking only for a small regular army which shall be first class in point of efficiency.

THE HALF-WAY FAILURE.

"Remember always that there is no real value to half preparedness. To prepare a little but not very much is just like trying to put out a fire a little but not a great deal. If you want to build a bridge across a river, you build it for the whole distance. If you only build it half way, you might as well leave it unbuilt. To increase the armed forces of the nation a little, but not much, leaves the situation, from the standpoint of national defense, practically unchanged. The advocates of half preparedness are no more loyal to the interests of this country than are the advocates of unpreparedness.

LIKE FIRE INSURANCE.

"Preparedness is like fire insurance. There are individuals so wicked that they insure their houses for the purpose of setting fire to them. Likewise there are nations which prepare in order to commit aggressions on other nations. But the first fact does not alter the desirability of fire insurance for honest men, nor does the second fact alter the desirability of preparedness for self-defense on the part of peaceful and well behaved nations.

"The preparedness of a big, highly efficient navy and a small, highly efficient regular army will meet our immediate needs and can be immediately undertaken. But ultimately and to meet our permanent needs I believe with all my heart in universal training and universal service on some modification of the Swiss and Australian systems, adapted to the needs of our American life. Such training would not merely, indeed perhaps not primarily, be of benefit from the military standpoint, although the good from this standpoint would be inestimable; it would not take our young men away from their life work; it would, on the contrary, help to fit them for their life work, make them more valuable socially and industrially, train them to order, discipline, the power to enjoy and make use of self-respecting liberty, the power to coöperate with their fellows.

ANTISEPTIC FOR MILITARISM.

"It would be an antiseptic to militarism; for Switzerland and Australia are the least militaristic and most democratic of commonwealths. It would be done in the schools and then by four to six months' work in the field when they leave the schools. It would mean only extending the system already admirably applied in Wyoming. With such a system we should be guaranteed forever against the kind of conflict which is known as a rich man's war and a poor man's fight. We should never have a war unless the people who were to fight it deliberately determined upon it. It would be a war waged by the people for the people.

"As I have said again and again, and as I cannot too often repeat, I advocate this preparedness as a means to secure peace and to avoid war. A good mother wrote me the other day that she feared preparedness because she did not wish her boys "to go up against the cannon." Now, the one perfectly certain method of insuring that her boys and all the other boys in this country shall "go up against the cannon" is to persuade foreign powers that they can attack us with impunity, because our mothers have refused to let their boys be trained efficiently.

ALL ROOSEVELTS READY.

"I abhor unjust and wanton war. More than that, if there were a great war my sons would go, and probably all my young kinsfolk would go. If the war became serious enough I would have to go. It would be the bitterest grief to me to see my sons go, as every father here will understand. All that I honorably could do would be done to help keep this country out of war, so that my sons would not have to go. But I would far rather have them go than have them stay at home under conditions which would make their children ashamed of them and ashamed of being Americans.

"We stand for the peace which comes as a matter of right to the just man armed and not for the peace which is purchased by the coward at the cost of abject submission to wrong. The peace of cowardice ultimately leads to war as the end of a record of shame.

INDUSTRIAL SERVICE.

"Industrial service is essential. There can be no full preparation for military service unless there is industrial preparation. Unless our industries are highly efficient and, moreover, are trained for this particular work in advance, the penalty will inevitably be paid in the shape of dreadful loss of life among our soldiers. Such a need cannot be met by government owned and managed plants, although there should be some such to serve as checks and regulators.

"What we need is some organization of our industries along the lines of Germany. In times of peace German manufacturing plants had blueprints and machinery to make shells. They made perhaps only ten shells a year, but these were turned over to the military authorities and subjected to thorough tests. Then when war came they were able to turn out first class shells, while factories in England and America not only turned out shells at a much slower rate but the shells were no good after manufactured.

"The need is to train, to educate many business firms by means of giving them small orders in times of peace for the various things which the government would need in enormous quantities in time of war. There should be a survey of the producing resources of the country and the development and practical working out in time of peace of plans for minimum annual educational orders to be placed by the army and the navy with thousands of firms widely distributed geographically, and the enrollment in time of peace of the skilled labor which it is necessary to keep on the job in time of war.

CO-OPERATION GREAT SCHEME.

"We can have no national economic program until we make ourselves really a nation. National needs cannot be met by conflicting locality actions. This is the age of coöperation. Let the government regulate the corporations; but let this regulation be an incident of hearty coöperation with them, to secure their well-being and also the well-being of those who work for them and of those for whom they work. Capital much be organized on a large scale just as labor must be organized on a large scale; but both forms of organization must justify themselves by showing that they are not only beneficial to themselves but to the people as a whole.

"No form of government will survive unless it can justify its existence. Boasting about democracy won't make democracy succeed. We are the greatest democratic republic, and we are false not only to our own country but to democracy everywhere if we do not seriously endeavor to show by our actions and success that with us the many men can make a nation as efficient as elsewhere nations have been made efficient by a few men.

AMERICANISM ON TRIAL.

"We must not only do away with sectionalism but we must see that our land really is a melting pot of citizenship and that all peoples who come here become Americans and nothing else. Americanism is on trial. If we produce merely the self-seeking, ease loving, duty shirking man, whether he be a mere materialist or a mere silly sentimentalist; if we produce only the Americanism of the grafter and the mollycoddle and the safety first, get rich quick, peace at any price man, we will have produced an American faithful only to the spirit of the Tories of 1776 and the Copperheads of 1861 and fit only to vanish from the earth.

"In this tremendous crisis of the world, if we think we can sit apart, do nothing, utter lofty platitudes, and devote ourselves only to money making, we shall surely go down with a crash. I ask you of the west to take the lead in the effort for a robust and virile nationalism, fit and ready to cope with all possible dangers at home and abroad. I appeal to the spirit of sane common sense which faces things as they practically are, and I appeal also to that spirit of idealism which sees a great goal and struggles toward that goal. I ask for military preparedness as an arm to help the soul of the nation. I ask for it to quicken the national conscience, to help the national discipline. I ask that we prepare ourselves within; and we cannot prepare ourselves within unless we also prepare against danger from without.

A CASE OF SECURITY.

"You hate the waste and blood spilling of war. So do I. The most lamentable of all the tragedies connected with blood spilling is the spilling of the blood of brave men too late to secure the end for which the blood is spilt. Under such conditions there is no chance of triumph; the dreadful choice is between dying hopelessly for the right and yielding abjectly to triumphant iniquity.

"May we so act in the present that neither we ourselves nor our children's children shall ever in the future have to face so evil an alternative. I ask you to prepare so that we may secure peace for ourselves and for others, not the peace of cowardice nor the peace of selfishness, but the peace of righteousness and of justice, the peace of brave men pledged to the service of this mighty democratic republic, and through that service pledged also to the service of the world at large."

"HELP NOMINATE ROOSEVELT!"

Progressive National Convention Committee Wants Name and Active Co-operation of Every Supporter of Colonel in the Nation.

An appeal to the public from the Progressive national convention committee was issued yesterday. It took the form of a statement to the Roosevelt voters of America and in part it said:

"The coming of Roosevelt to Chicago at this time of unprecedented international crisis arouses our sense of patriotic concern to the responsibility that resides with us here in the central and western states, as well as in the east, with reference to the conduct of our national affairs.

"Excepting in the days of our civil and revolutionary wars the United States government has never been so seriously tried as at the present moment. As if to aggravate the situation, we are approaching a national election. The sacred duty of citizenship demands that every voter gives to his government and to posterity, on this occasion, the best judgment of which he may be capable.

The Man of the Hour.

As to the present Democratic administration we have nothing to say. Its own work and policies speak for it. We are approaching a date on which the people of this country must select a man to assume for another four years the management of these United States. Those of us who have helped to establish and perpetuate the policies of such administrations as those of Lincoln, McKinley, and Roosevelt are firm in the conviction that only through the policies of these able statesmen can our country hope to retain the respect and high position to which it has so successfully aspired.

"Today we have living but one man of this trio of great leaders — Theodore Roosevelt. True to our heritage and to his political faith, Roosevelt stands prepared to champion the rights of a citizen or the principles of a government. Always fearless in his leadership and determined in a fight for right, he stands politically without a peer in the world.

Colonel Could Settle War.

"As president of the United States his dominating influence would soon settle the terrible war of Europe. For this service alone the people of the United States should elect Roosevelt to the next term in the White House. He is was who while president stopped the Russo-Japanese war, and through his own initiative. In recognition of his great services in this affair and for his strong proclivities to peace (not war) he was honored with the Nobel peace prize.

"In his every deed, domestic or foreign, he has stood always as the personification of righteousness and the one man in millions who irrespective of consequences to his personal ambitions dared to defend and test his convictions. He has made mistakes, but 'to err is human.'

Appeal to the Public.

"The members of this committee believe it to be their duty to do all in their power to promote and insure the nomination and election of Theodore Roosevelt to the presidency of the United States.

"Firmly convinced of this civic obligation they proceed, having a clear conviction that the people of this country are demanding an executive of the Rooseveltian type pand caliber.

"This committee appeals to the press of the country and to the higher citizenship for coöperation, active interest, and support in behalf of Roosevelt.

"We especially ask the newspapers, in small as well as in large cities, that are favorable to our candidate and also those papers whose editors may be indifferent to the man but liberal enough to concede his merits, we ask all of these to announce and pass along the text or purport of this message.

Send in Your Name.

"If possible to get it, we want a personal letter from every Roosevelt supporter in the United States. We want organization in every precinct, in every community, in every village, and to get this and maintain it we must have names and addresses.

"Let every Roosevelt man from the Atlantic to the Pacific who may read this message send his name to the chairman of this committee at once. We want to address you on the political issues of the day. We want to create a nation-wide atmosphere favorable to the nomination and election of Theodore Roosevelt as the next president of the United States."

The appeal is signed by Lawrence Heyworth, chairman; Frederick C. Bartlett, C. S. Peterson, James L. Houghteling Jr., and La Verne W. Noyes.

Kingsbury PIANOS
Are Greatly Under-Priced
The Reason:
We are not only the distributors but the makers, and the Kingsbury is unquestionably our "Leader" style.

Into this instrument we have concentrated all the over-value that —great output,
—superior manufacturing facilities,
—and tremendous buying power can attain.

It is the staple, standard piano of a great line, so well made and so conservatively priced as to win the widest circle of admirers.

Sweeter tone, greater durability, more lustrous finish you'll not find in instruments costing $75 more. A strong statement but we stand ready to convince you of its truth. Kingsbury Pianos are sold on our Easy Payment Plan. Come in TODAY or write for free catalog.

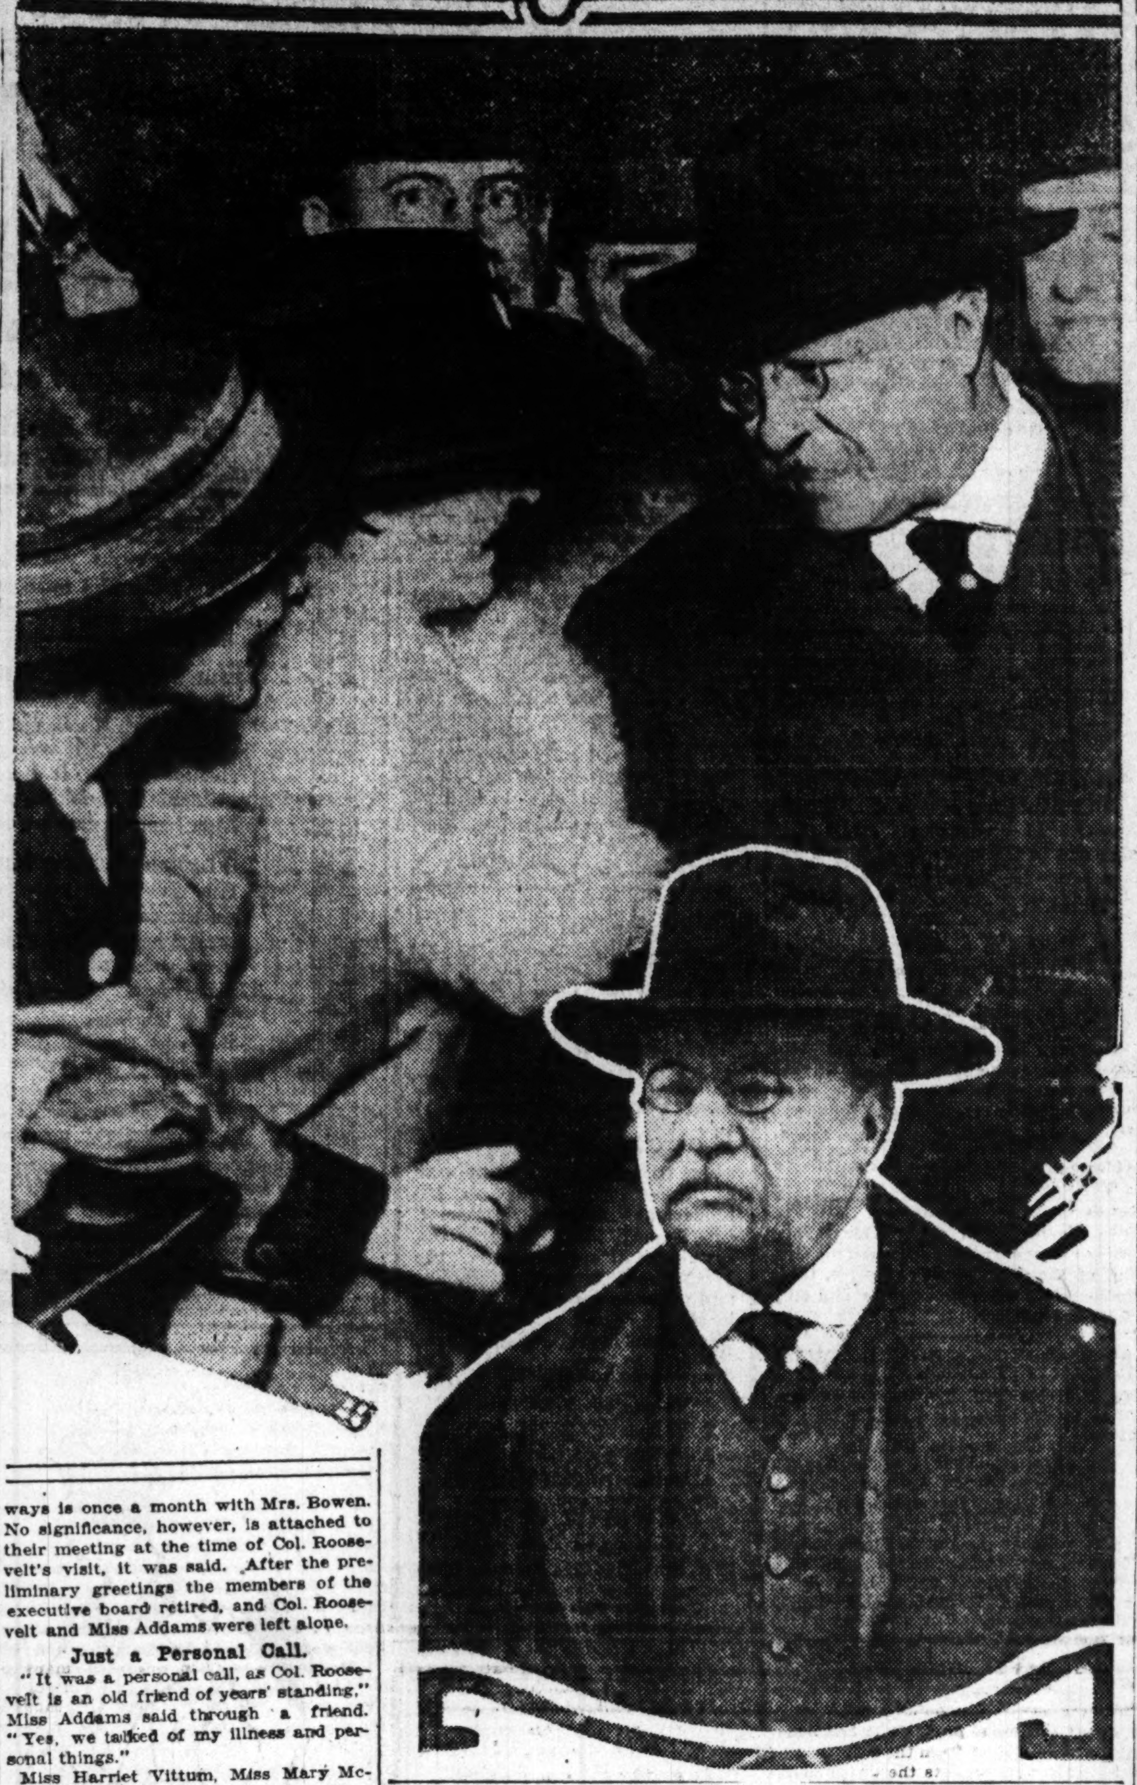
THE COLONEL IN CHICAGO

Friends and Admirers—Men and Women—Greet Roosevelt Upon His Arrival.



WE WANT TEDDY! REFRAIN ALL DAY FOR THE COLONEL

Noisy Welcome Greets Roosevelt Wherever He Appears in Chicago.

Col. Roosevelt was extended a noisy welcome upon his arrival in Chicago yesterday.

It was not merely an ovation at the railway station, but the enthusiasm for him was evidenced all through the day whenever he showed himself to the crowds.

A jostling throng packed the La Salle depot to welcome him and it looked like the old days when he was either president or a candidate.

"We Want Teddy," They Cry.

"We want Teddy," shouted the crowd as he stepped from his car, beaming and robust.

All the while he elbowed his way through the crowd the shouting continued:

"We want Teddy."

This was the ceaseless cadence that swept the Republican national convention of 1912 for days before Col. Roosevelt finally was eliminated.

Harold L. Ickes, chairman of the Illinois Progressive committee; John C. Shaffer, City Clerk John Simon, City Treasurer Sergel, and other friends were among the reception committee that formally bade the colonel a welcome to the city.

Speaks at Luncheon.

After a rest and informal reception at the Hotel La Salle the colonel went to the University club for luncheon. He made an informal talk in which he discussed particularly the hyphen.

He stated, for one thing, that foreigners who come to this country with the intention of remaining here and having their children marry "our children" have but one loyalty and that is to the United States. Such persons, he said, who hold to any other allegiance are traitors to the United States and should be treated as such.

An enormous crowd waited for an hour out in Monroe street to get a glimpse of the colonel as he was to leave for a short automobile trip. The crowd packed the street from Wabash to Michigan avenue and it was with difficulty that the police cleared a way for his automobile.

"Here he comes!" they shouted as he emerged from the entrance, smiling and raising his hand in a gesture of greeting. Then they cheered and shouted again: "We want Teddy!"

A Visit to Astor Street.

Two motorcyclists turning a curve first announced that a visitor of importance was entering Astor street a little later. "Hey, here comes Teddy!" from the lips of a small boy was the second signal down the aisle of mansions, and the residents of this proud and silent thoroughfare even stepped out to see—from their doorsteps—an ex-president.

Col. Roosevelt and his entertainment committee followed the escort swiftly around the curve. They left their automobile before Mrs. Joseph Tilton Bowen's residence at 1430 Astor street, while cameras were snapping and the crowds gathered.

A young woman in a bridal veil was too preoccupied to join the watchers. She sped by in a carriage on the opposite side of the street.

Calls on Miss Addams.

Col. Roosevelt, with his most dee-lighted smile, was paying a visit of friendship to Miss Jane Addams, who is convalescing from a long illness in Mrs. Bowen's home. Miss Addams, in a tea gown of gray silk, was up to meet her distinguished guest, though somewhat pale and weak.

The executive board of the Woman's City club was in session there, as it always is once a month with Mrs. Bowen. No significance, however, is attached to their meeting at the time of Col. Roosevelt's visit, it was said. After the preliminary greetings the members of the executive board retired, and Col. Roosevelt and Miss Addams were left alone.

Just a Personal Call.

"It was a personal call, as Col. Roosevelt is an old friend of years' standing," Miss Addams said through a friend. "Yes, we talked of my illness and personal things."

Miss Harriet Vittum, Miss Mary McDowell, Mrs. James Houghteling, Mrs. Treat Campbell, Mrs. Charles F. Harding, and Mrs. Frederic C. Bartlett, besides Mrs. Bowen, were the members of the executive board present.

In 1912 Miss Addams was one of Roosevelt's supporters. She spoke throughout the country in his behalf.

Since the European war, however, Col. Roosevelt has dealt severely with the pacifists, of whom Miss Addams has been one of the leaders—so much so that Miss Addams was impelled to express her regreat at Roosevelt's "militarism."

Now that she is ill, however, the colonel asked that he be taken to her that he might personally express his regret and wish her a speedy recovery.

Praises President James.

One of the colonel's first actions upon arriving at the hotel was to applaud the work of President Edmund J. James, president of the University of Illinois.

"Every American owes a debt of gratitude to Dr. James for his devotion to the twin projects of Americanism and preparedness," he said.

Col. Roosevelt put his arm around Arthur M. Beaupre, 4224 Hazel avenue, and covered him with compliments for his work as minister to Colombia when the Panama canal treaty was up.

Politicians were everywhere and a train of newspaper correspondents followed in the wake of the former president. This was taken as a reflection of the political significance of the visit.

'AGAINST T. R.' GERMAN SLOGAN, LEADER WARNS

Teuton Newspaper Publishers Issue Statement on Attitude to Roosevelt.

The Illinois Publishing company, of which Horace Brand is president, publisher of the Staats-Zeitung and the Chicagoer Presse, yesterday issued a statement by Dr. H. Gerhard, chairman of the political committee of the Chicago branch of the German-American alliance on "The Attitude of the German-American Toward Roosevelt." It follows:

"Roosevelt is coming to Chicago to make inquiries as to just what the attitude of the German-American is toward him, should he canvass for the coming nomination for president of the United States. Here is the answer, according to facts:

"On Feb. 14 the directors of the Chicago branch of the German-American alliance accepted unanimously the report given by Dr. H. Gerhard that the slogan for the approaching national nomination should be: 'Against Wilson and against Roosevelt.'

Slogan Again Adopted.

"On Feb. 21 at another meeting the directors in the 'Schwaben' room of the North Side Turner hall (about forty members in attendance), the above slogan was also unanimously accepted.

"On March 4 a meeting of the executives of the state organization in Illinois was held, at which the slogan 'Against Wilson and against Roosevelt' was also adopted, and further resolution was made that this slogan should be recommended to the entire state.

"On April 24 a vast attendance of delegates of the Chicago branch of the German-American alliance met at the North Side Turner hall, at which President Ferdinand Walther presided. Dr. H. Gerhard, chairman of the committee for political affairs, reviewed the present political situation with the slogan 'Against Wilson and against Roosevelt.' Unanimous applause followed. And now the psychological moment: When one of the delegates asked: 'If both should be nominated, what then?' A spontaneous outburst was made: 'Then we will vote Socialistic.' No one reprimanded this outburst, neither the chairman, nor any one of the members. This should positively indicate the vote of the German-American—Roosevelt at no price.

Charges Mother Country Defamed.

'Not one individual German-American who has a spark of honor and self-respect in his makeup will vote for a man who has defamed and insulted not only the German-Americans but also the good old mother country, Germany.

"The state organization of Iowa has also issued the same slogan—'Against Wilson and against Roosevelt.' In Nebraska, Minnesota, even as far as California, the German-Americans have adopted the same standpoint. In Wisconsin the late election of a Socialist mayor plainly indicates which way the 'wind listeth.'

"If Mr. Roosevelt's conception in his undaunted self-glorification should not be very clear that he is an impossible candidate for president, then the Republican party should be strongly impressed at the coming national convention in Chicago this June and that in an unmistakable manner, that he is undesirable."

NEW HERD FOR MRS. DURAND

Cables Buyer at Isle of Guernsey to Replace Prize Cattle Slaughtered by U. S.

Waukegan, Ill., April 29.—[Special.]—"When I walked through my pasture this week and saw one of my fine bulls and Guernsey cows grazing all alone," said Mrs. Scott Durand today, "my heart was touched as I thought how different it was a year ago. So I just went into the house and cabled a buyer in the Isle of Guernsey, telling him to ship me a new herd. A herd of sixty will leave Guernsey May 15 and I will have my pick when they reach New York. I'll continue in the same lines as before the government slaughtered my prize herd."

GEORGIA JOINS DRY STATES.

New Prohibition Law, Aimed at Purveyors of Alcoholic Beverages, Goes Into Effect.

Atlanta, Ga., April 29.—Georgia's new prohibition law, designed to drive breweries, locker clubs, and "near beer" saloons from the state, becomes effective at midnight tonight. Under it, no beverage containing more than one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol may be manufactured or sold, and no person may bring in from outside the state more than two quarts of liquor or forty-eight pints of beer a month.

BARTHOLDT IS A LOSER.

St. Louis, Mo., April 29.—Richard Bartholdt, former congressman, was defeated for delegate to the Republican national convention today in the convention of the Tenth congressional district.

POLICEMAN FOR 32 YEARS RETIRES WITH HONOR.

In All His Service He Was Never Called Before Trial Board—Advises Young Men.

After thirty-two years on the police force, Patrolman John Coleman of the South Clark street station is to retire on May 15. He has never, in all those years, faced the trial board, he has only missed three days off duty—and that on account of illness—and has never been transferred from the station to which he was originally assigned by Austin Doyle, then chief of police of Chicago. Here is Coleman's advice to young men who want to make a success in police life:

"Young men who are going to join the police department should never trust a crook, neither on a promise nor in any other way. Always attend to duty, and never take any money except your pay check.

"I never received one cent outside of my pay check, although I must have been offered thousands of dollars while I was doing duty in the old levee."

MRS. ROOSEVELT ON OCEAN.

She Begins Sea Voyage to Panama for Health—Will Return with Son and Wife.

New York, April 29.—[Special.]—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt sailed today on the United Fruit company's liner Calamares on a sea voyage to Panama for her health. She said that she plans to meet her son, Kermit, and his wife at Colon and to return without leaving the ship. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Derby, her daughter and son-in-law, were at the pier to see her off.

BUILDING BODIES

Every day in Chicago and in over one hundred other cities Sulzer's Bran Bread is building healthy bodies. Thousands of people depend upon it for nourishment as well as a bowel stimulant. As many more people eat it primarily because of its excellent flavor and good, substantial, satisfying wholesomeness. In all these points this dainty brown loaf is quite distinctive, for in none other is it possible to obtain this splendid combination.

Sulzer's Bran Bread

One of the big points about this bread is the fact that every single particle of the wheat kernel is ground into flour from which the loaf is baked. You get every iota of Nature's goodness as it is grown in the wheat berry, in just the proportion that Nature intended you should have. Absolutely nothing is extracted. And this is only one of the many reasons why you should insist upon Bran Bread baked by the originator of bran bread in Chicago—Carl Sulzer, Baker.

GERMANS STORM SLAV POSITION; TAKE 5,600 MEN

Teutons Deal Heavy Blow to Russians and Repulse Counter Attacks.

BERLIN, April 29.—The capture of Russian positions south of Lake Narocz, between Stanarocze and Stachowce, by German troops, together with more than 5,600 prisoners, was announced by the war office today. The statement follows:

South of Narocz lake our troops yesterday made an attack near an observation post which we had recaptured on March 26 to improve our position there. We took Russian positions between Stanarocze and Stachowce, on the other side of the trenches held by us before March 20.

Five thousand, six hundred men and fifty-six officers were taken, among whom were four staff officers. One gun, twenty-three machine guns, and ten mine throwers also fell into our hands. The Russians also suffered heavy, bloody losses, which were considerably increased during the night as the result of a Russian counter attack which was effected in thick masses. The enemy was unable to reconquer one foot of lost territory.

Austrians Report Successes.

A successful operation by the Austrians in the Ikva sector on the Russian front in which the Russians were driven from advanced positions and nearly 200 prisoners and a machine gun taken, is announced in today's Austro-Hungarian army headquarters report. The official statement says:

Detachments of Archduke Joseph Ferdinand's army drove the Russians from advanced positions north of Mlynov on the Ikva. One officer and 180 men were captured and one machine gun was taken. Otherwise there were the usual artillery duels.

Russian Official Statement.

PETROGRAD, April 29.—The official statement issued by the Russian war office today follows:

The enemy bombarded Shlok and Borsemunde. In the region of Ginovka, west of Dvinsk, the Germans after artillery preparation assumed the offensive, but were driven back into their trenches by our fire.

Southwest of Lake Narocz enemy artillery [illegible] and followed this action by an infantry attack in massed formation. The Germans succeeded in recapturing trenches which they had previously lost. There was fierce fighting in front of Zanapotcha and Abodtzy. In the region of Smorgon German artillery also was active.

RUSSIANS PUSH TURKS BACK.

PETROGRAD, April 29.—The war office tonight gave out the following report covering Caucasus operations:

In the direction of Erzingan our forces after repulsing a Turkish attack took the offensive and drove back the enemy westward.

CONFERENCE ON ARMY MEASURE SHOWS HAY PREPAREDNESS FOE

BY CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY.

Washington, D. C., April 29.—[Special.]—The conference between the senate and house military conferees has now been going on for several days. While the most important parts of the army legislation have not yet been considered, matters have gone far enough to show that Mr. Hay does not intend to yield in the slightest to the ideas of those of the conferees favoring adequate defense and probably is strong enough at the present time successfully to resist any efforts they may make to compel him to accept any of their ideas.

Mr. Hay is reported not only to have succeeded in keeping in some of the more objectionable lesser features of the bill, but even to have made them worse than they originally were. From the beginning Mr. Hay has been a persistent enemy of anything approaching real preparation for proper adequate defense.

Seeks to Trim Units.

There is reason to believe that Mr. Hay's original plan, when he found something had to be done, was greatly to increase the number of privates in each unit of the army, but not to increase the number of units. This was for the reason that by doing this it would be comparatively easy to later materially cut down the number of privates to each company, battery, and troop, while it would be quite difficult to get through legislation abolishing whole units, such as regiments.

Mr. Hay's strength not only comes from the fact that he is chairman of the house military committee, but also because he is willing to favor every selfish interest within and without the army which wishes to profit by some special legislative act having nothing to do with the question of national defense as a whole. In other words, he is content to play the old pork barrel game by which a considerable sum of the nation's money is spent without commensurate return.

No Pork in Staff Plans.

His opposition to the general staff is undoubtedly primarily based on the fact that, having no special interests at heart, the measures advocated by them are based on broad military and national principles which would give us adequate defense for the minimum expenditure and therefore leave no room for pork in any way, shape, or form.

The advantage of the general staff's system is that its very organization compels it to work for the best interests of the army as a whole in conjunction with the best interests of the nation as a whole. It can not be partisan.

Hay's bill adds only ten regiments of infantry to the regular army. Our regiments of infantry at war strength are only half the size of European and Japanese regiments. In other words, his increase is only equal to five regiments of European infantry.

Hay's Proposals Negligible.

The most casual reader of the newspaper since the present war began knows that five regiments are nothing. He or she also must know that infantry is the backbone of any army.

Mr. Hay's bill only adds six regiments of field artillery, or 144 guns, enough for a few miles of front only. This in spite of the lesson daily demonstrated in Europe of the necessity for a much larger number of guns than ever before.

His bill adds no cavalry at all, and yet again and again since this war began a cavalry such as ours which, due to its horses has a mobility infantry can never attain, and due to its infantry rifle as the fire power of infantry, has shown its great value. But the bill is full of concessions to special privilege seekers whose desires have little or nothing to do with an efficient army, but the fulfillment of which inevitably necessitates additional expense.

Chamberlain Measure Broad.

On the other hand, Mr. Chamberlain's bill is founded throughout on broad national military principles. He has followed the lines indicated to be correct by the studies of the general staff.

He has in no way yielded to special pleadings, but has insisted on an organization which would give us a well rounded out, sufficiently flexible regular army to take care of our overseas possessions, to properly garrison our coast defenses, and to furnish us the mobile troops necessary to meet the first shock of invasion.

ITALIAN GIANT GUNS SHELL AUSTRIAN RAIL STATIONS.

All Infantry Actions Repelled, Rome Reports—Vienna Chronicles Minor Successes.

ROME, via London, April 29.—Following is the official statement covering Austrian operations issued by the war office today:

Along the Trentino frontier activity has been limited to artillery actions.

In the Lugano valley we repulsed small enemy attacks against the section of our front from Monte Collo to the foot of the valley. Our heavy artillery bombarded the railway stations at Junechen and Saifnitz.

In the Flezzo basin, after a violent artillery fire, enemy infantry attempted to attack our positions at Ravnilaz, but they were stopped by our curtain of fire.

Austrian War Report.

BERLIN, April 29.—The Austrian war office tonight forwarded the following report on Italian operations:

Italian artillery shelled the Doberdo plateau and the Goritz bridgehead and also several villages behind our front.

Our airmen dropped heavy bombs on the railroad stations at Gormonia and San Giovanni di Manzano.

There were active artillery engagements at several places on the Dolomites front.

An enemy attack against our position on the Col di Lana ridge was repulsed.

FOREMAN URGES MILITARY DRILL TWO NIGHTS A WEEK.

First Cavalry Officer Tells Irish Fellowship Club His Plan for Preparedness.

Col. Milton J. Foreman of the First cavalry in a talk on "Military Preparedness" at the Irish Fellowship club luncheon in the Hotel La Salle yesterday declared that the solution of the preparedness question is the strengthening of the organized state militia. It is not practical for men to give three months of their time each year for military training, he said. It is practical, however, for men who are earning good salaries to receive military training by joining the state militia and drilling two nights a week, he declared.

"How many men nowadays go to night school? I went to night law school and there are many men in this room who went to night school at one time or another. If we can do that, why can't we train our soldiers in the night time?

"Two nights a week, a little time on Saturday, and some time for theoretical work and you will make a man a soldier in three years without cost to the man or to the country, and the man will be as good a soldier as any country would want.

FRENCH DEFEAT GERMAN ATTACK BEFORE VERDUN

Paris Thinks Battle Has Ended and That Enemy Is Taking Heavy Guns Away.

PARIS, April 29.—After a violent bombardment of French positions near Avocourt and hill 304, on the Verdun front, west of the Meuse, German troops were massed for an assault. The war office report of this afternoon says this attack was prevented by French artillery, which dispersed the German troops. A vigorous attack was made on French trenches east of Thiaumont farm, but the Germans were repulsed with heavy losses. Later there came a lull in the infantry fighting. The official report follows:

In the Argonna district a surprise attack executed last night, at a point on the north of Four de Paris, made it possible for us to clean up some of the enemy trenches and bring back some prisoners.

On the left bank of the river Meuse German troops were massed to the north of hill No. 304 to attack our lines. They were at once attacked by hand grenades and prevented from coming out and then dispersed.

On the right bank of the Meuse the Germans delivered an attack against our trenches east of Thiaumont farm, in which they employed flaming liquids. Cut down by the shells of our artillery and the fire of our machine guns, the enemy was repulsed with heavy losses. At the same hour an attack upon our positions between Douaumont and Vaux also was checked by our fire.

Today the enemy bombarded our positions in the Avocourt wood, on hill 304, in the region to the south of Haudromont, and in the sectors at the foot of the Meuse hill. One of our long range guns shelled in the Heudicourt station [northeast of St. Mihiel] a train, several cars of which were destroyed.

Paris Sees Battle Ended.

The battle of Verdun may now be considered as ended, according to opinion prevailing in French military circles. Not only the recent French official reports but yesterday's German announcement stated that nothing important had developed in the Verdun region. It is nearly two months since the German war office has made such a statement.

Heavy German batteries in considerable number have been withdrawn from before Verdun and sent to a distant point, which, judging from the increasing activity there, probably is the portion of the line held by the British.

It is expected the Germans gradually will reduce the frequence and intensity of their bombardments and infantry attacks on the Verdun front until normal conditions of trench warfare have been restored.

German Official Report.

BERLIN, April 29.—The German army headquarters today issued the following statement:

Between La Bassee canal and Arras there were lively continuous mine engagements, which resulted successfully for us.

In the sector of Givenchy-en-Gohelle our advance is progressing. Two British hand grenade counter attacks were sanguinarily repulsed.

In the Meuse sector new French counter attacks at Dead Man Hill and to the eastward failed.

German anti-aircraft guns south of Caronvillers brought down a French biplane, whose occupants were dead.

First Lieut. Boelke shot down his fourteenth aeroplane.

ONE YEAR AGO TODAY IN THE EUROPEAN WAR

American tank steamer Gulflight torpedoed off Scilly Isles.

British announced destruction of eight German submarines within week by mines and net traps.

Germans shelled Dunkirk from the land side.

Count von Bernstorff warned Americans by a newspaper advertisement against entering the war zone on board ships of the allies.

SAN FRANCISCO IS LEADER IN ENLISTMENTS OF WEEK.

Chicago in Third Place of Those Accepted for Army of the United States.

Washington, D. C., April 29.—[Special.]—San Francisco again ranks first in enlistments for the army, the week's report showing that, of the 718 recruits accepted, San Francisco supplied seventy, New York sixty-six, and Chicago fifty-five. Figures of applications and acceptances bear about the usual ratio, cities in the middle west showing as follows:

	Applications.	Acceptances.		Applications.	Acceptances.
Chicago	223	55	Terre Haute	37	9
Peoria	34	9	Detroit	66	12
Indianapolis	80	20	Grand Rapids	11	4
Evansville	55	12	Davenport	11	12

In the forty-four days which have passed since congress authorized the raising of the army to war strength, there have been 23,830 applications and only 5,417 acceptances.

ASKS REFERENDUM ON WAR.

La Follette Bill Proposes Advisory Vote on Course After Severing Diplomatic Relations.

Washington, D. C., April 29.—Senator La Follette today introduced a bill providing for an advisory vote by the people as to whether the United States should declare war against any nation with whom the president had severed diplomatic relations. He did not ask for immediate action on it.

URGES MERCHANT MARINE BUT AS DEFENSE MEASURE.

B. J. Rosenthal Asserts Navy Is Only 10 Per Cent Efficient Without Auxiliary Ships.

The United States navy, without auxiliary ships, which have been amply provided for in the Alexander shipping bill that will be introduced in congress this week, can only be 10 per cent efficient. B. J. Rosenthal, vice president of the National Business League of America, in speaking before the Iroquois club yesterday, explained in detail the provisions in the proposed bill, which represents one of President Wilson's defense measures. William Rothmann presided at the luncheon.

"America never can be prepared without a merchant marine that in times of war can be pressed into naval service, as England has done," said Mr. Rosenthal. "It is estimated now that we are paying foreigners $2,000,000 a day for delivering our goods and in turn England, the country that saw to the development of its merchant marine, is getting a shipping tax from her shipowners totaling $2,500,000 a day. Americans, in effect, are paying the tax. Shipping rates have gone up more than 1,000 per cent since the beginning of the war.

"America can only have a merchant marine managed and operated by private capital, but the government must take the first big constructive step."

Detroit Electric

No other "all-year-car" rivals the Detroit Electric

The Detroit Electric has long been a leading "all-year-round" car. Each succeeding model has revealed new developments.

Even several years ago the demand for Detroit Electrics far exceeded that for any other electric-powered automobile. Its supremacy in this field was conceded.

But even further than this it went. The Detroit Electric battery capacity was improved. It was given a mileage of 80 to 90 miles on a single charge. It was given greater power and greater speed. It became a car that stood shoulder to shoulder in performance with the finest enclosed gasoline cars.

Then an amazing thing happened. Motordom saw men who for years had regarded electric cars as merely women's cars turning in great numbers to Detroit Electrics. And today the Detroit Electric is the largest-selling "all-year-'round" car—either gasoline or electric.

Come and see this matchless enclosed car. The strong claims for Detroit Electric performance are easily proved by a practical road demonstration.

Remember—the Detroit Electric is a quality car at a moderate price

FAREWELL TO THE OLD HOME

IN LEAVING our old business home, where we have lived, and worked, and prospered, and made friends since 1894, it is with feelings such as are ever associated with parting from places we have loved and enjoyed.

It is a matter of deep satisfaction to us that during the twenty-two years we have been at the old store, and during the fifty-two years we have been doing business in Chicago, we have been able to place millions of splendid musical instruments in the homes of the people, in the schools, and in places of public entertainment.

It is a genuine pleasure to contemplate that the music made upon these instruments will long continue to inspire and enrich the lives of a vast, uncounted multitude.

In a few days our old home will be but a memory of days that are gone. Our new home is even now a present reality, and a bright promise of the better days that are yet to be.

GERMANS FINISH WRITING REPLY TO U. S. PROTEST

Publication of Text of American Note Causes Some Alarm in Teuton Capital.

COPENHAGEN, April 29.—Germany's reply to the American submarine note has been completed and will be delivered to Washington at the beginning of next week, the Berlin Tageblatt declares.

Dispatches quoting the Tageblatt declare that all German newspapers now take an optimistic view of the situation but declare that no one outside of headquarters definitely knows the terms of Germany's reply.

NEW ALARM IN BERLIN.

BERLIN, April 29.—Publication of President Wilson's memorandum, stating in precise terms the American attitude with regard to armed merchantmen, caused a new flurry here today.

No official comment was obtainable. The average Berliner, whose first wave of anger over the American note had subsided, thought he saw substantiation of the old charge that the United States is doing everything to help England.

The statement in the memorandum that an armed merchantman is a peaceful trading ship until conclusive evidence to the contrary is offered was pointed to by several German critics today.

CLAIM DOUBT ON ARMS.

"If I walk down the street with a gun in my pocket, how does President Wilson know whether my intention is offensive or defensive?" demanded one Berliner.

It is too early to say whether publication of the memorandum will cause any hitch in the German-American negotiations, which are now in a satisfactory state. This information probably will not be obtainable until after the return of Ambassador Gerard from the headquarters conference with the kaiser, which was to begin today.

WASHINGTON IS HOPEFUL.

Washington, D. C., April 29.—There was a marked relaxation of tension on the U boat situation today. It was attributed largely to the knowledge emanating from German diplomatic sources both in Washington and Berlin that the German foreign office has completed its reply to President Wilson's note on the submarine issue and that the kaiser is discussing the whole subject of friendly relations between the two nations with Ambassador Gerard.

The German reply, which is expected to be accompanied by a personal expression from German officials of a strong desire that there be no breach in existing friendly intercourse between the United States and Germany, is expected to be in President Wilson's hands by the middle of next week, if not sooner. The German embassy's earlier forecast had put the date of the reply's receipt as late as the end of the week.

RESULT IS IN DOUBT.

In the belief that German officials have met the embarrassing problem facing them there is now much conjecture as to how far the kaiser has gone to meet President Wilson's contentions and demands. Mere expressions of regard and desire for friendship if not coupled with compliance with the American position will not save the situation, it was made clear today.

Some idea of what Germany proposes to do is expected to reach this country from Ambassador Gerard by Monday. He planned to return to Berlin tomorrow.

BURY GARY VICTIM IN LAKE.

Steel Which Consumed Workman Will Be Lowered Into Michigan.

Gary, Ind., April 29.—With the death of John Boyinski the list of dead in the Illinois Steel company's Gary furnace disaster reached three. The name of the steel worker who was trapped in 100 tons of molten metal, and whose body was completely incinerated, today was learned to be Toby Chopion of Springfield, Ill. The hundred ton mass of steel that swallowed up Chopion's body is to be broken. The steel tomb is then to be lowered into Lake Michigan for burial.

PROPOSED CHURCH RITUAL CHANGES STIRS 'OLD SCHOOL'

Familiar Forms for Marriages and Burials to Come Under Fire at Methodist Conference.

Aurora, Ill., April 29.—[Special.]—Changes in the Methodist church ritual, relating principally to the marriage and death services and so marked as to make old school folk gasp, will be suggested and probably adopted by the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church in the meeting at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., beginning May 1, the Rev. D. D. Vaughn, pastor of the Galena Boulevard Methodist Episcopal church, said today.

Among the familiar forms of marriage and death services the conference will be asked to drop, Mr. Vaughn says, are the expressions:

With all my worldly goods I thee endow.

As Isaac and Rebekah lived faithfully together.

The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away.

Forasmuch as it hath pleased Almighty God to take out of the world the soul of the departed.

Other well known forms will also be dropped, the Rev. Mr. Vaughn said, but a relic of primitive civilization, the giving away of brides, will be added to the marriage service because of the demand by young women who delight to feel that in being wed they are given to man as his most priceless jewel.

SUFFRAGE UNION IN A ROW OVER RIVALS' PARADE

Mrs. L. Brackett Bishop Starts Stormy Session at Tea for Miss Paul.

Most of the union was knocked out of the Congressional union yesterday when several insurgents arose at the afternoon tea given for Miss Alice Paul of Washington, leader of the organization, and wanted to know what attitude the union would take toward the National Suffrage association's parade.

Mrs. L. Brackett Bishop, who tried out a scheme of 33 cents a day for food, opened the disorder which later almost reached riotous proportions. Mrs. Bishop first contributed $100 to the convention which the union is to have in June, when the Republicans will be asked to indorse the Susan B. Anthony amendment for national suffrage. The closing day of the convention is the date of the suffrage parade which is to be staged by rival suffragists.

Mrs. Bishop Starts It.

"I want to know," said Mrs. Bishop, "if the union is going to have a meeting in Orchestra hall while the parade is going on to attract people who might march?"

"It is too soon to say," replied Miss Paul. "We have nothing to do with the parade."

A dozen women jumped to the floor and started to talk. Miss Paul rapped with her gavel. A glass of water was knocked over and the contents splashed to the floor.

Work with Heads, One Says.

"I can't see why we suffragists can never get together on anything," said one woman.

"We are going to work with our heads," said Miss Elsie Hill. "Those marchers are merely working with their feet. Which would you rather do?"

"I move," said Mrs. Bishop, "that the union does not have a meeting during the parade."

There were shouts of "No! No!"

It was then decided that while the union would not indorse the parade it would not forbid any member from marching if she cared to."

Washington, D. C., April 29.—The federal reserve board announced today that it would put into effect June 15 its new plan for country-wide check clearing and collection. Double Track Demanded.

Installation of a double track on the West Sixty-third street car line from South Cicero avenue to Argo was recommended yesterday by a coroner's jury at the inquest into the death of John Maloney of 2037 West Fifty-fifth street, a motorman of a westbound car, which collided head on with another car March 30 near South Fiftieth avenue.

HONOR TO MRS. COOLEY

President of Woman's Club Elected for Third Time—Constitutional Limit.

MATZENE PHOTO
Mrs. Harlan Ward Cooley

Men are not to overrun the Chicago Woman's club. The organization is not to be called the Chicago Woman's and Men's club, as some of the members suggested.

At the annual meeting of the club yesterday the women were to vote on the question of admitting men to associate membership upon payment of $50 annual dues or $1,000 for a perpetual membership. It was not the men so much as their money that was desired by the women who proposed the change. The members of the building committee of the club, which is trying to raise funds for the erection of a new clubhouse, were back of the movement.

Such strenuous objection was made by a number of the pioneers, however, that the building committee withdrew its request for the admission of men.

Mrs. Harlan Ward Cooley was reelected president of the club. Her term will be only one year, as the club is changing the year for the election of president. She will have served three years at the end of her term of office, which is the limit allowed by the constitution.

Other officers elected were: First vice president, Mrs. Edwin L. Lobdell; second vice president, Mrs. Agnes Newell Metcalf; recording secretary, Miss Mary Sylvia West; corresponding secretary, Miss Alice E. Moran; treasurer, Mrs. Charles H. Betts.

The following were elected members of the board of managers: Miss Katherine Jones, Mrs. Jean Ellis Driver, Mrs. George Packard, Mrs. James F. Porter, Mrs. Payson S. Wild, Mrs. Leslie Lewis, Mrs. Charles E. Caldwell, Mrs. James E. Keith, Mrs. Frank L. Gordon, Mrs. Eben Lane, Mrs. John W. Moore, Mrs. William Lyman, Mrs. Richard M. Gray, Mrs. Herman Landauer, Mrs. Jeremiah W. McGraw, and Mrs. William D. Washburn.

Two Automobiles Collide.

Two automobiles collided yesterday at Lincoln parkway and Chestnut street, but none of the occupants was hurt. J. O. Girding, 450 Oakdale avenue, was driving an automobile owned by Mrs. A. Krumm, 3706 Sheffield avenue. It collided with an automobile owned and driven by C. K. Gold, 1469 Fullerton avenue.

AT 75 KISSED STRANGE GIRL; WAS HE INSANE?

At Least Dippy, Say Relatives in Contest for $500,000 Hughes Estate.

If a 75 year old man kiss a girl he never has seen before is he therefore insane, and if he die a few months later should his will, disposing of a $500,000 estate, be declared invalid?

The man was Henry L. Hughes, retired brush manufacturer, who died on June 28 of last year, having bequeathed to his widow, Mrs. Elsie Marjorie Lawton Hughes, 1546 Farwell avenue, all of his estate save $5,000, which was left to two children by his first marriage, who are now suing in the Circuit court to break his will.

The girl is Miss Janet Catherine Miller of Quebec, daughter of a grandniece of the husband of Mr. Hughes' sister.

Asked for Her Mother.

"He came to our house in October or November, 1914, and asked for my mother," Miss Miller testified in a deposition filed yesterday. "He said: 'I am Mr. Hughes.' I said: 'O!' because I remembered his name. I continued: 'You will find mamma at grandma's.'

"He said: 'You are one of the daughters.' I said: 'Yes.' 'Well,' said he, 'I must kiss you.'

"And he stooped down and kissed me!"

"Of course I was quite angry; I did not know the man enough for him to take that privilege. His eyes were stary, kind of glassy. I told mamma when she came home that I thought he was doped."

"Where did he kiss you?" asked Charles E. Carpenter, attorney for the widow.

"On the mouth. He put his arm on my shoulder."

Kissed Just Once.

"How many times did he kiss you?"

"Just the once; it would not have been good for him to try a second one. I do not think any one of sound mine would stoop down and kiss a girl that he had never seen."

Miss Miller's father, James Miller, and her mother, Mrs. Isabel Susan Miller, were equally deprecatory of Mr. Hughes' mental state.

"My opinion is that he was drunk or dopy or something like that," said Miller.

"It was just after he had married the last Mrs. Hughes," testified Mrs. Miller. "I was in my sister's home when he came in and said: 'My new wife is outside.' I said: 'Is she? Why, what were you thinking about that you did not bring her in?'

"He just smiled, went to the door and beckoned, with a 'Hey! Hey!' She came. He said: 'This is my new wife.' His tongue was thick. My opinion was that he was batty. He might be what we call dippy."

The contesting children are Mrs. Margaret E. Rundall, 5151 Pine Grove avenue, and Harry C. Hughes, 1722 Leland avenue.

OLD MAN TAKEN AS FLIRT.

Woman Complains That N. H. Dodson, 68, Annoyed Her in Movie Theater.

Nathan H. Dodson, 68 years old, 6316 South Sangamon street, who says he has been married forty-two years but is separated from his wife, was arrested yesterday in the Castle theater at State and Madison streets on complaint of Mrs. Louise Crook, 6406 Dorchester avenue, who charged him with annoying her.

They sat beside one another and finally Mrs. Crook arose, looked at the old man, and said:

"Isn't one seat enough for you?"

Newlyweds Walking 800 Miles.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Gray, recently married in Walla Walla, Wash., are walking from there to their homestead in Utah, a distance of 800 miles.

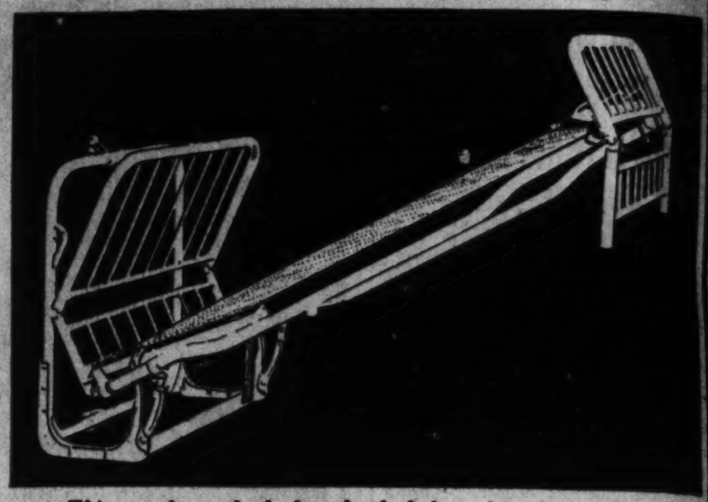
How the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed Works

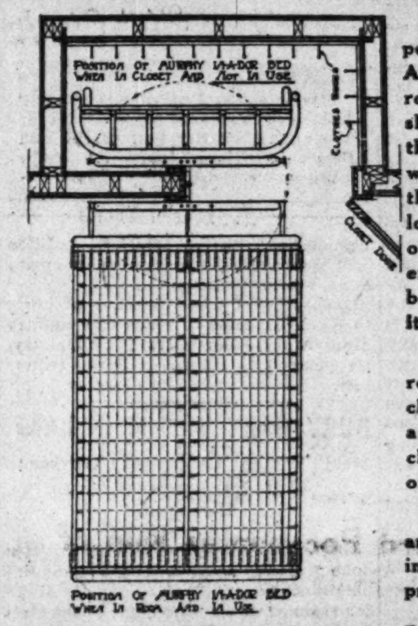
This is the famous Murphy In-A-Dor Bed which has revolutionized the building of houses and apartments. Each Murphy Bed gives an extra room without the expense of building it.



This cut shows the bed perfectly balanced in this or any other position. No danger in handling. Only two things fold—head board and legs at foot. The bed itself does not fold. Drop frame allows perfect resiliency at edge of bed and the friction clamps hold bedding firmly in place and can be quickly pressed down or released.

Not only is the MURPHY IN-A-DOR BED the cheapest of all concealed beds to put in a building but it is the only one that is the equal in every respect of the ordinary high quality metal beds which are on the market. It is the only one that is mechanically perfect—that cannot get out of order—that at all times rests its whole weight directly on the floor and therefore its operation is not affected by the settling of the building or the shrinking and warping of woodwork. It is the only one that when not in use is perfectly hidden from the mind as well as the eye, because it is concealed behind the ordinary closet door. These are the reasons why over 6,000 MURPHY IN-A-DOR BEDS have been installed in Chicago alone within the last two years.

How the Murphy Bed Fits in a Small Closet



Position of Murphy In-A-Dor Bed When in Closet and Not in Use.
Position of Murphy In-A-Dor Bed When in Use.

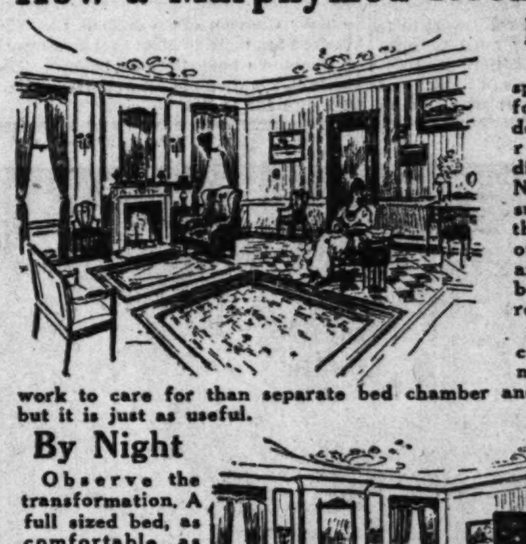
This floor plan shows the position of the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed when out in the room at night and when shifted into the closet for the day. It is fully made up while in the closet, and as the sheets and blankets hang loosely they air better than on an ordinary bed. One may enter the closet while the bed is on the floor or while it is in the closet.

To lower the bed into the room or to put it back in the closet is so simple and easy an operation that even a child can do it in a few seconds.

It requires no special preparation and may be installed in any ordinary closet of proper shape.

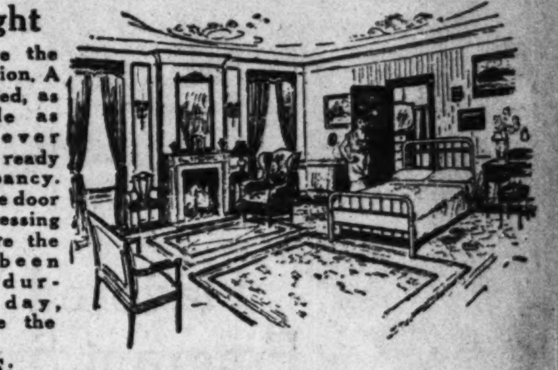
How a Murphyized Room Looks

By Day



Note how much space is available for any purpose desired — living room, library, dining room, etc. No one would suspect that all the conveniences of a bed chamber are available just beyond that narrow closet door. The room has cost less to furnish and is less work to care for than separate bed chamber and living room—but it is just as useful.

By Night



Observe the transformation. A full sized bed, as comfortable as any ever slept in, is ready for occupancy. Through the door of the dressing closet where the bed has been concealed during the day, you glimpse the dresser.

BUILDERS:

We will be glad to send our booklet, "How to Use the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed," to any one contemplating building either a house or an apartment.

TENANTS:

Don't sign a lease until you have inspected the Murphyized apartments near where you wish to locate. Ask your real estate man or look in the classified columns of the daily papers. Look for our sign on new buildings, "Murphy In-A-Dor Beds Used Here."

CHAOTIC DOUBT ON VERY EVE OF BIG CAMPAIGNS

Never Before Such Uncertainty in the Trend of Political Events.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., April 29.—[Special.]—In the shadow of the great war and of the momentous issues it has produced for the United States the American presidential campaign bids fair to upset all calculations at this time.

Never before has there been such uncertainty of the trend of political events. Practically the only certainty is that President Wilson will be renominated at St. Louis. But with former Secretary of State Bryan defeated as a delegate to the convention and at loggerheads with the president over the submarine policy his attitude is an uncertainty of importance. Little surprise would be occasioned among politicians if Mr. Bryan were to bolt the party with as much of his following as he could carry with him.

REPUBLICANS AT SEA.

The Republican situation is chaotic. While Hughes and Roosevelt continue as possibilities for the nomination, towering above the field of favorite sons, it is becoming more and more evident that the selection of the candidate will emanate from the midnight council of Republican leaders at the convention, with or without the advice and consent of the Progressive leaders at the adjacent conclave.

In the background of the whole political scene looms the growing possibility of a new party—a peace party opposed alike to Democratic and Republican foreign policies that may be deemed likely to drag the country into the European war and opposed to Democratic and Republican advocacy of military preparedness. For leader of such a party Mr. Bryan, Henry Ford, or Senator La Follette might be selected.

THE DAY IN CONGRESS

SENATE.

Met at noon.

Resumed debate on rural credits bill.

Adjourned at 3:47 p. m. to noon Monday.

HOUSE.

Met at 11 a. m.

Adjourned at 5:13 p. m. to 11 a. m. Monday.

HUGHES TO BE FORCED.

Few Republican politicians longer doubt that Associate Judge Hughes of the Supreme court would accept the nomination if it should be offered to him by an overwhelming vote of the convention. He has maintained his silence so long and so successfully that now it is deemed probable that there will be no change in his attitude right up to the balloting in the convention.

Republican leaders say that unless Mr. Hughes removes himself from consideration before that time his name will be voted upon and every effort will be made by his supporters to win him the nomination. They will go through with this plan in thorough confidence that the jurist will accept the honor.

INSULTING A JUSTICE.

Every effort to "smoke out" the justice has failed. According to the gossip among the politicians the last ill fated attempt was made by Senator Wadsworth of New York.

Wadsworth, so the story goes, headed a delegation of Republicans in a call upon Mr. Hughes at his residence. The senator was the spokesman and delivered an appealing address in which he averred that the justice could have the nomination if he would take it and wound up a glowing peroration by putting the question to him point blank.

Justice Hughes, who had expressed surprise at being waited upon by the delegation, was greatly incensed by Wadsworth's speech, it is said, and indignantly charged the senator with having offered him the greatest insult of his life because of the impropriety of approaching a member of the Supreme court with a political proposition. The delegation is reported to have departed precipitately from the presence of the jurist.

When this story was bruited about the capitol the anti-Hughes men immediately proclaimed that the justice had refused the proffered nomination. The Hughes supporters replied that the incident furnished no indication of his attitude. They pointed out the vast difference between an attempt to put the justice in the light of seeking the nomination and an offer of the honor by the convention without solicitation on his part. Besides, they said, Jimmy Wadsworth is the last person in the world who could hope to "smoke out" the justice, for when Mr. Hughes was governor of New York he was fought tooth and nail by Wadsworth, then speaker of the house in the legislature.

Another Time Silent.

In connection with the attitude of the justice much significance also is attached to the fact that Mr. Hughes never has repudiated the efforts of Gov. Whitman of New York to bring about his nomination, although he halted the attempts of former Postmaster General Hitchcock to round up delegates in his name.

Practically the only flaw in the Hughes movement is the utter lack of knowledge of the jurist's convictions on the issues of the hour. Nobody actually knows whether his attitude on the questions of foreign policy, for example, approaches that of Roosevelt on the one hand or that of President Wilson on the other, although his friends assert that he stands "somewhere in betwixt and between."

No Year for Pikers.

The Roosevelt boosters refuse to be discouraged by the recent primary results, in which the supporters of the colonel have not fared well. They point out that Roosevelt has consistently discouraged all efforts to make him an avowed candidate and that despite this drawback the voters have insisted upon writing his name on the primary ballot and otherwise demonstrating their enthusiasm for him.

The Roosevelt and the Hughes men find one bit of common ground in the contention that "this is no year for pikers." They agree that with the country prosperous Wilson is going to be a hard man to beat, particularly if the country manages to keep out of the war, the credit for which the Democrats will claim for the president. Hence, say the Hughes and Roosevelt men, it behooves the party as never before to pick the biggest available leader it has. Hence again, it behooves the party to choose between Hughes and Roosevelt and take no chances on a lesser man.

Sherman and Burton.

If, however, both Hughes and Roosevelt be eliminated eventually it will be found, according to present indications, that Senator Sherman of Illinois and former Senator Burton of Ohio overshadow the field of candidates. Sherman stock has been booming recently. He is the new "big chief" in Illinois politics. He is assured second choice support by numerous delegations in the western part of the country.

In the estimate of the politicians the Cummins boom is not panning out, Fairbanks is too reactionary for consideration, and La Follette is wholly out of the reckoning. That leaves Sherman and Burton the only western candidates in the running.

Of the lesser candidates in the east both Root and Weeks are considered "unavailable" because of the capitalistic connections of both, not to mention Progressive antagonism to Root because of the unpleasantness at the 1912 convention. McCall of Massachusetts and Brumbaugh and Knox of Pennsylvania are only vague possibilities.

The survey of the field of lesser personalities, therefore, narrows the reckoning down to Sherman and Burton at this stage of the contest.

Bryan to Be Scribe.

The defeat of Bryan for delegate at large to the St. Louis convention and the enforced retirement of McCombs as Democratic national chairman are the two big recent events in the politics of the dominant party. A convention without Bryan as nominee or prominent participant will be a novelty to the present generation of Democrats. It is expected that he will be there, but only in the capacity of a journalist, for the Nebraskan already is under contract to write daily contracts.

Some ardent Bryan partisans want the former premier of the administration admitted to the convention as a delegate by general consent or made either temporary or permanent chairman. But if this plan should be carried out it would be over the dead bodies of Murphy and Ryan and other "undeserving Democrats" whom Mr. Bryan has sought to read out of the party at various times.

The retirement of McCombs is due to the influence over the president gained by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo.

PASCHEN TELLS HOYNE HE DIDN'T HIRE SLUGGERS.

On the Other Hand, He Says Connery's Election Day Workers Were Armed with Revolvers.

Frank Paschen, well known contractor and supporter of former Mayor Harrison, who was mentioned as having hired and paid the chauffeur of a taxicab on primary day, April 11, when six men riding in the car are alleged to have attacked Francis D. Connery, former city clerk, called on State's Attorney Hoyne yesterday.

Paschen assured Hoyne that he had no knowledge of any conspiracy to attack Connery, but on the contrary some of Connery's political workers had displayed revolvers and attacked some of his political associates.

Paschen, who was chief of Mr. Harrison's favorites for postmaster of Chicago, also assured the state's attorney, Mr. Hoyne said, that he welcomes an investigation and that he will gladly render every assistance in his power to find and punish persons guilty of violence or infractions of election laws.

Are You Afraid to Be Honest?

March yourself up against the looking-glass in the privacy of your own room. Stand square on your feet, look yourself straight in the eye and ask yourself, Am I honest? It isn't enough for you to sort of tremble and mumble a Yes—or say it with a lot of mental reservations that you're probably as square as the rest of them. After both those answers, ask yourself again and put a couple of underlines under the word "HONEST," then see if you can say YES—AND MEAN IT.

Are you honest enough with the world to ask your friends to lunch with you in the same place where you usually eat?

Are you honest enough with your wife to tell her that your employer found fault with you today and that he was right?

Are you honest enough with yourself to acknowledge you are foolish in trading with merchants where you know that a great big chunk of your money goes to pay for that merchant's false front, for elaborate displays, for leather upholstered private offices, for velvet carpet on the floors, and fine hand-painting on the ceilings, all of which do you absolutely no good?

We've been honest. We've been square. We've been straight, and always will be. That is the way and the only way that has helped us, in 7 years, to grow into The Largest Exclusive Clothiers in the World—to build up a nation wide Success that no one else can touch—to make ourselves so absolutely competition-proof that the owners of extravagantly conducted streetlevel clothing stores simply stand aghast, pull their hair in despair, stretch their arms toward heaven and wish that something—anything—anything at all might happen that would keep us from continuing to sell

ESCAPES DEATH IN OIL FIRE, THEN IN ENGINE TANK

Monon Machinist, Aflame, Drops Into Water Tender and Almost Drowns.

Berlin Stringham, a machinist for the Monon railroad at Hammond, Ind., narrowly escaped being burned to death yesterday, only to fight another desperate battle for his life in the tank of a locomotive tender passing through the yards.

Stringham was carrying a torch, when in dodging out of the way of an approaching engine he swerved the flame too close to his clothing, and in an instant his oil soaked jumper was ablaze.

Plunges Into Tank.

Shouting to the engineer to stop, he sprung on the rear stirrup of the tender, ran up the ladder and let himself down through the narrow manhole of the brimming tank. The flames leaping from his sleeves jumped to his oily cap and the pain caused him to release his hold. As he shot from sight the engine and tender were brought to a jolting stop and the engineer and fireman ran back over the tender to his assistance.

There was no sign of the man, however, and the rescuers knelt over the small opening, groping helplessly at arm's length in the water in an effort to clutch the drowning man's clothing.

The sudden stopping of the engine had sent Stringham swirling through the water away from the manhole, and there was only an inch or two of space between the surface and the top of the tank. He came to the top, fighting for the breath he could only get by treading water and throwing his head back so that his nostrils were above water.

Last Effort Succeeds.

In the meanwhile other railroad men had come running, but in the emergency no one was able to find anything long enough to serve as a hook. Stringham tried to obtain a hold on the slippery sides of the tank, but each time he failed and went under he came up more exhausted.

Finally, in a last effort, he dived and swam under water, guided by the ray of light, and suddenly his hand shot up through the opening. It was grabbed by the engineer and Stringham was dragged out unconscious.

He was rushed to a hospital, where he was revived with an oxygen machine. His burns, the doctors said, will not prove serious.

CONFIRMS AID TO SIEGEL.

McInnerney Admits Store Has Received $1,100,000 in Additional Capital.

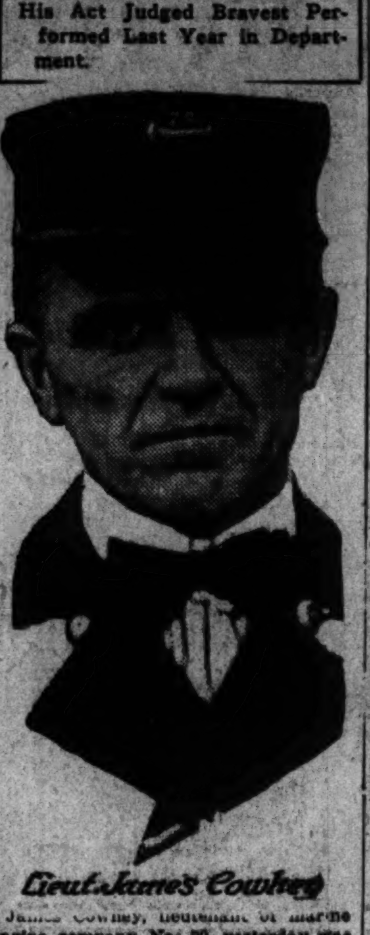
Thomas H. McInnerney of Siegel-Cooper & Co. yesterday affirmed the story appearing in THE TRIBUNE Friday morning to the effect that the company had secured additional working capital to the amount of $1,100,000. The bank creditors, including several Chicago institutions, and the landlord of the Siegel, Cooper & Co. building lease have agreed to let the merchandise bills be paid first. The credit was extended as a result of the improved outlook under the McInnerney management.

BAHAI CONGRESS CONVENES.

The centenary of the birth of the founder of the Bahai movement will be celebrated with the laying of the corner stone of the building of the Mashrak-el-Azkar at Wilmette, Nov. 12, 1917. It was dedicated at the eighth annual Mashrak-el-Azkar convention and Bahai congress, which began at the Auditorium hotel yesterday.

FIREMAN HERO

His Act Judged Bravest Performed Last Year in Department.



Lieut. James Cowhey

James Cowhey, lieutenant of marine engine company No. 32, yesterday was recommended by the board of award to the ex-officio trustees of the Lambert Tree hero medal fund for the 1915 fire department hero medal.

On Sept. 12, 1915, according to the testimony, Cowhey rescued Mrs. Tillie Anderson and her daughter, 8 years old, from the third floor of a burning flat building at 3623 Wilton avenue.

Cowhey ascended to the second floor and, clinging to the building, persuaded Mrs. Andersen to drop her daughter into his arms. The little girl was then passed down the ladder to safety. Mrs. Anderson then lowered herself from the window ledge and dropped into Cowhey's right arm, his left being used to keep himself from falling.

DEDICATE PIPE ORGAN TODAY

A new pipe organ given by Mrs. Sarah E. Wheeler as a memorial for Mrs. J. H. Howard will be dedicated in the Grace Methodist Episcopal church in Lake Bluff today. A sum of $4,000 was raised altogether for purchasing the organ and making other improvements in the church property. Mrs. Wheeler gave $1,000, members of the Howard family contributing $600 more. The remainder was given by Stanley Field, A. A. Sprague II., and Louis Swift.

GORGAS ASSERTS CAUSE OF EVILS LIES IN POVERTY

Greatest Peril to Morality and Religion Said to Be Lack of Worldly Goods.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Washington, D. C., April 29.—[Special.]—Maj. Gen. William C. Gorgas, surgeon general of the United States army, and E. W. Fritchley, an architect of Bombay, India, were two of the speakers who aroused unusual interest today at the missionary congress.

"I was a missionary bishop in Panama," said Maj. Gen. Gorgas. "I had under me from twelve to twenty ministers who served in the sanitary department.

"We found that the greatest hindrance to the cure of insanitary conditions was poverty. Poverty is also one of the greatest hindrances to morality and religion. Therefore I urge you to assist every movement which tends to relieve poverty."

Gives Fortune to Cause.

Mr. Fritchley, it was announced, has been the architect of some of the palaces of Indian rajahs, and acquired a fortune in his work. Some time ago he decided to turn all of his profits into religious work. He is in the United States as a delegate to the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, which meets Monday in Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

"I am opposed to the establishment of chairs of comparative religions in our colleges," he said. "But I am in favor of establishing chairs for the teaching of the Christian religion. Buddha and Confucius had good points about them, but they could not establish a religion which is the life of God in the soul."

Adopt Committee Report.

A report of a committee of twenty-one laymen, of which A. L. Shuey of Dayton, Ohio, was chairman and E. M. Bowman of Chicago was secretary, was unanimously adopted after lengthy discussion.

The report recommends the work of the laymen's missionary movement in its completion of ten years of work and recommends the extension of the movement to the Sunday school, the rural communities, and among the Negroes.

Chicago laymen who were elected on the permanent general committee were E. P. Bailey, McKenzie Cleland, Orrin H. Carter, E. M. Bowman, Abram W. Harris, Andrew McLeish, Sampson Rogers, E. H. Pitkin, and E. K. Warren.

ELECTRIC TO MILWAUKEE TO BE SOLD TOMORROW.

Judge Landis Refuses to Postpone Sale or to Approve Settlement Proposition Offered by Attorneys

Judge Landis yesterday refused peremptorily to block or postpone the sale of the Chicago and Milwaukee Electric railway. The special master's foreclosure sales of the line, which extends from Evanston to Milwaukee, will be held tomorrow, according to schedule. The sale of the Illinois property is to take place at Waukegan at 11 o'clock and the sale of the Wisconsin property at Racine at 3 o'clock. There is a total of $15,000,000 underlying bond issues of the property in the two states.

The sales Monday will wind up court proceedings that began in 1908 when the railway was thrown into the hands of receivers. There has been constant litigation since that time. The present reorganizers began work in the summer of 1914 by seeking to perfect plans for new financing and for an entrance into Chicago.

New proceedings were threatened yesterday when John Griffiths, the Chicago contractor, holding $200,000 worth of bonds, and Mrs. Mitalda W. Moses, owning $12,000, asked for a postponement pending the settlement of claims.

Judge Landis refused to allow the claims to be settled at this time or to postpone the sales. Lessing Rosenthal on behalf of the trustees and reorganizers had agreed upon $50,000 as the proper settlement of all claims against the railway.

Former Policeman Surrenders.

Hugh Reilly, discharged from the police force for shooting John J. Murphy, 6346 Greenwood avenue, in a saloon quarrel Feb. 17, gave himself up to the Woodlawn police yesterday. Reilly failed to appear in the Hyde Park court on Friday to answer a formal charge of assault.

HOLDS COUNCIL CAPABLE OF CONTROLLING UTILITIES.

Kumler Tells Legislative Body Members Are Able — Except Those of First Ward.

Ottawa, Ill., April 29.—[Special.]—The Chicago city council, which has been the target for opponents of Chicago home rule throughout the state, was vigorously defended today before the special legislative committee on public utilities by Preston Kumler, counsel for the committee. Mr. Kumler's qualification to speak on the subject is attested by his connection with the Municipal Voters' league, of which he was formerly secretary.

Mr. Kumler said it obviously would be improper for him to take a stand on the question of home rule, but he felt that he could not allow the charge the council is composed largely of gray wolves to go unchallenged for the reason it might appear it was sanctioned by the Municipal Voters' league.

"At the conclusion of a twenty year fight," he said, "we feel that the city council is a body in which the standard of integrity is high. It is a body which has shown adequate capacity and intelligence to take up the control of utility matters, should it be granted by the legislature. It is true there are a few sore spots. None of us is particularly proud of the representatives of the First ward, but it is probable we will have them with us until the big business men of Chicago cease to think it necessary to have handy men of this character."

The hearing today brought to an end the committee's tour of the state, made for the purpose of ascertaining the sentiment of the public regarding the utilities commission. It will conclude its hearings later in Chicago.

"—and then think of the price"

If you have talked much with Cadillac owners you know there is one thing they always say. They will talk for hours on the quality and low upkeep of the Cadillac and always end by saying: "—and then think of the price!"

If the Cadillac were just an ordinary car they would say: "What can you expect for the price?" If the Cadillac were a high priced car they would say: "It ought to be good at that price."

But it is the combination of the wonderful Cadillac efficiency and dependability with the moderate price of $2080 which makes men exclaim: "—and then think of the price!"

If you are considering paying more for any car, just remember that the Cadillac clientele is made up largely of men who used to pay fancy prices.

That is why so few cars are sold at more than the Cadillac price today. Most of those who pay $2080 or more select the Cadillac.

And if you are considering a cheaper car than the Cadillac, ask yourself this question: "Is it wise to accept such a sacrifice in quality just to 'save' a few hundred dollars?" You will spend that money somewhere and you can never buy as much with it as you get when you put it into a Cadillac.

The Cadillac is the only car in which extremes meet—the extreme of quality and the extreme of economy in first cost and upkeep. And that fact is beyond dispute. No wonder men exclaim: "—and then think of the price!"

You hope to feel that way about the car you buy, and you know you will be sure of it if you buy a Cadillac.

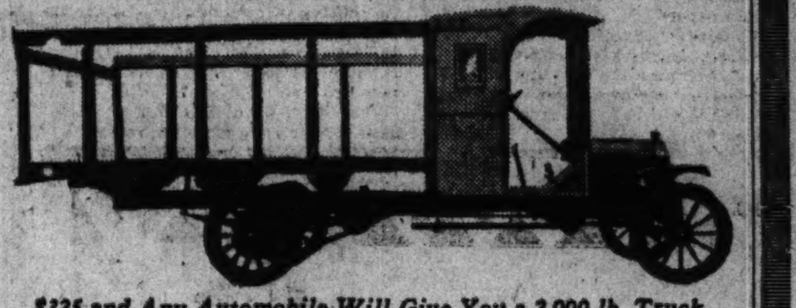
$299 and Your Ford Makes You This 2,000 lb. Truck



$325 and Any Automobile Will Give You a 2,000 lb. Truck.

In March, 1916, I purchased from the Aurora Demountable Truck Co., a new Ford Chassis, equipped with an Aurora Demountable Truck and body complete to handle boxes and barrels. Have hauled loads of lumber weighing 4,000 pounds and more.

This truck has given the best of satisfaction and I expect to put another into service very soon.

I strongly recommend the Aurora Demountable Truck to business people, who wish a light truck, where the maintenance is slight. W. L. BRISTOL.

The Aurora Demountable Truck is easily attached in a very short time. Your original auto is not dismantled—only the rear wheels and springs are removed. The original hub is placed in special drums and sprockets, using the rear axle as a jackshaft. The carrying capacity of this truck is 2,000 pounds, with a guarantee of 50 per cent overload.

On April 6th, 1916, I purchased an Aurora Demountable Truck attachment for my Reo car. It has proven satisfactory in every respect. I have hauled more than 3,000 lbs. of milk with this truck through mud which was hub deep, having no difficulty whatsoever. CHESTER COBLE, Oswego, Ill.

IN "BUTTERFLY"

Madame Miura, Japanese Clo Clo San, Again Takes Audience by Storm.

BY ERIC DE LAMARTER.

MME. TAMAKI MIURA, the Jap-Cio-Cio-San, quite took the town by storm last fall when she made her American debut in Puccini's "Madame Butterfly," and the few, very few, scoffers were silenced yesterday afternoon at the Blackstone theater when she repeated that triumph. Even with perspective and the relative lack of responsive at the close of a musical season, her interpretation made its same powerful appeal.

In two essentials has this impersonation changed. It has been enriched with pantomimic detail, and has broadened in tone. During the earlier scenes there was a feeling that Mme. Miura had rather overelaborated the study almost to fussiness, but the tragedy of the latter two acts were sterling. The effort for greater tone is not so happy, for the midget, silvery, odd timbre was one of her charms. In seeking breadth for certain points, she runs the risk of coarsening that quality.

Again may it be written that the cast was an able group of singers, with Elvira Leveroni as the Suzuki (an interpretation worthy of comparison with any), with Riccardo Martin as Pinkerton and Graham Marr as the consul. Mr. Martin gives excellent account of himself even though his absorption in its passion is not likely to "scorch the begonias," in the lingo of the poet. Mr. Marr sang admirably; his tone and his phrasing were delightful, and his portrayal of the character plausible.

The performance was excellent in all respects of orchestra, pit, and stage. The hard working conductor, Mr. Moranzoni, won honestly his curtain calls. The pictures, and the lighting in particular, were wholly admirable.

Followed then the ballet divertissements—Mlles. Butsova, Crombova, Collinette, Leggierova, and Griffova in a "polka pizzicato," charming and spirituelle; Mme. Pavlowa's "Dragonfly" solo dance, dainty beyond description; a "scene dansante" by Mlles. Kuhn and Plaskovietska and MM. Kobeleff and Vajinski; and "Les Undies," with Mme. Pavlowa and M. Volinine and the corps de ballet.

In the evening the third act of "La Bohème" was sung; the ballet "Elysian Fields" danced by Mme. Pavlowa and M. Volinine and company, Maria Gay and Bianca Saroya assisting; and the fourth act of "Carmen" was presented, with Maria Gay and Guiseppe Zenatello in the principal rôles, and the entire dancing organization.

WILL DISCUSS PAPER PRICE.

Illinois Press Association Hears Some Publications May Suspend.

What are we going to do for paper on which to print our news.

This is the question which the members of the Illinois Press association, composed of representatives of many of the papers in the states outside Chicago, are coming together at the Hotel Sherman next Wednesday to discuss. Before the war No. 1 print paper was selling in unlimited amounts at from $2.15 to $2.35 per hundred pounds. Now it sells at $3.50 a hundred and the publisher can get only what is parceled out to him. The stringency threatens to grow worse all through the year and may mean the suspension of publication, it is said, of some of the weaker papers.

The war has cut off the supply of rags, old paper, sulphite, and coloring matter, made labor scarce in the Canadian paper districts, and stopped paper manufacture in Europe, so that America has to supply the world.

MACK DECLARES SLEUTHS HIRED AUTO SHOW DIPS

Says Detectives Engaged Thieves on Basis of 20 Per Cent Split and Protection.

How "Eddie" Mack and three other pickpockets were hired by a pair of detective sergeants to rob patrons of the automobile show in the Coliseum in 1915 was made public yesterday by State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne.

Twenty per cent was the "split" of the proceeds to go to the detectives. These two men were to prevent any outcries of victims, thus permitting the quartet of pickpockets to operate without interruption.

Mr. Hoyne said that thirteen purses said to have been stolen from the visitors to the Coliseum are now in the state's attorney's office and will form a part of the evidence against the detective sergeants. These detectives are among the twenty or more alleged by Hoyne to have participated in criminal affairs in recent months.

Merit Board Action Due.

Hoyne announced that he will take action before the civil service commission and the grand jury before very long. Before he presents any facts, however, he says he will have more corroborative evidence that now is being gathered by his assistants.

"The story of how the two detective sergeants hired Mack and three other pickpockets to work the crowds at the autotmobile show is only a small part of Mack's amazing confession," Mr. Hoyne said. "Mack says that the matter was brought to him by a fixer selected by the two sergeants. This fixer explained what the sergeants wanted—twenty per cent of all money stolen.

Mack Approved Deal.

"Mack says that he O. K.'d the deal, and that later the two sergeants hired three pickpockets to work with him. Mack and the others worked in the washroom of the Coliseum, under the actual guidance of two detective sergeants, who promised them safety.

"Many persons attending the show were robbed of their purses, and Mack told of two of the empty pocketbooks being tossed up on top of the flush box in the washroom when two policemen not in on the deal suddenly made their appearance. Mack and his aids threw the purses up on the box as a ready means of getting rid of incriminating evidence.

"Six weeks ago Assistant State's Attorney A. E. Arkin and some of my detectives searched in the washroom. They found the purses in question.

Tossed Purses Behind Bar.

"Mack also told in his confession of how he and his aids were forced to toss empty pocketbooks behind the bar in the Coliseum. Eleven of these pocketbooks have also been recovered, and the thirteen purses repose in my office as corroborative evidence.

"Mack says that the detective sergeants themselves originated the plan for the robbing of persons attending the automobile show and received 20 per cent of the loot as they demanded. In all twenty or more members of the police department are involved in graft.

"As soon as my aids finish their work I shall take action against at least some of the men before the civil service commission or the grand jury."

Prominent Broker Victim.

According to Mr. Hoyne, one of the men robbed in the washroom is a La Salle street broker and the member of several clubs. He declined to make known his name. He said, however, that this man is out of town and will return Tuesday morning. He said he may make public the broker's identity at that time.

Another purse recovered apparently was the property of F. M. Yocum, believed to have been a resident of West Brooklyn, Ill. It was found on top of the flush box in the washroom, Mr. Hoyne said. There was no money in the purse, but it contained a certificate of deposit issued to Yocum on the H. F. Gehant Banking company, West Brooklyn, Sept. 19, 1914, for $1,500, and another such certificate on the same company, dated Jan. 26, 1915, for $1,500.

TWO STREET CARNIVALS ON.

Business men in two sections of Chicago are holding "boosting carnivals" this week, centering the activity of the districts involved. These streets were filled with tent shows, merry-go-rounds, and all manner of carnival attractions.

ALEXIAN BROS.' HOSPITAL PLANS GOLDEN JUBILEE.

Three Day Celebration May 9, 10, and 11 Will Signalize Progress Made in Fifty Years.

A three day celebration of the golden anniversary of the founding of the Alexian Brothers hospital at Belden and Racine avenues will be held on May 9, 10, and 11.

The hospital was founded by the Ven. Brother Bonaventure Thelen, who came to this country in 1865. He was shipwrecked and lost his papers from the mother house in Aix-la-Chapelle. He succeeded in making his way to Chicago, where he was cared for by friends until he could obtain new papers.

During that time he picked up his first patient on the street—an ill man whom he found in Franklin street—placed him on his back and carried him home, where he gave up his own bed and slept on the floor. He nursed the man back to health.

The next year more brothers came from Europe to aid in the work and the hospital was established. Since then more than 100,000 patients have been cared for, 35,000 of whom received free treatment. All are welcome at the hospital and questions as to creed and nationality are never asked.

In connection with the jubilee celebration a public subscription is being taken up to carry on the work.

DETECTIVES OF ROMANCE TO GET CHANCE IN CHICAGO.

Men of Small Stature to Be Eligible Without Passing Through Uniformed Class.

Small men are going to have a chance in the police department, if the plans of Mayor Thompson and Capt. Percy B. Coffin, president of the civil service commission, are successful.

Capt. Coffin leaves tomorrow for New York and other eastern cities to make a study of police organization. He believes the result of his study will aid in the reorganization rules now being prepared by the civil board.

"I believe we should have a rule permitting men to enter the rank of second class detectives without going through the uniformed division," said Coffin. "Strength is not necessary to good detective work. The mayor believes a uniformed man should make arrests, as crooks are apt to get too well acquainted with detectives. Thus, small men, if they are smart detectives, can have a chance to do the real work."

FINK CHARGES PLOT TO WRECK LORIMER'S BANK

Blames Forgan, Harkin, and 'The Tribune' for La Salle's Downfall.

Persecution, the bulwark of William Lorimer's defense, was the theme of argument by Albert Fink, the former senator's counsel, in Judge Dever's court yesterday. James B. Forgan, Daniel V. Harkin, and THE TRIBUNE were named by the Lorimer attorney as the arch conspirators who brought about the downfall of the La Salle Street Trust and Savings bank and the allied banks and enterprises of the Lorimer-Munday-Huttig chain in the summer of 1914.

In addition, Fink declared that if the testimony given on the witness stand by Carter H. Harrison is true Harrison and Forgan are guilty of a conspiracy against the surety companies which guaranteed the municipal deposits in the La Salle Street bank.

Harrison Party to Plot.

"Mr. Forgan went to Mayor Harrison, told him the bank was insolvent, and advised him to insure the city funds," Fink said to the jurors. "That is what Harrison himself told you. If that is true, we would prove a criminal conspiracy. Would not that be the grossest fraud against the insurance companies?

"The medicine concocted for the bank on June 12, 1914, was a dose which it could not stand. Before I get through I am going to show you that this bank was doomed from the day of its birth, and I am going to prove to you that when it was closed on the morning of June 12 it was closed in pursuance of a deliberate, premeditated, well balanced plan conceived by Harkin before he ever went to the bank.

Likens Forgan to Morgan.

Fink then compared Mr. Forgan to the late J. Pierpont Morgan.

"Mr. Forgan," he said, "is a great and good man, but, like Mr. Morgan, he must rule or ruin. In 1907 Mr. Morgan said that the crooked banking in New York must stop. His bank ceased to clear for the Knickerbocker Trust company, and he bore that fact to the newspapers. The result was that the Knickerbocker Trust company closed its doors, precipitating the panic of 1907.

"A later examination, however, showed that it was not insolvent, and it has since opened its doors. I believe that the very same motive that led Mr. Morgan to force the New York bank to the wall was the same that incited Mr. Forgan to action in Chicago.

"Somewhere Mr. Forgan got the idea, whether rightly or wrongly makes no difference, that the La Salle bank would not help the city, and he governed his actions accordingly.

Assails "The Tribune."

"That Harkin had determined to close the bank before he ever arrived there is evident from the testimony. There again THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE comes into the case. I asked Colin C. H. Fyffe if he knew the bank's condition, and he said yes, that he knew the day before that the bank would not open.

"'Who told you?' I asked him, and then, after a perceptible pause, he answered, 'R. R. McCormick.' When I asked him who Mr. McCormick was he paused again, and then said, 'A citizen of Chicago,' and when I insisted he said that Mr. McCormick was connected with THE TRIBUNE.

"Now let us take stock of what we have. Mr. Forgan knew the week before the failure that the bank would close. Mr. McCormick, president of THE TRIBUNE, knew the day before that it would not open and it didn't. Harkin closed it. Now, gentlemen, was there any connection between Forgan, McCormick, and Harkin, or was it just an accident?"

Mr. Fink will resume his argument tomorrow.

G. C. KRONANDER STILL GONE

Wife Appeals for Missing Husband to Come Back and Be Forgiven.

Search is being made for G. C. Kronander of 4402 Berkeley avenue, a clothing designer, who disappeared on April 2. Mrs. Katherine Kronander, his wife, who has appealed to THE TRIBUNE to aid her in finding him, believes he may have suffered loss of memory from overstudy. He is a linguist and speaks five languages fluently.

"I want him to know that no matter what is the trouble I will forgive him," said Mrs. Kronander. "I know he will come back to me if THE TRIBUNE helps me, because he always reads that paper."

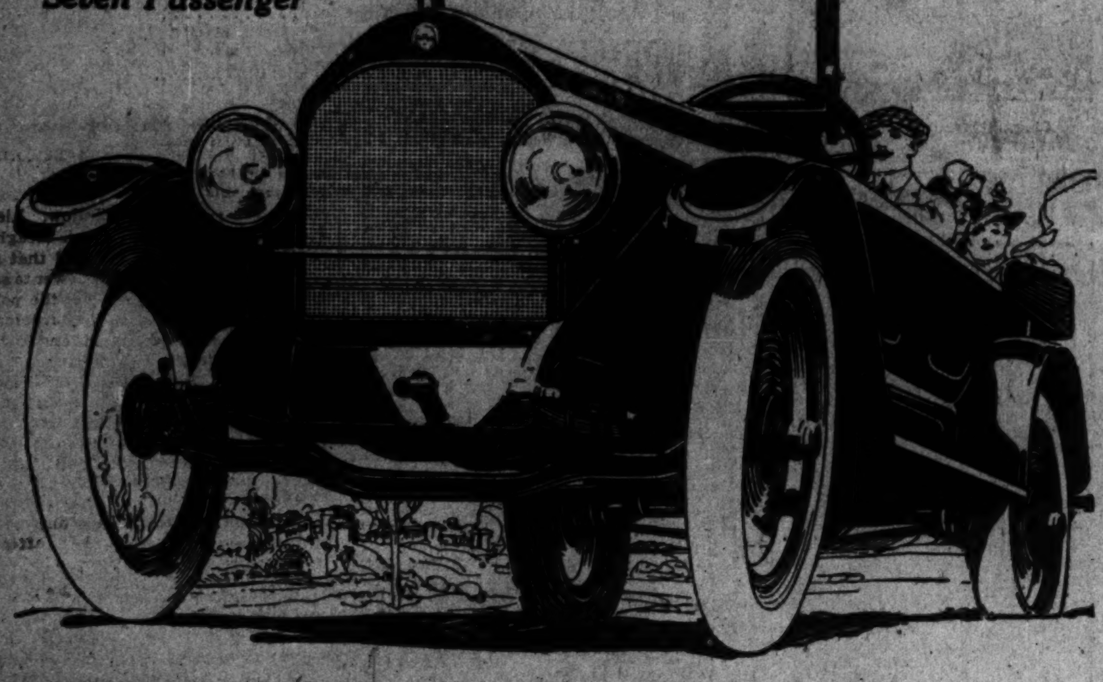
Jeffery Light "Six"
Seven Passenger



Make Them Take You Up a Hill Slowly On High

THERE is many a car which gained its reputation for hill climbing by taking a grade with a bang!

The real test of a car's hill-climbing ability, its power, its stamina, is its ability to take a grade on high gear at the regular ordinary driving speeds.

It is a fact that not only will the Jeffery Light "Six" starting at the bottom of a hill, at say five miles per hour, pull the grade at the top at a faster speed than any other six in its class—but it will climb grades at a walk, which other cars can only make with a rapid start and at top speed.

No other car selling at less than $2000 can match this Jeffery "Six" in hill climbing, in flexibility, in acceleration, in any test of engine power and stamina.

Take nobody's word for this.

Select your own test. You may make it flexibility, performance through sand and Cook county's mud, hill-climbing ability—whatever you wish, or all of them combined, just as you wish. We will then take this car out on a side by side test with any other car in its price class which you can persuade to make the trial, and if we cannot out-demonstrate the other car—if we cannot prove to your satisfaction that we have in this Jeffery a car of superior performance—you are to buy the other car.

Not only is this new Jeffery the most powerful car ever sold at its price, but it is one of the most beautiful as well. There is nothing else to compare with it in smartness—no other in which you would rather be seen.

TODAY-OFFICIAL GRAND OPENING "RAVINIA HIGHLANDS"

—In the FASHIONABLE HIGHLAND PARK-RAVINIA NORTH SHORE DISTRICT

This is an announcement of few words and no pictures. Little is needed to drive home the fact that the most picturesque, the most aristocratic and the most desirable residence property available to Chicago families for living purposes is that portion of the North Shore embracing and surrounding the Highland Park-Ravinia district. To dwell on the rare beauties of the woods and ravines and the matchless splendor of the hundreds of aristocratic estates owned by the rich and influential men of Chicago who have selected the North Shore as a place of residence in preference to any other locality around Chicago—to attempt to portray by picture or by illustration the grandeur and attractiveness of this district, we say, would be to "paint the lily."

Suffice it to say that North Shore property, and particularly property in the Highland Park-Ravinia district (which is acknowledged to be the most beautiful and desirable, as well as the most highly restricted part of the North Shore) has long been considered prohibitive in price to the average family of moderate means who have demanded something a little better in the way of social advantages than is afforded by the average high class city or suburban district. Not only have the restrictions upon property in this district been extremely rigid; the property itself has been held at fancy prices. It has remained for the Bartlett organization, with its unmatched facilities for the acquisition of desirable property at rock bottom cash prices, to obtain a parcel of 105 acres in the most attractive part of this district—at a figure that now permits us to offer restricted home sites at prices that none can duplicate. In short, this is the greatest bargain in desirable residence property that has ever been offered in the North Shore district—or that can ever be offered here. We believe that this opening announcement—with a few smaller ads that are planned to follow—will be sufficient to dispose of the entire tract within record-breaking time. The opportunity to purchase will be short-lived. The prices and the property itself are the proof. You but need to see what we are offering to form the absolute and thorough conclusion that we state an actual fact when we prophesy that there will not be a foot of this property remaining thirty days from now. The choice sites will be FIRST TO GO. You owe it to yourself to go out today and inspect Ravinia Highlands. See those wonderfully situated lots on Green Bay Road which overlook the famous Skokie Valley—beautiful beyond all conception. See the residence lots on Burton Avenue at $349 and up. See those extra choice wooded lots on Glencoe Avenue at $499 to $599. See the valuable business corners offered.

Ride around in one of our autos and see the wonderful country surrounding us—the estates costing hundreds of thousands of dollars, the palatial homes of Ravinia and Highland Park, the wonderful bathing beaches just a few blocks away. See the fine schools, the magnificent churches and all the other religious, educational and social institutions for which the villages of Highland Park and Ravinia are noted. Then go back again and look at our property. Note how favorably and beautifully it is situated. Think of these desirable restricted home sites being offered at the unheard of low prices which we ask. Today is your first—and YOUR BEST opportunity. Today marks the official opening of this choice subdivision. There are but 377 lots in the present offering. Come out and get an early pick.

Society Movie Actors Bawled Out by Director

They Looked Into Camera and the Manager Became Sarcastic.

THEN THEY IMPROVED

Society began to learn the inside of movie acting at Onwentsia yesterday when a couple of dozen Lake Shore drive and north shore young women and their escorts were ignominiously "called down" for lack of fidelity in screen acting.

The society people appeared in a scene in the Casino club movie "Cousin Jim; or, the Mystery of the Lost Fraternity Pin." Several scenes already have been taken in the Casino club and in a number of Lake Shore drive drawing rooms.

Tea and Polo.

Yesterday was the day for the tea scene and the polo scene at Onwentsia. The tea scene was laid on the veranda of the clubhouse.

Those in the picture were eager for the camera to start grinding; too eager thought the director. Among the society actors were Mrs. J. Ogden Armour and Miss Lolita Armour, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. McBirney, Mrs. A. S. Muir, Mrs. Kenneth Goodman, Mrs. Isabel Robbins, Mrs. LeRoy Fuller, Miss Gladys High and the Misses Mildred and Anita Blair.

The tea scene was ready and the camera man was set to grind. At the signal the film began to spin and the tea scene was on. But it was on all wrong.

Director Hitchcock leaped frantically hither and yon and made gestures and uttered shouts in many tones. But it was all to no effect. Then he stopped the camera.

The director leaped upon a chair and commanded silence.

"Ladies and gentlemen," said he in stern tones, "we must do better.

"We are making a picture upon which the public is to gaze. It is not a picture to look at the public. If you look into the camera the picture on the screen will be paying its attention to the audience.

Thoughts on "Audiences."

"Audiences do not like to be observed, even from screens. On the contrary audiences like to do the observing. It is a little habit of audiences to desire the right to observe in their own little way.

"Please do not look into the camera. I realize that you are not really movie actors (that hurt), but, like all movie actors, you must learn. If you look into the camera you are looking at the audience. The audience doesn't want that.

"You have wasted ninety feet of film. Film is expensive. It is cheap to pose properly. Let's do it properly."

The picture was made all over again. The "lens fiends" behaved and looked at each other. In the polo scene there was no looking into the lens, for the players were altogether too busy with the game to take thought for the camera. There was no "retake."

CHICAGO REPORTED CLEAN AFTER AN INVESTIGATION.

Removing a Cinder from Our Eye, We Quote W. R. Hyde of the Association of Commerce.

Chicago is spick and span. Spick means clean and span means cleaner than that. It is estimated that at least 50,000 men, women, and children, besides the regular street cleaning department, worked all week burnishing up the city, clearing vacant lots of rubbish, setting back yards to rights, and removing dirt from the alleys.

"Investigators sent to various parts of the city by the clean up and paint up campaign committee of the paint, oil, and varnish section of the Chicago Association of Commerce reported last night that the citizens have taken more pains with the job than ever before.

REALTY FIRM PAYS CLIENTS' TAXES WITHOUT CONTEST.

Aldis & Co. Gives Out Statement Explaining Stand on Move to Fight Alleged Illegal Levy.

"Aldis & Co. are paying in full without contest all the taxes of their clients. They have sent to their clients full information, giving the names of the larger property owners who are going to contest and who are going to pay in full, as well as their reasons pro and con. They have informed their clients that many property owners consider taxes here high and burdensome, and are therefore in a mood to contest. Also they suggest that the taxing authorities should be taught a lesson in carefulness.

"On the other hand, they explained that the withholding of the county tax would be withholding money from the charitable institutions of the county and that in any event only a small proportion of the property holders of the whole city could contest.

"Our clients instructed us to pay in full without contest. They were influenced in the main by a belief that fighting taxes on technical grounds was not good public policy and also, probably, because they felt that in contesting they would be obtaining an advantaget over the majority of their fellow taxpayers.

"Personally, we are glad that they adopted this plan, although there is mor reason for contesting 12 cents of the city tax, which seems to be entirely illegal.'

MRS. CAPPER GETS DIVORCE.

Wife of Haberdasher's Son Tells Court of Acts of Cruelty by Her Husband.

Mrs. Josephine Kiernan Capper told Judge Kersten yesterday of cruelty against her by her husband, Howard C. Capper, son of John S. Capper, president of Capper & Capper, haberdashers. Judge Kersten said he would grant a divorce. Alimony settlement was made.

SCHOOL BOARD WILL GUARD MORRISON LANDS.

Claim to Properties Named in Mysterious Transaction Will Be Pressed if Need Arises.

A number of employés of the board of education was set to work yesterday to investigate the real estate transaction whereby Edward W. Morrison, aged recluse, transferred some $2,000,000 worth of property to Attorney James R. Ward "for $100,000 and other considerations."

The investigation, under the direction of Angus Roy Shannon, attorney for the school board, is being made to protect the board's interests in the properties involved. Under the terms of his father's will, it is understood, they are to go to the board following Morrison's death.

A joint meeting of school board representatives and relatives of Morrison interested in the properties involved is to be held on Tuesday or Wednesday, it was stated by Frank T. Fowler.

Succumbs to Gas Poisoning.

William Saunders of 1002 West Monroe street, a molder, died of gas poisoning yesterday in the county hospital. He was found unconscious in his room and gas escaping from a gas plate on a chair. Mrs. Mary Hayes, rooming housekeeper, told the police that Saunders had been drinking.

U. S. WILL MAKE AN INQUIRY ON FATE OF MISS MAZARYK.

Secretary of State Says Vienna Will Be Asked Whether or Not She Was Executed.

Washington, D. C., April 29.—[Special.]—Secretary of State Lansing today said the United States would make an inquiry of the Vienna foreign office concerning the rumors that Miss Alice Mazaryk, formerly a settlement worker in Chicago, had been imprisoned and then executed for treason.

Congressman Sabath of Chicago asked for the inquiry on the ground that an expression of interest by the United States might serve to bring about clemency from the Vienna government if Miss Mazaryk has not been executed already.

CHICAGO WOMEN AID.

A meeting at which a committee was organized to appeal for aid in effecting the release of Miss Mazaryk was held yesterday at the Woman's City club.

The meeting was called by Miss Mary E. McDowell of the University of Chicago settlement, where Miss Mazaryk was a resident for several months. Besides Miss McDowell, those on the committee are Miss Grace Abbott and Miss Sophonisba Breckinridge.

YOUTH CANNOT ADMIT SLAYING TO HIS MOTHER

Hettinger Disavows Confession Before Her, Then Retells Story of the Murder.

EXAMINED BY AN ALIENIST.

The red crime of murder rests lightly on Edgar Hettinger's numb, dwarfed soul, but in the uncalloused temple of his love and respect for "Ma-aaa" he quakes for fear that she will discover.

That fear yesterday kept him hidden behind his hands in her presence, and he concealed the deed which he so debonairly confessed to the police back of a weakly whine, "I don't remember. I didn't tell them that."

And Mrs. John Colba cannot see in her half witted son the predatory, nocturnal raider who crept across roofs to the flat of Mrs. Agnes Middleton and murdered her with hammer and razor for her diamond rings.

"You police have extorted that confession from him!" she snapped at Capt. Thomas Meagher. "You hear? He says he didn't do it."

Smirks Over Mother's Head.

At that young Hettinger raised his parchment colored face from his hands and grinned over her head a smirk of sheerest cunning at the captain. Capt. Meagher answered Mrs. Colba's charge with warm but courteous indignation.

"Madam," he said, "you can't believe that we would deliberately fasten this crime on your son for the mere purpose of furnishing the law with a victim!"

"I don't know," answered Mrs. Colba severely. "This weak little lamb could be frightened to say anything, he's such a scary coward."

Mrs. Colba visited the Shakespeare avenue police station twice yesterday. On neither occasion was she able to secure from him the admission he freely made to the police.

Rehearses His Confession.

Ten minutes after she left the station in the afternoon the boy had completely rehearsed his confession to Assistant State's Attorney Z. H. Kadow, Lieut. Joseph Palczynski, and Capt. Meagher.

Mrs. Colba clearly indicated that she would do everything in her power to save her son and declared that if the police succeed in proving him the murderer he should be adjudged insane and put in some institution.

Hettinger's counsel, Attorney Guy M. Walker, and an alienist, Dr. J. C. Gill, accompanied Mrs. Colba to the station on her second visit, and the alien physician made a thorough examination of the boy. He tested him in reading and writing and memory.

Dr. Gill refused to express any opinion of the boy's mental condition after his examination.

Knew Mind Was Weak.

"I have always known Edgar was weak minded," said Mrs. Hettinger. "I never knew anything about his morals—I supposed they were all right. He was always complaining that he felt sick in the head, and he was altogether unable to take his own part where courage was required. I never believed him vicious. I can't believe my boy did it."

From Mr. Colba, however, came a different story as to Edgar's laziness. He admitted that he had quarreled frequently with his stepson and declared that the boy had threatened, "I'll get you some day," at the same time circling his throat suggestively with a finger.

Edgar denied that he had a sweetheart, although he said there was a girl whom he enjoyed taking out. But he said it was not so much for her as the desire for plenty of money that he did the crime.

CHEMISTS READY TO AID DEFENSE IF WAR COMES

Survey of Illinois Shows State a Big Factor in Munitions Making.

Preliminary reports to the Illinois committee of the naval consulting board, made public yesterday, indicate that the chemists in the state will make a good account of themselves in event of war against the United States.

The state survey shows that 10 per cent of all the chemists in the country are residents of Illinois and that chemical resources of the state for production of war materials are far greater than was estimated when the committee was created.

Chemists Enthusiastic.

The chemical end of the investigation to determine what Illinois can do in aid of national defense has been directed by William Hoskins of Mariner & Hoskins, representing the American Chemical society on the Illinois committee. Mr. Hoskins reported, at committee headquarters in the Monadnock building, that chemical experts and producers in the state have enthusiastically aided in the survey.

"The present war is a chemists' war," said Mr. Hoskins. "That fact is recognized unanimously by the chemists of Illinois, who are now studying how to so fortify industry against dependence on imports that America can at all times supply its chemical needs. Having that, no foe may dare to strike us.

Part Taken in Arms Making.

"As to armament, ordnance, and rifles, the special tools for their manufacture, as well as the materials used in them, must be manufactured under the most watchful care of the chemist. As to explosives, it is obviously the work of the chemist to produce them. Sulphuric, nitric, and carbolic acid, benzol, naphthalene, and ammonia can be produced only under most scrupulous chemical inspection.

"Without a continuous supply of such chemicals and many others, artillery is valueless and armies mere aggregations of men. In case of a shortage of any of these vital substances it is up to the chemists to provide new sources of supply."

LANDIS OVERRULES SHEEAN.

WEEKLY REVIEW of the WAR

by CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY

GENERAL.

The British premier has brought out in the house of commons that unless a large number of single men immediately enlist it will be necessary to take some steps to enforce the enlistment of enough men to make good British casualties of the last week.

A German auxiliary cruiser was captured in an attempt to land arms in Ireland. The crew blew up the ship subsequently. At the same time Sir Roger Casement, with several companions, was captured as he landed. Shortly after there was a serious outbreak in Dublin, during which the rebels seized several parts of the city. They have not yet been dispossessed.

The indications are that the revolt is spreading. At practically the same time a number of German cruisers raided the British east coast near Lowstoft without marked result.

The last of the week the Germans made infantry attacks at hill 304, west of the Meuse, and at Thianmont and along the Douaumont-Vaux line, but without result.

FRENCH FRONT.

During the week the Germans have made slight gains southeast of Haucourt and west of Dead Man's hill. A number of French counter attacks along various parts of the line have failed, with the exception of some small ones in Avoccurt wood.

The Germans have had a local success in an attack northeast of Celles in the Vosges. There has been nothing of importance along the rest of the line. More Russian troops have arrived in Marseilles.

ITALIAN FRONT.

There have been several local affairs along this front during the last week, but nothing of importance.

RUSSIAN FRONT.

Along most of the front there has been nothing of importance. South of the Naroc the Germans in a local attack captured Russian positions and 5,600 officers and enlisted men.

ARMENIA.

The Russians have been defeated in the region of Bitlis and driven back to the east of Mush. Along various other parts of the line the Russians have repulsed the Turkish attacks.

MESOPOTAMIA.

The Anglo-Indian force of nearly 10,000 men under Gen. Townshend at Kut-el-Amara surrendered to the Turks. All guns and munitions were destroyed. The capitulation of Kut is the first instance in the present war, and one of the few occasions in more than a century of wars, in which a British garrison besieged by the enemy has been forced to surrender.

EGYPT.

During the week the Turks raided and captured the Quatia oasis east of the Suez canal, but later were driven out.

GERMAN EAST AFRICA.

The British are successfully advancing into German East Africa, the last of Germany's colonies.

SUMMARY.

The fighting around Verdun remains of paramount importance, as the allies apparently are unable to initiate attacks in other parts of the French theater of war and in all the other European theaters of war, valuable as they would be under existing circumstances.

The surrender of the British force at Kut-el-Amara will free a considerable number of Turkish troops who can now be used against the relief force. As this relief force has been beaten recently by the Turks, the probabilities are that the Turkish reinforcements caused by the surrender of Kut-el-Amara will result in the retirement of the relief force.

JOHN BULL MADE SOBERER BY WAR AND DRINK LAW.

Intoxication Reduced 50 Per Cent During Nine Months—Further Decline Forecast.

LONDON, April 20.—[Correspondence.]—The results of the resolute methods applied by England to the regulation of the drink problem nine months ago, after the first lessons of the war's demands had been learned, are discussed in an interview with a correspondent of the Associated Press by Lord D'Abernon, chairman of the central liquor traffic control board, the organization having the work in hand.

Briefly, in areas accounting for 29,000,000 out of the 43,000,000 population over which the board has extended its influence, it has reduced public drunkenness roughly by 50 per cent. The new regulations, however, will not extend beyond England, Scotland, and Wales.

One of Lord D'Abernon's most striking statements was his forecast that were the problem of intemperance attacked with vigor and skill three-fourths of the drink evil might never recur.

"That, of course, is one man's opinion only," he emphasized, "but I believe it is fully justified.

"One of the best outward results of the board's work is the reduction in the number of convictions for drunkenness with aggravations, aggravations usually representing disorder and assault. The reduction in the number of these cases has been even greater than in the number of simple drunkenness. While not explained, this feature is proving of vast interest to all students of the problem."

GILLETT SEES CHILDREN ON RETURN FROM FLORIDA.

Because Charles W. Jr. Demurred from Taking Ride to Chicago They Remained on North Shore.

Charles W. Gillett visited his children in Lake Forest yesterday, paying them the first visit since their return last week from Palm Beach. This was the second visit of the broker to his children since the court decreed that their mother, Mrs. Harold J. Bryant, should retain their custody, though he might visit them.

Gillett, accompanied by a nursemaid and a woman friend, came for the children in an automobile. They drove to Deerpath inn.

Gillett proposed that they drive down to Chicago for dinner at Gillett's town house, but Charles Jr. demurred at this and protested so vigorously when his father tried to place him in the automobile that Gillett was compelled to call off the Chicago trip and take dinner at the inn instead.

Packards Prove Themselves Better

John D. Shelhamer, of the Carey Brick Company of Chicago, says:

"We have standardized Packard trucks because they have been demonstrating their superiority for years. Our 1909 Packard is good for many seasons yet.

"I don't believe that any other trucks made would haul bricks as cheaply as our six Packards. You couldn't sell me anything else."

Thousands of American merchants, experienced in the purchase and operation of motor trucks, are discarding inferior machines and installing Packards. It has cost them money to learn that a cheaply constructed machine, assembled from the four corners of the world, is really the most expensive they can buy.

The total list price of all parts, except tires, of the Packard Chainless Truck chassis is less than the list price of the assembled chassis. Owners of Packard trucks are not at the mercy of sundry parts-makers.

There are seven sizes of Packard Chainless Trucks—1 to 6½ tons—with frame lengths and body designs to meet every demand.

Monday Also to See 508,100 Laborers Affected by Lockouts and Strikes.

New York, April 29.—May day will usher in an unprecedented labor situation in the United States. The day formerly marked in Europe by labor disturbances will dawn in the United States with Mr. American Laboring Man taking his dinner pail and hustling off to his work, knowing that from that time on he will draw down a daily increase of $204,616 in wages.

Statistics gathered by the United Press today show that wage increases affecting 706,500 workers and totaling $5,368,872 monthly, or $64,426,464 a year, will go into effect on May 1. At the same time strikes, lockouts, and labor troubles, impending or in force, will affect 508,100 workers.

U. S. Steel Raise Leads.

Foremost in the wage increases which will become effective May 1 are those granted by the United States Steel corporation—250,000 men, at a monthly increase in the pay roll of $1,660,000; a further boost to Bethlehem Steel company employés, affecting 24,000 men and adding $170,000 to the monthly pay roll; Pittsburgh district coal miners, 40,000 men, boosting the monthly roll $215,000.

The eight hour day is the rock on which the workers and employers have split in most of the impending or pending strikes. The crisis in the demand of 175,000 anthracite coal miners, asking recognition of the union and an eight hour day, may come Monday.

Trouble in New York.

A lockout of cloak makers in New York is expected by Wednesday to result in a strike of 200,000 cloak makers and garment workers.

Brooklyn stevedores, tugboat men, dock men, and marine engineers are all involved in disputes with their employers over wage scales and union hours.

Munitions workers in and around Pittsburgh, including the Westinghouse plant, are planning to force an eight hour day, possibly by a strike which would involve at least 70,000, and possibly more men.

Unique in labor records is the strike of 320 car men in Wilkesbarre, who have been out since Oct. 14, 1915.

In the western mining centers wages have been boosted again. Miners are so scarce in the Telluride district of Colorado that the authorities are appealing for help.

No Strike on Coast.

From San Francisco, Labor Leader P. H. McCarthy reports:

"There are not enough wage increases in sight here to buy the hole in the middle of a doughnut. No strikes are inpending—we leave such fancy business to easterners. Here we do things. We rebuilt the city without a strike, built the exposition without a strike, and don't intend to strike now."

The St. Louis Central Trades union reports the best year from the standpoint of labor in decades.

Detroit labor leaders say the wages paid there are the highest in history, with a good demand for both skilled and unskilled workers.

Average Raise 11 Per Cent.

Washington, D. C., April 29.—The average wage increase—in those industries where there have been increases—in the United States in the last year has been 11 per cent, according to figures compiled by the bureau of labor statistics, federal reserve agents, and the American Federation of Labor today. The following average increases have been put into effect:

Nineteen per cent—Paint manufacturing industries.

Seventeen per cent—Automobile and auto part factories.

Fifteen per cent—Flour and grist mill workers, shipbuilders, electrical supply industries, iron and steel workers.

Fourteen per cent—Rubber goods, machinery, foundry, locomotives.

Thirteen per cent—Cement, lime, dry goods, hardware, paper, and products.

Twelve per cent—Pottery, pressed brick, groceries, woolens.

Eleven per cent—Chemicals, clothing, soap, fertilizer.

Ten per cent—Lumber, mill work, slaughtering.

Eight per cent—Confectionary, common cotton goods.

Seven per cent—Department stores, hats, watches, advertising, office machine, dental supplies, roofing materials.

Six per cent—Tobacco and cigars.

Five per cent—Coal and coal mining, carpets, rugs, linoleum, glasses.

For the most part these increases have gone to skilled labor, but there have been numerous increases in wages paid unskilled labor. The figures given do not include increases that have taken the form of bonus, as in many munitions plants.

Eight hour day agitation is playing a big part in the change brought about. This was emphasized by Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, who has just returned from a trip to Pittsburgh and Youngstown.

"There is a greater unrest today than has been manifest in many years," Morrison said. "To some this condition is alarming, but I believe discontent is a sign of life.

"Workers are demanding an eight hour day and I venture the opinion that most of the large strikes today, either now or prospective, are because of this demand."

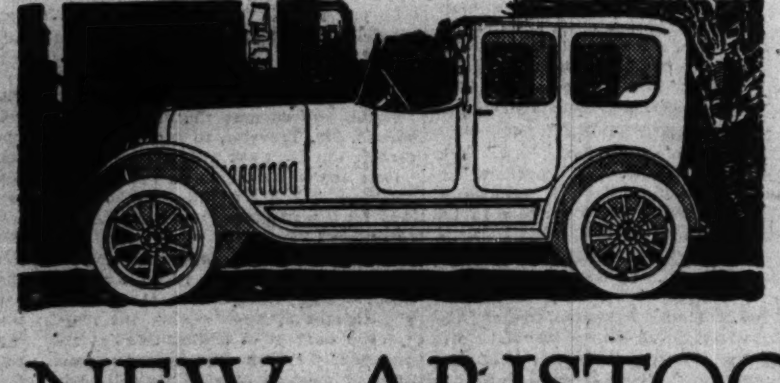
HUDSON SUPER-SIX AS A TOWN CAR



THE NEW ARISTOCRAT

Among city models, in the artist's eye, the Town Car reigns supreme. It has no seasons. Summer or winter, or any occasion, it appears the autocrat. It is also the comfort car.

So the Hudson Company, for their Super-Six, designed a Town Car masterpiece. They employed craftsmen of international repute. Men who always have held top place in coach building in America. They employed artists whose motor car bodies have sold as high as $10,000 each. And this Town Car model is the superb result.

There are six luxurious bodies brought out for the Hudson Super-Six. All are built to match the supremacy of this patented motor—the greatest in the world. But only 300 will be equipped with this Town Car body this season. So the model will be exclusive.

This car will stand out anywhere as exquisite and distinctive. It marks the maximum in style and elegance. The price is but $2500 at Detroit. High-grade Town Cars heretofore have cost nearly twice as much. Immediate delivery is possible.

Said the Critic—

"Give us TRACTION,— —without Friction!"

GOODRICH SAFETY TREAD

WHEN there arose, in the Tire Industry, a sound of Many Voices,—each clamoring that its Owner had the very best "Non-Skid" design that ever did happen on a Tire, our Professional Critic said, with much Chuckle,—"Give us Traction without Friction!"

We are glad to have met that "Poser" more than half-way.

Here's how and why.

Makers of "Non-Skid" Tires, in a mad effort to produce maximum Traction, have done the very natural thing of being too successful.

Too successful in gaining Traction, not merely through "Non-Skid" designs, but through providing a sandpapery texture in Tire Tread Rubber which grinds against the pavement, wearing out as it grinds.

Of course such Treads HAD to be made very thick, and the Tires very HEAVY, in order not to wear out too soon under such constant grinding, with such constant strain on the Rubber Adhesive between the many layers of Fabric in their necessarily cumbrous construction.

Of course, such Tires were heavy in that part of the Car below the Springs where Engineers say that every pound of weight counts as more than twenty pounds placed above the springs.

But beyond all this, their great thickness, the many layers of Fabric, and the stout Tread of gritty, sandpapery, Rubber, made them naturally stiff, unyielding, hard to bend, and conform where obstacles were struck,—hard to drive with moderate power,—and slow to coast down hills (which proved all this).

The intention was good, but the result was a relatively hot, stiff, Tire, with a Traction-wave to overcome that went far toward boosting the Sales of Gasolene.

Well,—

—Making the Silvertown Cord Tire, taught us a few lessons in the manufacture of lighter, cooler, more flexible and enduring FABRIC Tires.

THE "Silvertown" Tire, you know, gains its marvellous Speed (and the Coasting qualities that demonstrate its Speed) primarily through having only TWO layers of Cords, laid transversely.

Of course, these TWO layers bend more readily than Five, Six, or Seven Layers of Fabric do (or of Cord would).

But, we found it necessary, in order to conserve that flexibility (in the Two-cord construction), to put a Rubber Tread over it which was equally flexible,—equally strong,—and elastic enough to act as a sort of spring between the Earth and the Tire-casing, when Brakes were thrown on at stopping, or clutch thrown in at starting.

So, we had to devise practically a new kind of Rubber,—for this purpose TWO YEARS AGO.

This new type of black "Barefoot Rubber" now does for GOODRICH Tires a work similar to that done by the wonderful Alloys of Steel and Bronze in modern Motor Car construction.

It multiplies Rubber Efficiency, for Tire purposes, while decreasing its Weight, and without increasing its Bulk, or its Cost to you.

AS we cannot yet supply half the demand for "Silvertown Cord Tires" (until enough manufacturing equipment can be constructed) we decided to use this wonderfully efficient black "Barefoot Rubber" in all Goodrich FABRIC Tires for 1916.

This makes them the most Resilient and Responsive-to-Power,—the most Long-Lived and Lively, of all FABRIC Tires, at ANY price,—without increasing their price to you.

We call this new Hyper-Rubber by the name and brand of "Barefoot Rubber."

Because, it CLINGS to the pavement for the same sort of reason that your bare foot clings to a slippery floor, while being flexible, stretchy, springy, and light.

TENACIOUS, resilient, enduring, this "Barefoot Rubber" you today get in all black tread Goodrich Fabric Tires,—Goodrich Motor-Cycle Tires,—Goodrich Truck Tires,—Goodrich Bicycle Tires,—Goodrich Rubber Boots, Overshoes, Soles and Heels, and in none but GOODRICH products.

Get a Sliver of it from your nearest Goodrich Dealer's or Branch. Stretch it thousands of times, but break it you can't.

Then test out a pair of these very moderately priced black tread FABRIC Tires, and see!

"Our Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

UNIVERSAL SERVICE.

If the nation is to be merely a geographical incident and government to have no other functions than coining money, collecting taxes, dredging rivers, building postoffices, and delivering mail, it may be only just to leave it to each individual, when the nation is in trouble, whether he shall volunteer for service.

If the government assumes no important duties it may be only fair to allow duty to be the choice of the citizen.

But if no obligation is imposed either on the government or on the citizen in the free will system, the case certainly is different in universal service. There an obligation is imposed upon the citizen. It also must be undertaken by the government. Service must be reciprocal.

In Great Britain the aristocrat knows that he has had the soft side of life. His nation has provided pleasant conditions for him. He was born to advantages. The cream of life was in his bowl. And if nothing else can be said for him it must be said that when the time for sacrifices comes he pays his debt to good fortune. He offers himself.

The Clyde striker has not been provided with pleasant conditions. To the extent that they were at all pleasant he made them so himself. Occasionally when he attempted, by force, to adjust them more nearly to his idea of what they ought to be, the government intervened, in the name of law and by force, to prevent him from making life pleasanter.

Lloyd-George saw that the nation could not neglect the Clyde worker and be a sound nation. Lloyd-George had studied Germany. Germany had conscription. It demanded the services of all citizens as they might be needed and it trained them to be useful when they were needed. It also recognized that conscription would be hateful and the conscripts not only unwilling but also unhealthy unless the state gave a service back to them.

Germany tried to make the German empire worth while to the German citizen. We see the fact that it succeeded. Here in the United States for a long time we were amazed by the German's furious declamation in behalf of his kultur. We misunderstood the word and thought he was violent about some product of the universities or of erudition. We did not know he was talking about his state as an agency for the promotion of German welfare. We did not know that he was talking about applied humanity and that he was defying the world to produce a system which equaled his for the comfort and the good of the people living under it.

The service the nation gave the citizens produced that emotion and the services the citizens have given the nation are written in the record of the army's achievements. Hate the Germans all you want to, but admit that reciprocal service, by the state to the citizen and by the citizen to the state, has illustrated its benefits strikingly.

If by the sweep of a magic wand over this country, from ocean to ocean and lakes to gulf, the nation could be brought to one way of thinking—and that (modestly) our way—here is what would happen:

The class of 1916, the youth of the nation, young men of 18 or 19 years, would be regimented. They would be sent to the barracks, mothers' darlings and all, the rich and the poor. That is a hideous thought. The young men who will have the privilege of running the nation would first be taught the necessity and the beauty of serving the nation. Their physique would be improved, their characters bettered, their minds disciplined, and their ideals strengthened. Yet conscripts and barracks make a sound that will curl the hair of the average American parent.

Each year the youth of the nation arriving at the prescribed age would go to the barracks. Trained manhood would be passed back into the citizenship fitted for the duties of citizenship. Incidentally there would not be a nation in the world, hardly any possible combination of nations, willing to give offense to the United States, and we think we know American character well enough to know that the American nation, even thus strengthened, would not give offense to any. Our foreign problems would be solved. We should have the blessings of peace and the vigor of a courageous and developed manhood.

That would be the service the citizens would give the nation. In reciprocity the nation would protect childhood from factories, women from overwork, families from indecent, disease producing houses, the old from humiliating poverty, the diseased from death for lack of care, the injured from humiliating dependency. The nation would say that it was not and could not afford to be indifferent to the welfare of its citizens. It would be worth the service they gave it because it would be the organization most considerate of them.

If we could do this by magic overnight tomorrow would find the real American nation in being.

AMERICAN GENIUS.

The greatest administrative and governmental agency that the American genius ever developed, efficiency and results considered, bears the condemned name of the Standard Oil company. It is pure materialism, cunning and competent. Out of the Standard Oil company has come the Rockefeller foundation, an experiment in scientific benevolence.

The Rockefeller foundation, drawing upon the wealth created by the Standard Oil company and abandoning none of the practicality of the Standard Oil company, deals with peoples by communities, tribes, states, nations, and races. It took the south and found the hookworm. It looked into the case of children and found the germ of spinal meningitis. It took hold of a nation in Belgium and relieved it. It is taking up the case of Poland and can relieve it.

American genius for administration is demonstrated. There is such a genius. Rockefeller alone could not have done it. Rockefeller was an extraordinary organizer among people extraordinarily capable of organizing and being organized. He was not singular, only conspicuous.

Nearly everything the Rockefeller foundation undertakes to do needs doing because there is a breakdown in the American political organization. Americans have a genius for private enterprise, but make a colossal failure of political enterprise.

The Rockefeller foundation could run Mexico with benevolence and the Standard Oil company would be very glad to have the foundation run the government while the company ran the resources of the country. The Standard Oil company and the Rockefeller foundation might even run this country with efficiency—and lower prices of certain commodities. We do not yearn for such management either here or in Mexico, but merely assert that Americans could make German efficiency seem clumsy if they went at their public affairs the way they undertake their private affairs.

Some day their genius may be given national expression. It is not impossible.

WORDS AND FORCES.

No people has a more naive confidence in words than the American.

If there seems anything wrong with the body politic our impulse always is to pass a law to correct it and then dismiss the unpleasant subject as settled. Our statutes are a mass of dead matter through which the living law here and there appears.

Another device we cherish is the investigation by commission. That, in most cases, results solely in a restatement of the situation, and we are satisfied that the restatement is a cure.

The waste of effort involved in this method is not important. It is a fact that it blocks real progress behind a barrier of pretentious but futile action. We seem to be doing something all the while; we seem to be going forward, when we are in reality standing still.

Our reliance upon forms, our belief in self-executing formulæ, appears in our thought about international relations. Mr. Bryan, whose specialty is eloquence, probably has a subconscious confidence that he could talk the law of gravitation out of existence if he disapproved of it on moral grounds; and Mr. Ford is a reformer of the same kidney. The weight given by Mr. Bryan to arbitration treaties is characteristic, and his refusal to consider that force of any other kind than that of words is a necessary factor in international affairs is a natural if ingenuous result of his own career.

Mr. Wilson's rhetorical auto-intoxication is apparent, and it may well be that what has seemed vacillation and indecision is merely the effect of a subconscious sense that having stated a thing it may be taken as done.

The most serious defect in our system, as it really has come to be, is that public office and the workings of government are given over largely to men of words rather than to men of action. The professional politician is almost always a man of words, accustomed to get results for himself and his party by words. A large proportion of them are lawyers, and in most cases this means they are trained to apply rules mechanically rather than to explore for principles or take conscious account of forces.

In domestic affairs our governmental action is constantly clogged by this inability of public men to deal directly and frankly with facts. But at home the great underlying forces of our immediate interests plow through the obstruction and compel some sort of accomplishment. In the case of our international relations at this time, because our interests are not fully developed, we are at the mercy of the emotionalist, the rhetorician, and the superficial but showy generalizer. In this country our comparative isolation and our happy preoccupation with our own engrossing, profitable tasks have given us very little opportunity to try the currents of world relations. It is all talk for us, and we have a predisposition to take words for realities. So we are tempted by ambitious plans for world peace and universal federation, or by any formal panacea for the ills of humanity. We want to paste a plaster of words on every wound mankind is suffering from, and words are cheap.

Of course when we feel the strong urge of our interests we shall move with it, as does all mankind. We shall be less impressed with the beauty of self-abnegation. We shall have more regard for our own salvation or advancement and more respect for the difficulties of insuring it.

Meanwhile it would seem to be wise to try to abate our inexpensive and grateful enthusiasms, which must wear the appearance sometimes of Pharisaism, and to check our apparent disposition to play the beadle to an erring humankind.

Editorial of the Day.

THE COMING WOMAN IN EUROPE.

[From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.]

It has been possible to wonder, since the beginning of the great war, if the doing of men's work by millions of women at home would not lead the feminine mind to a higher appreciation of women in the general scheme of things. When Paul Blouet wrote that if he could be reincarnated he would want to be reincarnated an American woman he was as much critical of the too low estate of women in Europe as of what he believed to be a dangerous elevation of women in the United States. He was sure that women were not getting a fair chance in Europe, and it necessarily could be nothing more than his opinion that the final result of giving her too many chances over here would not be good.

The absence of men in trenches has called millions of women into many of the occupations the men had to leave behind them. In all of the warring countries the women have done their work so well and thereby coöperated so effectively in maintaining the national defense and public welfare it is hardly to be supposed that, after the war ends, they will drop back into the minor sphere always held to be the proper sphere of womankind in Europe.

In Paul Blouet's native France the movement toward enlarging the field of woman's participation in the responsibilities of life is already taking shape. Demands are already being formulated by French women for equal wages and equal civil rights. Many organizations of women workers have been perfected. A rural school has been started to instruct women in scientific methods of agriculture. There is no promise of an abandonment of domestic duties by French women, but every prospect of the coming woman whose new status in organized society legislation will have to recognize to some extent.

In Great Britain, in Germany, and in Austria, where, too, women have been forced to take up new work, they are doing it so well that among them, as among those of France, there must be an awakening consciousness which will make itself felt in pressure for larger opportunity, and on more equal terms with men. The men of a country emerging from this war who would withhold from their women all enlargement of opportunity in reward for their loyalty and their proved merit would be lacking in the elements of common fairness. It may be possible that, even in benighted Russia, there will be some stirrings of the sense of fair play in recognition of what Russian women have done and are capable of doing.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1916: By the Brentwood Company.]

GOLDEN weddings are so numerous this year among the members of the British peerage as to speak well for its longevity. Among those who will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage during the next few months are Lord and Lady Clonbrook, Lord and Lady Strafford, Lord and Lady Lindsay, Lord and Lady Mar, Lord and Lady Haversham, Lord and Lady Ravensworth, and Lord and Lady Forester.

In July, Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, the third sister of Edward VII., will also complete fifty years of wedded life, her husband, now considerably over 80, and almost entirely blind, having been the guardian of the present German empress throughout her girlhood and until her marriage. The German empress' mother was of a mind so unbalanced that she had to spend the greater portion of her widowhood in retreats for the mentally afflicted and under restraint.

With regard to Lord Mar, he is the premier earl of Scotland and the senior representative peer of the northern kingdom at Westminster. Lord Mar's ancestors have been Earls of Mar since the dawn of Scottish history, and the intimation in the "peerages" and other standard works of reference that he is the thirty-third earl of his line but faintly conveys an idea of the antiquity of his house, which is probably among the very oldest titled families of Europe.

Some 300 years ago a curse was hurled against this family, according to which the latter was to be overtaken by such ruin that the grand hall of the castle should be used as a stable for horses, its state apartments as a workshop for weavers, while trees should grow upon its battlements, and that "the line shall be broken, but not until the honors of the house be doubled."

This prophecy has been fulfilled to the letter. The house of Mar was financialy ruined by its adhesion to the Jacobite cause. In the beginning of the last century fifty cavalry horses were stabled in the grand hall. Twenty years later a weaver was found working in the state chamber, while in 1820 a couple of ash saplings were discovered sprouting on the ramparts.

George IV. restored in 1824 the earldom that had been forfeited at the time of the Jacobite rebellion, and in 1875 the honors of the house were doubled by the successful claim of the thirteenth Earl of Kellie to a more modern Earldom of Mar, created by Mary Queen of Scots. The consequence is that there are two Earls of Mar, who are distinguished from one another by the fact that whereas one is known as the Earl of Mar and Kellie, the other is known only as the Earl of Mar.

It is the latter who is the premier earl of Scotland, and he strongly resents the pretensions of Lord Mar and Kellie to the Mar Earldom of the Mary Queen of Scots creation, denouncing him as a usurper. Indeed, at every meeting of the representative peers of Scotland at Holyrood palace in Edinburgh for the election of their delegate to the house of lords at Westminster, Lord Mar invariably rises to protest in the most solemn manner against the Earl of Kellie voting as the Earl of Mar.

With regard to Lord Strafford, now 81 years of age, his countess, with whom he will some weeks hence celebrate his golden wedding, is his second wife. She is a daughter of the late Admiral Lord Frederick Kerr, son of the sixth Marquis of Lothian, and his first wife, whom he married in 1859 and who died in 1862, leaving him with an only son, Lord Enfield, was a daughter of Sir William Miles.

Lord Strafford is one of the parson members of the house of lords, and prior to succeeding to his brother's honors and entailed estates was known as "Poodle" Byng, on account of his curly hair. He would have been elevated to a bishopric in 1889 had it not been for his becoming involved in trouble which led him to resign his chaplaincy to Queen Victoria and also his chaplaincy to the speaker, an office which entailed the necessity of presiding over the daily devotions of the house of commons when in session.

His elder brother, the late earl, was run over by a railroad train in the outskirts of London at the moment when his American wife, daughter of Samuel Smith of New Orleans and widow of Samuel Colgate of New York, was being presented at court.

The family of Lord Strafford is noted for the number of fatalities by which it has been overtaken during the last 200 years. One of its members was smothered in the black hole of Calcutta. Another, Admiral Sir John Byng, was court martialed for alleged cowardice and executed on board his own flagship at Portsmouth.

The late earl's eldest son, who bore the title of Viscount Enfield, mysteriously disappeared from the liner on which he was voyaging home with his father from the Cape of Good Hope, the presumption being that he either threw himself overboard or else in some way fell into the sea, which was perfectly calm at the time.

Lord Lindsay, whose golden wedding also takes place shortly, has a wife who also had been previously married. He must not be confounded with the Earl of Lindsey, whose name is spelt differently, for whereas the latter is an English peer and the head of the house of Bertie, the Earl of Lindsay's peerage is a Scotch honor. His second son, the Hon. Archibald Lindsay Bethune, married in 1900 Ethel, daughter of L. Austin Tucker of Boston, Mass. But the union was dissolved by the English courts.

The present earl is the eleventh of his line, but he is twentieth Baron of Lindsay of the Byres, and his patent as such bears the date of 1425. The history of the family, however, goes much further back, and one of its members, Sir William Lindsay, figures in the chronicles of Froissart as a celebrated crusader who knighted the son of St. Bridget of Sweden at the holy sepulcher in Jerusalem.

RATING OF STATE BOARDS OF HEALTH.

IF you live in Massachusetts, New York, or Pennsylvania your health is very well looked after, whether your home is in a city or rural district. If you live in a rural district in South Dakota, Missouri or Tennessee you had better look out for yourself, since your state government cares little whether you live or die, whether you get sick or keep well.

Such is the opinion of Dr. Charles V. Chapin, commissioner of health of Providence, R. I. This is no offhand opinion. Dr. Chapin was commissioned by the American Medical association to make a comparative study of the various state health boards. He spent a year in making the study. He visited every state board except that of Kentucky. His report is issued by the American Medical association.

This is the way he ranks the boards, 1,000 being perfect:

1—Massachusetts	745
2—New York	730
3—Pennsylvania	716
4—Minnesota	574
5—New Jersey	555
6—Indiana	526
7—Maryland	507
8—Kansas	499
9—Vermont	486

14—Kentucky	393
15—Connecticut	393
16—Wisconsin	392
17—Michigan	370
18—Illinois	346
19—California	342
20—New Hampshire	320
21—Louisiana	315
22—Mississippi	297
23—Maine	280
24—Washington	262
25—Florida	253
26—Montana	246
27—Oregon	227
28—Iowa	225

46—Arizona	39
47—Wyoming	10
48—New Mexico	0

In scoring departments Dr. Chapin had no precedents. For this reason and also because of the difficulties inherent to the task Dr. Chapin's markings are only approximate. Another person of equal fairness, experience, and knowledge with the same facts before him and using the same score card might give a certain state twenty points higher or lower than Dr. Chapin has done, or rank it several notches above or below the position in which he has placed it. I am sure, for one, I would have put North Carolina and Virginia higher than twelfth and thirteenth, respectively, and Minnesota lower than fourth.

The ratings are only valuable within certain limits, Dr. Chapin states, but within those limits the ratings are valuable. Clearly the best three departments are those of Massachusetts, New York, and Pennsylvania. To that everybody might agree, but when it came to assigning these to positions 1, 2, and 3 there would be much disagreement. These are three old states with large cities likewise old. Health departments evolve gradually. For a good health department the community must have passed through both years and experiences. It is to be expected that these older states should have the better health departments.

Suppose we group the states with scores ranging between 600 and 300 into a second group. We have Minnesota, New Jersey, Indiana, Maryland, Kansas, Vermont, Ohio, Rhode Island, North Carolina, Virginia, Kentucky, Connecticut, Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, California, New Hampshire, and Louisiana. I thnk we could all agree that each of these states has the nucleus of a very effective health machine, and that in a few years such machine is likely to rank with that of Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and New York. Furthermore, each has a progressive, growing department.

When it came to details we might not agree. For instance, I do not know how many of us would not say that the Wisconsin department was entitled to fifty points more than that of California. Suppose we make another group of those departments with a rating between 300 and 100. In this group we would have Mississippi, Maine, Washington, Florida, Montana, Oregon, Iowa, South Carolina, Utah, Georgia, Missouri, North Dakota, Delaware, Idaho, Tennessee, Texas, West Virginia, Colorado, Alabama, and South Dakota.

I do not know what we should say of these states and their health departments. Certainly we could agree that they have not done for their people what they should have done. We could agree that some of those near the top of the group have done much and are improving all the time. We could also agree that some of those near the bottom are ossified. Dr. Chapin calls special attention to the fact that West Virginia has made great progress in the last few years. We could agree that some are coming along satisfactorily considering such facts as their great expanse and sparse population, lack of financial resource, and lack of age.

Suppose we place those below 100 in the cow's tail group. We have Oklahoma, Nevada, Arkansas, Nebraska, Arizona, Wyoming, and New Mexico. This grouping occasions some injustices, perhaps. When we read the chapters dealing with South Dakota and Oklahoma we see the injustice of placing these states in separate groups, one of which appears to be markedly more worthy of praise than the other. Those of us who know how much Arkansas has improved in the last five years feel like saying a kind word for that state board. Nevada, New Mexico, Arizona, and Wyoming are confronted by great difficulties.

But perhaps the best policy is to leave the ratings as they stand in the hope that they may irritate, anger, inflame the legislatures into properly providing for the protection of the people.

Among other details found in this report are the expenditures for health of the different departments. The ranks and amounts follow:

1—Pennsylvania	$1,047,481.66
2—New York	284,676.85
3—Massachusetts	180,719 14

Speaking generally, legislatures will vote funds to their state boards of health in proportion as the people are interested in health. In some states the popular interest in health arises from recent unfortunate experiences with paralyzing epidemics. For instance, the excellent financial support of the board of health in Florida is due to some epidemics of yellow fever ten or twenty years ago.

Roughly the health sentiment of a state is a measure of the efficiency of the state board as an educator. These statements being true, state boards cannot wholly escape responsibility for small appropriations for their support. However, bricks cannot be made without straw. Health work cannot be done without money.

Suppose we try to rerate certain states as modified by their per capita expenditures for health. In order to do as little injustice as possible let us consider on the excellent list only those states in which the per capita expenditures rating is at least ten lower than the grade of work rating. Let us consider as in the poor showing class only those states in which the expenditure rating is ten or more higher than the grade of work rating. Furthermore, since the distances are so great and the population so sparse in Idaho, Nevada, Utah, Arizona, and New Mexico, let us exclude them from the list.

EXCELLENT SHOWING.

Washington, Mississippi, New York, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas, Illinois, and Tennessee in the order named.

GOOD SHOWING.

North Carolina, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Georgia, New Jersey, Iowa, West Virginia, Maine, Arkansas, Oregon, Alabama, Nebraska, Pennsylvania, North Dakota, Texas, Maryland, Vermont, Rhode Island, South Dakota, California, and South Carolina in the order named.

POOR SHOWING.

New Hampshire, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Colorado, Montana, Delaware, ending with Florida making the poorest showing of all.

Fortunately the state board of health is not our only agency protecting against disease and making for health. Many of us live in cities and are also protected by the local health department. The federal government helps in certain directions. Some of us are employed in industries which strive to protect the health of their employés. There are various societies for promoting health. Nor should we forget the activities of the practitioners of curative medicine. The preface to Dr. Chapin's report indicates that there may be later reports on the federal activities of health, local health departments, and societies for the promotion of health.

DIABETES DIET.

C. S. writes: "Kindly advise me which is the best diet and treatment for diabetes mellitus and albuminuria. What is the best book for these diseases?

REPLY.

Get Hill on "The Starvation Treatment of Diabetes." It tells you what to eat and what not to eat. As to albuminuria get Von Noorden on Nephritis.

BOIL DRINKING WATER.

Chicago, April 25.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Why couldn't the public be informed, as it used to be, about the drinking water? Some time ago it was announced the water was bad. I would like to know if it is still bad or if one can drink it with safety. I think it is really just as important to have a daily report of the water as it is of the weather.

FLORA I. SCHOENFELD,
5024 Ellis avenue.

A bulletin was issued by the department of health on March 25 urging all people residing in the territory supplied by the Sixty-eighth street pumping station to continue to boil the drinking water. This bulletin is still in effect. Although the water supplied by the Sixty-eighth street station is chlorinated, there is still a potential source of danger as a result of the construction work now going on in the shafts and suction wells.

Commissioner of Health.

RESURFACING FOREST GLEN AVENUE.

Chicago, April 25.—[To the Friend of the People.]—When the Argyle sewer was placed in Forest Glen avenue to Elston avenue last year the property owners were given to understand that the contractors were allowed a certain sum of money to resurface Forest Glen avenue from the bridge to Elston avenue. Please advise when this work will be done.

E. O. DODD, 5409 Forest Glen avenue.

The board of local improvements expects the contractor who laid the sewer in Forest Glen avenue last fall to begin work of restoration of the pavement over the sewer trench as soon as the condition of the ground will permit the use of a steam roller. This will probably be within thirty days.

C. D. HILL,
Engineer Board of Local Improvements.

SHARING IN AUNT'S ESTATE.

Chicago, April 20.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I have a lady cousin who is married and has no children. If my cousin should die could her husband claim her share of my aunt's estate? G. F.

If your aunt died previous to your sister's death, your sister's husband would be entitled to a husband's share in such estate; if your sister died before your aunt, your sister's husband would have no share in your aunt's estate. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PENALTY FOR INSULTING FLAG.

Chicago, April 24.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. What are the maximum and minimum punishments for an affront or insult to the American flag? 2. Where can they be found? 3. Have the subordinate or local courts the legal right and power to act in such cases? 4. Is there a code or law dealing with children for the above mentioned offense? 5. What is the punishment for them? J. H. R.

1. Fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100 and costs, or imprisonment for not more than thirty days, or both. 2. Chapter "38a" of Hurd's Revised Statutes of Illinois. 3. The criminal court and the Municipal court have jurisdiction. 4. Boys under 17 and girls under 18 come within the Juvenile court act. 5. They would be put on probation.

DISTRIBUTION OF ESTATE IN NEBRASKA.

Chicago, April 20.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—What is the law in Nebraska if a man dies without having made a will and has never had any children? Does his widow receive the whole estate or could his relatives claim a part of it?

P. K.

Under the law of Nebraska, the widow takes half of the real estate and half of the personal property, after all debts are paid and a widow's award allowed, and the remainder of the property descends in equal shares to the relatives of the deceased, there being no child nor children living, nor descendants of such child or children. WILL SUPPRESS VIOLATIONS.

Lemont, Ill., April 23.—[To the Friend of the People.]—There is a disorderly house opposite the public school in district 112, Sag Bridge, Ill., Lemont township, which has been operating for several months. The officers and directors of said school do not seem to pay attention to this matter.

EMMA WHITE.

I raided the place described in the letter as opposite the schoolhouse about six months ago. The defendants were assessed a heavy fine and ordered to leave the town by the court. This is the first intimation that I have received since that time that they were again operating. I shall investigate the matter at once and take such steps as may be necessary to suppress the violations of the law as complained of in the letter.

ELEVEN FOOLISH QUESTIONS.

Chicago, April 26.—[Editor of the Tribune.]—Do you believe in foreign trade? Do you advocate the extension of sale of our merchandise abroad?

Do you endorse the action of our government in trying to stimulate foreign trade?

Can you conceive of foreign trade being carried on without commercial travelers?

Would you suggest that we say "go abroad, Mr. Traveler, to further our interests, but don't ask us to protect you?"

Does any one nation own the Atlantic ocean or is the sea still a public highway for those engaged in non-combatant commerce?

Should there be reason to doubt the non-combatancy of a vessel and her cargo, would you consider that there was a difference between seizing the vessel for the purpose of finding this out and summarily killing everybody on board without warning because possibly there may be something combatant on board?

Is a pugilist justified in kicking his opponent in the stomach where otherwise he would be beaten?

Is the under dog the one to make the rules as the game progresses?

Is the man who has been beaten up in a fight with a bitter enemy justified in throwing a hand grenade into a crowded thoroughfare in the hope of hitting his opponent?

Would you think highly of the innocent bystander if he did not object?

THE CENTER OF COMMON SENSE.

Chicago, April 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Four years ago Roosevelt left the Republican party. He said it was no good. This year he is doing everything in his power to have that party nominate him. Four years ago John M. Harlan chased Roosevelt all over this country, telling the people he was no good. This year he was chasing all over Illinois telling the people he is the only one. This is cheap professional politics played up to date.

Of course, the rank and file won't have much to say in the June convention, but don't forget they can vote in November. Are we going to turn down Republicans like Burton, Hughes, Root, Sherman, or Cummins for a renegade like Roosevelt, whose only ambition is to pose and spout and sell books and hold a job in the White House?

Bryan is as far from the center of common sense in one direction as Roosevelt is in the other. LOREN B. BURNHAM.

PARITY OF BABIES AND BEEF.

Chicago, April 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Dispatches quote Senator Martine, Democrat, on the president's ultimatum to Germany as saying: "There is just as much justification for such a message to England as to Germany." This is the repetition of an assertion that has been made many times in the past eleven months by that class of American (geographically speaking only, whether native or adopted) which cannot distinguish between a shipload of babies and a cargo of beef; which classifies the Lusitania "incident" with the detention of a consignment of packing house products; which does not differentiate between murdering a man and meddling with a mail bag.

And blush, O America! and weep, O Illinois! Our "favorite son" senator and our past favorite son congressman seem to be training with that class.

I do not condone the acts of Great Britain, but this I know: If I should be aroused suddenly to find one criminal in my house murdering my family while another was in the back yard robbing my henroost, I should devote my entire attention to the murderer untill he was disposed of, even though he might try to distract my attention by pointing to the trespass of the chicken thief.

TRAINMEN'S CONTROVERSY.

Chicago, April 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—As a reader and admirer of your paper, especially the editorial columns, for a good many years, let me suggest a remedy for the present controvery between the railroads and their trainmen. Let the day's work remain as it is at present, ten hours, and then all overtime accruing after ten hours be paid at the rate of time and one-half.

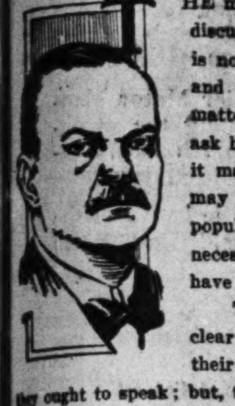
SCYLLA AND CHARYBDIS

By Edward Goldbeck



THE man who in these days speaks to a large audience and discusses grave issues carries a heavy responsibility. This is not the time for attempting to be brilliant, oratorical, and emphatic; it is the duty of the writer to be plain, matter of fact, and moderate. Before he writes he must ask himself if he really has something to say and if saying it may do some good, and in case he can assert this he may go on. He will be sincere at the risk of being unpopular. He will even risk being boring if he deems it necessary to repeat trivial truths which do not seem to have sunk deeply enough into the mind of the public.

The German-Americans must make their position as clear as possible, to themselves, to their well wishers and their adversaries. I shall try to speak as, to my mind, they ought to speak; but, to avoid misunderstandings, I must state at first that I have neither the right nor the wish to pose as their spokesman. Whatever I may say is a purely individual utterance.

Let us begin with our own mistakes. Embittered by the press campaign which was waged against our old country and against ourselves, with very little respect for truth, fairness, and decency, we have criticized American institutions and habits in a sometimes aggressive and overbearing way. Criticism must be borne out of love. Then, but only then, is it a right and a duty; then, but then only, is it creative, not destructive. If we criticize this country, we do it because our highest aspirations, our fondest hopes are bound up with it. Penetrated with the knowledge of our own sincerity, safe in our love for this country, we spoke bluntly and unafraid of any misinterpretation. The German, as a type, is not effusive; the deeper his feeling the less he wants to talk about it. His is a certain chastity of sentiment. So he refrained from proclaiming his enthusiasm for this country; and when he blurted out his disappointment, which was the more pungent the deeper his love for his adopted land, it was only natural that some Americans said: "Well, if you don't like it here, why did you come? Why don't you go away?"

THIS indignant question was not entirely unjustified. Some of us forgot that indeed they disliked many things on the other side. They idealized Germany under the emotional appeal of the terrible situation. But let us try to see Germany as it was before the war, and we will have to admit candidly that there is a good deal to say for the United States and for the Americans. "A new Germany will rise after this war," a high official wrote me a few months ago. Germany is not nearly as perfect, America not nearly as imperfect, as we imagined it while our hearts were bleeding for the old country. We have found great economical opportunities here, we have been welcomed with that brisk American heartiness which is so refreshing after the etiquette of the old continent, the mental atmosphere agrees with us, and almost all the German-Americans believe in the promise of democracy.

When we stated that many institutions of the fatherland are better than the corresponding arrangements in the United States we only meant to defend the old country against the taunts of people who knew very little about it and seemed to think that the Germans are really barbarians and the abject slaves of a cruel despot. The first time we heard these outbursts of crass ignorance ("I suppose a woman who would dare to be a suffragist would be hanged right away by the kaiser," "Every general who makes a mistake is told to commit suicide," etc.) we answered good-naturedly, the second time politely, the third time sarcastically, and at last we shouted: "Shut up!"

But when we tried to correct these errors and extolled German institutions we often went too far, we forgot that the question if an institution is "better" or not is nothing but ineffectual theorizing. We must ask ourselves if an institution can be adapted to the character of another nation, and it is not at all sure that those laws which satisfy a German would content an American, and vice versa.

AS we constantly heard that people doubted our loyalty to our adopted country we began to emphasize what we had done for it. We bragged a little. The fact that the German-Americans have been sturdy and intelligent helpers in the upbuilding of the American civilization cannot be denied; it is historical. But it is not good taste that we should boast of our performance, and particularly we ought not to demand gratitude. What our ancestors did they did for themselves and for their children, whose welfare could not be separated from the welfare of the country. One has compared the native country to the mother, the adopted country to the wife of a man. Would any decent fellow tell his wife, item by item, what he has done for her and demand acknowledgment?

This country is ours; it belongs to us and we belong to the country. None of us thinks of introducing "kaiserism" here, but of course we want America to be what according to our inner vision it ought to be, and that is why we make propaganda for those German ideas which might help us to advance toward the ideal which each of us has in his mind.

We have disappointed some of our American friends by not condemning "German intrigues in this country." This seemed to us a superfluous and premature demonstration. We have read lots of headlines and articles which announced terrible revelations about German plots, many people have been arrested, but we are still waiting for the disclosure of the crimes. Up to now there is nothing palpable. Parturient montes, nascetur ridiculus mus. The gigantic efforts of the authorities have not produced anything but gossip.

Maybe there have been conspiracies, and then there must not be any doubt about the fact that we would want the plotters punished and expulsed, and that we regard them as fools—and as criminal fools. We would not make any exception for the diplomats; on the contrary, we would think them doubly guilty. This must be stated once in plain language, but until sufficient proof comes forth there is no reason of looking at the German diplomats as idiotic blunderers. It is true that President Wilson has darkly hinted at dangerous and unloyal elements in this country, but that does not mean very much. When his Mexican policy was exposed he also scented plots: mysterious "interests" were inventing and spreading bad news. Good gracious! it was not necessary to go to such lengths of deviltry; the bare facts were quite sufficient.

UNJUST as the indictments against the "hyphen" are, we shall be impartial enough to admit—and to admit gladly—that there is a redeeming feature about this movement. No nation could enjoy the idea of being torn asunder by racial divergences, and to resent such an idea is in itself sound and shows that the Americans want to be Americans. There is an element of national idealism in the agitation against the hyphen, and we German-Americans can serenely acknowledge it, just because we know that the indictment against our patriotism is absolutely unfounded. We shall prove it whenever it is necessary, but the conviction that we are fully as patriotic as anybody else gives us the courage to protest against the insane war which is threatening us up to the last moment and with all our strength.

We do not ignore the fact that this is an English speaking country. "Language," Max Müller says, "is thicker than blood. A common language is a common bond of intellectual brotherhood far stronger than any supposed or real community of blood." One cannot treat language as one thing and thought as another; our language is really our thought, and our thought our language. We are willing to acknowledge this fact and admit that England has influenced this country much more intensely than Germany. But even this admission cannot excuse a policy which I would like to call "colonialism," an instinctive and unreasoned subserviency to England.

I WOULD protest against a war with England just as energetically as I am resisting war with Germany. My reasons for such an attitude would be American reasons. But from the first moment Mr. Wilson was not pro-American; he was pro-Eng[illegible] Of course not in the sense that he would betray his country for En[illegible] a reproach would be unworthy and preposterous. What I [illegible] whole mental makeup is so entirely English that he cannot [illegible] America's revo[illegible] against British [illegible].

It is a case of atavism; [illegible] (consciously) [illegible] the president of a powerful nation, and he feels (subconsciously) as [illegible] governor of Virginia by the grace of George III. He is in [illegible] the richer classes in the East, which are bound to England by in[illegible], relationship, intellectual tradition, financial interests, and snobbery. I remember a lady, whose family name is historical and known all over the country, telling me that at a dinner in London she was "taken in" as the last because all the other ladies were titled. She seemed to relish the experience. The bulk of the nation is alien to this "colonialism." Mr. Wilson has not realized that. This man, whose every second word is "humanity," never protested against the starvation blockade. Allow me to quote a passage from a speech by Judge Ben B. Lindsey, who visited Germany and saw the effects of the blockade—on children:

"In one of those central distributing points—a milk supply or relief station for the poor of Berlin—I saw another sight that remained on my mind for a long time. In the room into which we were ushered I saw several hundred young mothers, and outside were a great many babies. And every one of those young mothers had a baby on her breast, suckling one of those little helpless mites of humanity; having more milk than she needed for her own baby, she came here, through the sort of system that seems even to conserve the human supply of milk, to give milk to some other little baby whose mother was not strong enough to give it the milk it needed."

THE submarine war is inhuman, but the starvation blockade is, too. Germany retaliated. President Wilson refuses to see this connection. He tries to knock from Germany's hands the only efficient weapon it can wield against England. If I could see what the United States is going to win by this attitude I might advise the German-Americans to support him; I would certainly try to consult and consider nothing but the interest of this country, as it is the undoubted duty of every German-American; but as there is nothing America could get out of a victory over Germany, I hold the president's policy to be "colonialism." And the firm decision of all American patriots ought to be: "Neither hyphenism nor colonialism! America!"

A NEW WORLD

By Robert Herrick

WHAT will happen after the great war? Speculation on this point becomes more urgent as the prospect of peace draws nearer. Business and finance, naturally, are anxious to make at least a fair guess as to what is coming after the great cataclysm and all kinds of prophets are voicing their prognostications. Of those which I have read, the opinions of statesmen and financiers and humbler citizens alike, none seems to offer much except an unimaginative restatement of old economic rules. Of course, men and women will continue to be born, to eat and clothe themselves, to trade and love and make money if they can. That is about all the real fact that any one seems able to divine at present. Just how we are going to adjust ourselves to the enormous burden of debt which Europe is piling up, whether European peoples will be so poor that they will try to emigrate—if permitted—in large numbers, or whether their own countries will have sufficient vitality to support them and employ them in rebuilding their war-worn lands, no man can say. Will money be cheap or dear? Will there be hard times or feverish prosperity? Every fellow's guess is as good as the next man's.

THE writers whose deliverances on this topic I have read seem to approach the new conditions that will exist when peace is made with their old equipment of ideas, their old prejudices. They try to work out the colossal problem that must present itself the morning after peace is declared as if the world had not already gone through profound economic and social changes during the war. Yet they have before their eyes phenomena that must make one doubt whether the world will resume business on the old basis on the coming of peace. We see a socialization of all forces in the warring states such as the world has never known before. Aside from drafting the able bodied male population into huge armies—fed, clothed, and maintained by the state—there are the women and the nonmilitary workers who have been mobilized and are receiving steady employment and good wages from the state. And the mothers whose husbands and wage earners are in the trenches are also receiving a small dole for themselves and their children from the same source.

Will the old conditions of individual enterprise and responsibility for self-maintenance return at once in the exhausted condition, the economic chaos, that is likely to ensue after peace is declared? It is not probable. It is far more probable that the great powers will be obliged to continue their socialized organizations indefinitely after the war is finished to guarantee to all citizens, men and women, employment at a living wage. That would work a stupendous change of itself in the mental attitude of Europeans towards the state.

The mental attitude, it may be observed, has already begun to change during war times. The state is already the biggest factor in the lives of the peoples of the belligerent nations. The conception of the state, of its power and freedom to do as it will, has developed enormously under the necessities of the great war. Of course, this power is at present assured by the common fear of destruction, the desire for self-preservation.

The same motives will work to strengthen the arbitrary powers of the state afterwards when the different nations face the dark future of a depleted civilization. And to men and women who have obeyed the commands of the state in bread and meat tickets, in work in ammunition factories, in the investment of their savings in state securities, in lighting their homes and many other details of their lives, not to mention the giving of their men to slaughter, the idea of implicit obedience to the state will not be so strange or abhorrent as before the war—as it is with us today.

OF all the powers assumed during the war by European governments the greatest is the control of credit. They have mobilized national wealth in order to apply it to the task of self-defense—in other words, they have socialized production. They say to their citizen with little circumlocution: "Lend us your gold," and they get it in extraordinary amounts. They say: "Save and buy national defense bonds," and they are able to float vast issues of government bonds. They say: "Lend us your investments in foreign securities," and the stocks and bonds are handed over, either to be sold or to serve as collateral for the government loans abroad. This process has proceeded more rapidly as the war wears on and needs every possible resource for its prosecution. What must be the result?

The man who looks at it with the eyes of the old order sees nothing before the peoples of Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany, and Austria but the direst poverty after the war, due to the most tremendous debt burden the world has ever known. It is assumed that the people in each country will be bent double in paying merely the interest of their national debts to the fortunate possessors of state obligations. But will it be so?

Suppose that the European governments instead of repudiating their debts simply adjust income taxes at such rates that the process of interest and tax payment will merely become the transfer of money from one ledger to another? If a holder of government bonds receives a thousand dollars interest the first of the month and pays out nine hundred and ninety dollars tax the last of the month, the creditor is no richer, the government no poorer.

Obviously, however, the system of private capital ownership—which depends on personal accumulation—will begin at once to crumble, or rather will dry up at the source. And for private ownership and control of capital must inevitably be substituted a coöperative, state control. That is a very big change not merely in system but in ideas which would have been accomplished quietly, sans revolution, through the inevitable process of this war.

LET us look at it concretely, from a fresh angle. Suppose today a man in England, or in Germany, or in France should desire to use some capital in developing a business or starting a new business; in order to obtain the necessary funds he would have to prove to his government that the enterprise was a necessary one, likely to assist the state in the public enterprise of prosecuting the war successfully. Otherwise, in all probability, not being able to borrow privately, nor to secure labor at any price without government sanction, he would be unable to carry out his plan. For "the defense of the realm," or for "the good of the state," or under whatever formula you prefer, his private use of credit for private purposes would be curtailed, or directed, or altogether prevented, as the case might be. Probably he submits without grumbling, considering the deprivation of his liberties to be due to the abnormal conditions of war.

But is it temporary, is it abnormal? Will the private citizen on the resumption of normal peace conditions find it any easier than at present to get credit and use capital as he desires? The state will not be able to resign control of credit if it would. I fancy that the citizen will still have to go to the state functionary after the war has ceased not merely to get permission to undertake his enterprise but to obtain the necessary credit. Granted the necessity, the thorough change of economic system which has already begun under the abnormal compulsion of war will continue at an accelerated rate when peace releases men for productive labor without the means of engaging in it, credit, or the use of capital, will become a state function like public hygiene, control of transportation and communications; it will be administered by public functionaries, like the postal system.

And so government will be able to encourage or check production as they deem the sort of enterprises contemplated to be desirable or undesirable. It might conceivably mean the freeing of large industrial populations through the assurance of steady employment. If that should happen the soldiers fighting today in the trenches are really fighting their own battles, not merely for victory for their countries but for breaking the economic chains of the world. Who will suffer? The large holders of public securities into which private capital will have gone by the close of the war. And who made this war, so far as can be dimly perceived? These same large controllers of private capital, in their insensate rivalries with each other, in their greed for new territories to exploit.

There is a magnificent irony in the fact that if the cost of the war in blood is borne today largely by poor men, the cost in treasure of this greatest of all wars must ultimately be borne by the men whose interests created it! Further, that a war brought about by their vicious competition for each other's markets may result in the toppling over completely of the system which gave them control, and in substituting for it something much more liberal and democratic which will give a larger share of its rewards to the little person, to the laborer on whose shoulders hitherto the burdens of war have ultimately rested in the form of taxation.

WITH these thoughts in mind the cost of the war does not seem too terrible, nor its premature conclusion an unmixed blessing. It should not end before the economic changes which are in process are so fixed in destiny that men will not attempt to gainsay them, to revert to the old order once more. The reactionary instinct toward individualism will be strong. One sees it already at work.

Not until the idea of trade retaliations after peace has disappeared on both sides, Not until the Runcimans and the Zimmermans, the Bethmann-Holwegs and the Asquiths and their kind have been discarded could the new order be safely born. Not perhaps until the men and women now suffering from the horrors of war have come to a new understanding of themselves and of life and are ready for the large new world.

Immense progress has been made toward that new world in the great war which has been in process less than two years. Quite possibly another two years or more will be needed for the complete disintegration of the old system of individualistic capitalism, although at the rate which the warring nations are absorbing the private resources of their citizens it would seem impossible to maintain the war for any considerable length of time. But growth in ideas is always slow: men's minds accustom themselves slowly to such fundamental changes. The costly war is a great accelerator of social processes!

WHEN in the year 2016 the historians ponder the events of our era, perceiving the true meanings of the great war more clearly than we can with our short perspective, they will point out not only its inevitability but also its regenerative influence for the world. They will dwell on its porteitous significance because, unlike other wars, it did not result in a redrawing of the political map of Europe but in the substitution among the peoples of old Europe of a new social mind in place of their former conceptions. It was the necessary preparation for a new freedom, greater by far in its consequences than the liberation wrought by the Reformation or the French revolution. It was the beginning of the economic revolution of Europe and the entire world, which otherwise could not have been accomplished. And where do we come in in this large new world?

MR CARNEGIE AND THE KAISER

By Maximilian Harden

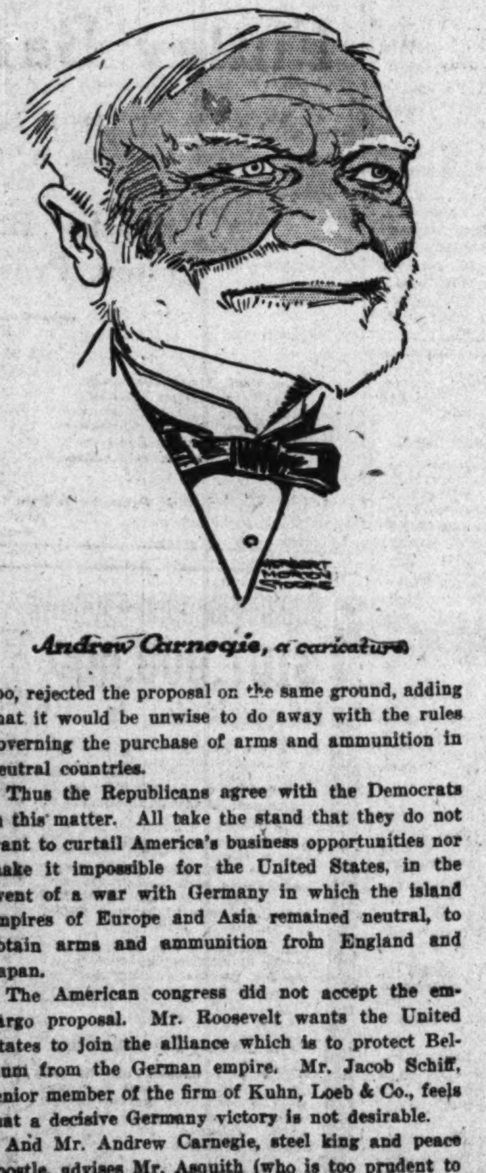
That the trenchant pen of the famous editor of Die Zukunft (The Future) has not been stayed by the German military authorities was witnessed by the article upholding President Wilson's ideas in the submarine controversy which was cabled to the newspapers last week from Berlin and by the translation of one of his recent articles which is presented herewith. Herr Harden, Germany's most noted editor and critic, was, it was reported some time ago, prohibited to write or address the public in any manner until after the war.

[Translated from Die Zukunft.]

MR. BRYAN, as secretary of state, in January, 1915, rejected the proposition to place an embargo upon the export of arms, ammunition, and other war material. He explained that such an embargo would be a violation of America's neutrality.

"If Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Turkey wish to buy these things from us," said he in substance, "our factories will gladly accept their orders. The reasons which prevent such purchases do not concern us."

Not satisfied with this answer, the German-Americans in the following month went to President Wilson's predecessor, Mr. Taft, a Republican. He, too, rejected the proposal on the same ground, adding that it would be unwise to do away with the rules governing the purchase of arms and ammunition in neutral countries.



Andrew Carnegie, a caricature

Thus the Republicans agree with the Democrats in this matter. All take the stand that they do not want to curtail America's business opportunities nor make it impossible for the United States, in the event of a war with Germany in which the island empires of Europe and Asia remained neutral, to obtain arms and ammunition from England and Japan.

The American congress did not accept the embargo proposal. Mr. Roosevelt wants the United States to join the alliance which is to protect Belgium from the German empire. Mr. Jacob Schiff, senior member of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., feels that a decisive Germany victory is not desirable.

And Mr. Andrew Carnegie, steel king and peace apostle, advises Mr. Asquith (who is too prudent to take such advice) never to consent to an armistice and to enter into negotiations concerning possibilities of peace only after Germany's power is completely crushed.

DO you remember something? Of all the gold accumulators in the United States (so I wrote two years ago), Mr. Carnegie is, to me, the most obnoxious.

Carnegie is sujet mixte, a Scotchman acclimated to the coast of the Atlantic. Among the richest of the rich, he is the only one whom one can imagine "at home" even in Europe (perhaps as the patron of monistic societies and esthetes' clubs).

Sometimes he reminds one of Thomas Chalmers, who preached a sensually supersensual evangelism; then again of his compatriot, John Knox, who, with his index finger on the Geneva Bible, sent the first trumpet call against the "murderous woman régime" (of the beautiful, ever pious Mary Stuart) from Switzerland to Scotland.

Carnegie, who is not overburdened with education, would like to be taken as philosopher, moralist, and Christ. His "Empire of Business" is well worth reading, and to "drive four-in-hand through Scotland" with Andrew is much fun. He must have been a business man of many degrees. According to the estimate of conservative people, he is worth a thousand million marks. He gives large sums for libraries and for the agitation of the world peace makers; never for anything else.

In the still and wondrous city of The Hague he put up on the road to Scheveningen a palace in which sundry hens—after the industrious preliminary work of many roosters—are to hatch the millennium. A theater, a stadium, a museum for Netherlandish art, would have been more useful.

However, the palace stands, and it might be even clumsier and uglier; and the fact that among the contributors to the construction Germany furnished the fence and the gate key will probably cause laughter some day as a clever symbolistic joke on the part of Prince von Buelow, the then chancellor.

The opening ceremonies the little Scotchman choose as the occasion for a speech, the purpose of which was to bathe the German emperor in honey, to besprinkle his imperial majesty away over the ends of his mustache with sweetness.

"The greatest personality of our time," said he, referring to the kaiser ("The civilized world this day bows reverently before you," he wrote on June 8, 1913.)

That was the limit! Put it to the test of U. S. A. productions. Bashful Oberburgomasters would be ashamed to make such a speech. Carnegie reads it from his manuscript.

A war lord who in time of peace has about 1,200,000 men under banner and flag and who always wears a uniform should displease the white haired Democrat and pacifist. No, Wilhelm was to light earth together into a herd of meek millennarian lambs. O Lord, what humbug! The blossom of German commerce could have sprouted only through peace, he asserted. And far more, Mr. Andrew, through the wars of 1864, 1866, and 1870, which imbedded the roots of the now bountifully sprouting stem deep in the native earth and fertilized them well!

But the remnants of the Scotchman's love for the great British world empire might explain the desire that Germany leave war, that is, considerable expansion, alone. It is, however, the sophistries of the peace advocate that are so disgusting.

CARNEGIE has been in his time a weaver apprentice, a messenger boy, and has filled his coffers with a thousand million marks. Has he always practiced the spirit of Christian love which he now preaches to the nations?

Is there a sober minded person who dreams that with Knoxian Bible morality on the left hand and a milk tub full of unwatered brotherly love on the right hand a man can pocket one thousand million marks? Carnegie, in his merchant's fashion, conducted war for one and a half generations, in order to bottle up all the steel in the United States and to become the most powerful man in his adopted land.

He has long ceased "needing more," lives far from business, and hurls proscriptions against all nations who do not give up their ambition for power.

We, my shrewdly pious Scotchman, do not yet need to do so; we are no ruffians looking for fight, but neither are we fools who strangle themselves with bonds of contract and voluntarily give up power, honor, and manhood. And the German empire is concerned about quite a bit more than an individual's riches and tyranny.

Alfred Nobel, who extracted millions from the making of dynamite, and Steel Crœsus Carnegie; indeed, the wavers of the olive branch have strange customers.

We will carry on our national business as boldly and as wisely as Carnegie carried on his personal business. Let him be an example to us; as a preacher of morals he amuses us. And we must not leave him in doubt that a Hohenzollern who might be inclined to accept his advice could take the gondola to Jericho and there await the growth of his beard, but that he then must forego the honor to be kaiser in the realm of Germans.

Autumn, 1913: "The most remarkable personality of our time."

Spring, 1915: "He must be crushed."

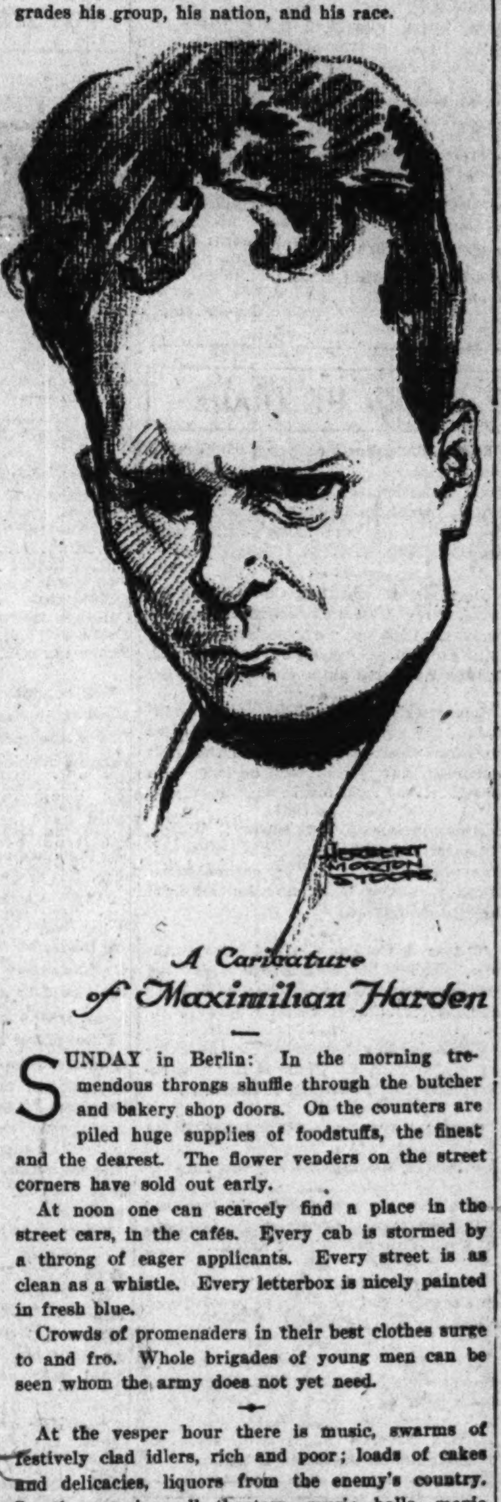
Did I really, as some charged at the time, do an injustice to the steel king?

And shall we not at last abandon the attempt to cajole the glittering guardian of the Yankees' realm? America acts as she pleases; we act (without wanting to be impolite to them) as we must. If our torpedoes have destroyed ships belonging to them, we will pay the freight. When they need us they will make us an offer. But never again must we beg their love.

Morality we do not propose to export to their costs; but we must also politely decline to accept importations of such as is cultivated by them!

The German-Americans will fight the battle out. And in its course they will perhaps reflect whether in the righteous struggle for the honor of their old fatherland they have not failed to recognize, or have mistaken, many a peculiarity of their adopted land. We in Germany must not meddle there. We already have emphasized the political power of the Germans living under the Stars and Stripes more loudly than was good for them.

Every German who by his conduct and actions proves himself honest and industrious, strong and careful, clean and good, enlists respect for his nation; words, spoken or written, will never gain it. And the cheap hullabaloo of the individual degrades his group, his nation, and his race.



A Caricature of Maximilian Harden

SUNDAY in Berlin: In the morning tremendous throngs shuffle through the butcher and bakery shop doors. On the counters are piled huge supplies of foodstuffs, the finest and the dearest. The flower venders on the street corners have sold out early.

At noon one can scarcely find a place in the street cars, in the cafés. Every cab is stormed by a throng of eager applicants. Every street is as clean as a whistle. Every letterbox is nicely painted in fresh blue.

Crowds of promenaders in their best clothes surge to and fro. Whole brigades of young men can be seen whom the army does not yet need.

At the vesper hour there is music, swarms of festively clad idlers, rich and poor; loads of cakes and delicacies, liquors from the enemy's country. In the evening all theaters, music halls, movie houses are crowded, most of them for the second time since noon. Today and tomorrow no more seats are obtainable for the Philharmonic concert on Tuesday.

Toward 11 o'clock at night no standing room is left in the places of amusement. After 1 o'clock the Kurfuerstendamm is a sea of feet. From the cafés and beer houses swarm endless throngs on their way home.

Whoever could count what is spent in this one city, on this one day, would arrive at figures which would awe friend and foe. Is it the intoxication of the last hours before Judgment day? These people seem perfectly calm, as far from staggering giddiness as from gnawing doubt.

"If that bunch could see us!" I hear some one in the crowd say. "They think we are starving, groaning in hunger and despair. When has there ever been such profit before? That turkey we had cost 23 marks, but wasn't it worth it, eh? Why should we stint ourselves? Haven't we plenty of the wherewithal? Look; buds and blossoms in the shrubbery; a green winter! They will die in the frost. Well, we must be up at 9. To bed! Taxi—"

RAINY WEATHER BULLISH FACTOR IN GRAIN TRADE

New Crop Wheat Futures Are Strong; Cash Trade Slow; Coarse Grains Rally.

Prices for wheat were firmer yesterday, with the September advancing sharply. The new crop months were stronger than the May, in which there was considerable liquidation. Resting prices for the day were ½@¾c up. The main bullish feature was the weather in the northwest, which was again cold and unsettled in our northwest, with considerable rain. In the Canadian northwest there was a substantial drop in temperatures, with rain or snow general.

From Nebraska and Kansas reports were generally favorable, but the soft wheat states, according to the majority of reports, do not show much improvement, although some reports indicated a better outlook. A local firm had a bullish lot of reports from Indiana and Ohio. The abandoned acreage is expected to be heavy all through the soft wheat belt, and the farmers are still plowing up wheat in many sections.

Cash Demand Indifferent.

The cash demand was indifferent here and at the seaboard. Local sales were small at 10,000 bu. At the seaboard there was some buying of Manitoba wheat, but no sales of consequence of the American wheat. The offerings from the country were fair, and in the northwest there is a moderate movement. Farmers are expected to market but little wheat for some time, as they will be busy in the fields for several weeks. Country elevator stocks are moderate and there is a fair amount of wheat being shipped in.

There was a report that a strike was on at Canadian Pacific terminal elevators. Predictions were for continued unsettled weather northwest and in Canada. Le Count and Inglis sent in bearish reports on crop conditions from Nebraska and western Kansas. The reports from east of the Mississippi were less favorable than west of the river.

Argentine Weather Favorable.

Offerings from Argentina are fair and the weather conditions are favorable. The export demand there continues good in spite of the high freights. Conditions are said to be favorable for the seeding of the new crop. Weather is fine in the United Kingdom and seeding is making good progress. Receipts were 101 cars and primary points had 715,000 bu, against 614,000 bu a year ago. Duluth stocks showed a decrease for the week of 3,077,000 bu and Minneapolis decreased 50,000 bu for one day.

Primary receipts for the week were 5,565,000 bu, compared to 4,595,000 bu a year ago. Northwest receipts were 143 cars, compared to 163 cars a year ago, and Winnipeg had 653 cars, compared to 153 cars a year ago. Clearances for the day were 960,000 bu wheat and flour.

Corn Active and Higher.

Corn was fairly active and prices were strong at the close. Finishing prices were ⅜@½c to ¾c higher. Cash prices were a little firmer, but the trade was quiet even for Saturday, with sales of 25,000 bu. Offerings from the country were moderate. Deliveries on Monday are expected to be only fair. Receipts were 112 cars and primary receipts were 776,000 bu, against 759,000 bu a year ago. Primary receipts for the week were 4,563,000 bu, against 4,372,000 bu a year ago.

Clearances for the day were small at 11,000 bu. Cables were ½@1d up, the Liverpool market being influenced by the small shipments from Argentina and the high ocean freights. The weather conditions are favorable and the corn ground is being prepared in good season, with planting started in parts of southern Illinois. Armour was the leading buyer of May.

Oats Market Has Late Upturn.

The oats market was featured by the heavy buying of May by Armour and commission houses led by Wagner, Jackson Bros., and Slaughter. Commission houses and locals sold May and bought the July. Prices for the May rallied after an early break, and closed ⅝c higher, with the deferred months ⅛c higher. Receipts were 245 cars, with primary receipts of 1,007,000 bu, against 529,000 bu a year ago. Clearances for the day were 817,000 bu. Cash prices were firm and there were sales of 55,000 bu.

Provisions closed firm, with lard again the leader, the prices for that commodity selling about even with ribs. The cash trade was reported. Offerings were light and with hogs 10c higher there was little pressure at the start. Receipts of hogs were 9,000, with 40,000 the estimate for tomorrow. Western receipts were 506,200 for the week, against 452,000 a year ago. Tietgens bought early and sold later, but towards the close there was a good general demand.

Rye Market Steady.

Rye held steady. No. 2 was quoted 97½c nominal and a car of poor quality sold at 96c, and No. 4 sold 80c. Receipts 1 car.

Barley ruled 1c higher. Malting was quoted 71@80c. Spot sold 74@78c and to arrive 78½c; feed was quotable 62@66c, mixing 67@69c, and screenings 45@62c. Receipts, 31 cars.

Timothy seed was steady, with cash lots $4.60@7.75 nominal. Clover seed held without change; cash lots, $8.00@14.00 nominal.

Duluth flax closed 3¼@4⅜c higher. Cash on track and May, $2.04; July, $2.07½. Receipts, none. Minneapolis was 3½c higher, with cash on track $2.04½@2.08½. Receipts were 7 cars. Winnipeg closed 3⅜@3½c higher. May, $1.81⅝; July, $1.81¼. Receipts, 27 cars.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

There was little activity in the cash trade in wheat yesterday. Sales were 10,000 bu. Minneapolis reported an active demand for wheat at unchanged prices. The outside markets at other points were unchanged, with no special feature. No special demand for export was reported, and about all the business done was in Manitoba wheat. Cash corn and oats were steady to ¼c higher. Shipping sales were small at 25,000 bu corn and 55,000 bu oats. Country offerings of corn and oats were quiet. No new developments were reported in the export trade in corn.

A special meeting of the membership committee was held yesterday to consider the application of Herbert T. Robson, a member of the Liverpool firm of Ross T. Smythe & Co., and the buyer for the allies. The application was ratified and later a special meeting of the directors elected Mr. Robson to membership on the board of trade. Mr. Robson is now a member of the Chicago exchange, and also the grain exchanges at New York, Winnipeg, Buenos Aires, Rosario, Liverpool, and London.

Weather conditions northwest were generally unsatisfactory, temperatures again being low, while light rains were quite general, with the forecast for the cool and unsettled weather. In Canada there was rain or snow, with a sharp drop in temperatures to much below freezing at most points. The weather conditions northwest were responsible for an increase in the buying demand for wheat, as conditions are becoming more critical and the necessity for good weather more imperative.

Le Count wired that in the Hastings section of Nebraska wheat prospects were excellent, with good growth. Inglis wired Logan-Bryan from Great Bend, Kan., that wheat promised big crops, with acreage about the same as a year ago.

Reports on Illinois oats crop received by Bennett & Co. were favorable. Soil is in good condition, with plenty of moisture. Lots of wheat fields were said to b plowed up. Not much corn ill be planted until May 10.

Receipts of wheat at Chicago for the week were 1,631,000 bu and shipments were 1,824,000 bu; corn receipts, 1,299,000 bu; shipments, 1,044,000 bu; oats receipts, 3,455,000 bu, and shipments 3,192,000 bu.

Reports received by Clement-Curtis indicate the average seeding of oats is two to three weeks late, and from this it is assumed that harvest will be late, with possibility of light marketings in July.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 101 cars; corn, 112 cars; oats, 245 cars; rye, 1 car; barley, 31 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 40,000 head, and for all next week, 140,000 head.

Thayer & Co. had a report from southern Iowa and northern Missouri planting will be completed in another week, with outlook for some increase in acreage.

Corn planting has started in the vicinity of Decatur, Ill. This is the first reported from that section of the state.

Charters were made at the seaboard for 31,000 quarters to Bristol channel at 37½c per bushel, a comparatively low rate.

A strike was reported in the terminal elevators of the Canadian Pacific road at Fort William and Port Arthur.

Weather continues favorable in Argentina and the soil is said to be in good condition for seeding wheat.

Since March 1 the packing of hogs at Chicago has been 1,119,000, against 1,081,000 a year ago.

Frank Mauran made application for membership on the board of trade.

It Pays to Treat Utilities Well.

The relations between a public utility company and the community in which it operates are of importance to all members of the community, but doubly so the owners of stocks or bonds of the company. The security holders gain the same advantages from good service and suffer the same inconvenience from poor as the rest of the people, and, further, their incomes may be increased or diminished with the increasing or decreasing prosperity of the utility.

As the security holders are most concerned they should interest themselves in trying to maintain a reasonable attitude on the part of the public in general. If exactions of the authorities reduce or wipe out the profits of utility companies the community may think for a time that, in getting service at less than cost, it is the gainer. Later, if the town is a growing one, money will be needed for some extension of the utility concern's plant. Then the result of reduced earnings will appear. Securities will find no market except at a ruinous discount and the needed extension probably will not be made until there is a complete readjustment.

In other words, the interests of the utility company and the community are mutual. If the utility receives treatment that insures reasonable profit, investors will have confidence in it and its bonds can be sold at prices yielding a low income. If it suffers from continual exactions that make future profits doubtful, no one will buy the securities unless their income rate is high. It is obvious that high interest rates mean higher prices for service, while low interest rates mean less expense to the company, and ultimately, lower prices.

Salt Lake and Utah.

E. B. T.: The Salt Lake and Utah railroad has been operating less than two years. The road is still in the process of development so that its earnings, while increasing rapidly, are not yet large enough to make the $1,250,000 of first mortgage bonds now outstanding look like a seasoned investment. Gross earnings in the twelve months ended Feb. 29 last were $290,949, compared with $222,275 in the year ended Aug. 31. Net in the Feb. 29 year was $99,609. Fixed charges paid were $51,035, but bonds enough are now outstanding to make the annual interest $75,000. On the basis of $75,000 interest net earnings are still small, but as stated, they are increasing rapidly. Of course, the bonds will not be in the conservative class till the larger earnings have been realized.

Westinghouse Electric.

E. F.: The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company is said to be earning at the rate of 16 per cent a year on its $41,373,000 of common stock without taking into account the expected profit on $90,000,000 of war orders. The fiscal year ended March 31. The annual report, not yet issued, is expected to show about $9,000,000 profits compared with $2,562,412 a year ago. There is $3,998,700 of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock outstanding, and about $22,500,000 of notes and bonds. The dividend rate on common stock was increased from 4 to 6 per cent last October. Present large earnings, of course, are not expected to continue indefinitely and the stock is speculative.

Midvale Steel.

O. C. A.: President Corey of the Midvale Steel company recently made a statement that only 11 per cent of the current earnings of its properties, aside from the Remington Arms company, which has a $60,000,000 rifle contract, are dependent on war orders. He added that the capital investment of $20,000,000 in the Remington company as well as any other capital investments for war contracts, will be amortized out of the profits on such business. The Midvale is equipped to manufacture all classes of steel except tubes, tin plate, sheets and a few items of minor importance.

Brief Answers.

A. W. B., Perry, Ia.: The West Life Insurance company began as a mutual concern in 1907 and changed to a stock basis in 1912. On Jan. 1 last it had $3,402,478 of insurance in force. It has had an extremely low death rate. The cost of new business has been high. Disbursements last year were $11,861 to policyholders and $96,800 for expenses. Surplus increased from $11,254 to $42,762.

L. A. F., Benton Harbor, Mich.: The receiver of the American Real Estate company will be subject to the orders of the court. It cannot be predicted whether he will continue paying bond interest or not.

A. G. O.: The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific stock selling at 16 is the same that paid dividends for many years. The company is now in bankruptcy and a heavy assessment on stockholders is likely.

R. M., Varna, Ill.: Almost any reputable bond house will get you a Chicago city bond of $100 size. The price probably would be par or 100¼.

Shorn lambs	7.00@ 9.40

Hog receipts were posted at only 8,000 head and included 2,500 direct to packers. Under the small supply the market developed decided strength and sales were made at an advance of largely 10c from Friday's figures. Top sales were made at $10.10, the highest price of the year and the best made since April, 1914. The bulk advanced to $9.85@10.00 and the average to $9.96, the highest mark since April, 1910. Some of the packers stayed out of the trade, but there was enough demand to take care of all offerings and the market closed in a strong position, with only about 1,000 hogs left in the pens.

Final prices made hogs largely 30c higher than a week ago, with the general average price of total receipts here this week advanced to $9.85, or the highest weekly average made since April, 1910. Pigs were in limited supply and higher with hogs. The expectancy is for about 40,000 hogs next Monday and 140,000 for all next week.

CATTLE.

Beef steer market at Chicago this week was higher at the start, but an excessive midweek run caused a sharp reaction in values and final quotations were at a net decline of 10@15c. All classes were affected by the decline, and prime beeves topped the week at $9.90, against $10.00 the preceding week. Receipts showed a moderate increase for the week and included an unusually liberal proportion of good to choice fat steers. Cows and heifers also closed at a loss of 10@15c, while vealers finished the week at a decline of 75c, with lower markets in the east and the expectation of liberal receipts here for some time to come exerting a bearish influence.

Cattle at seven western markets for the week, 125,700, against 130,600 the preceding week, 136,200 a year ago, and 116,400 two years ago. Total for 1916 to date, 2,420,000, against 2,168,000 the same period in 1915.

SHEEP.

Lambs finished the week unchanged to 25c lower than a week ago for woolskins and 15@60c lower for shorn lots. Sheep showed little change, while yearlings were off 10@15c. Packers were out to buy shorn lambs at big reductions from the previous week's record establishing values and holders were forced to make concessions, especially on the higher priced offerings, the big end of the decline being sustained by animals that sold at top figures. Wool lambs were subjected to less severe pressure and topped at $11.65 or the same as a week ago, while the bulk sold at $8.90@11.50, against $9.25@11.65 the previous week. Sheep made a top of $9.25. Shorn lambs closed at $9.40 for the best, against $10.00 a week ago.

$107,000.000 In Copper Dividend for 1916

¶ This is the approximate amount it is now estimated will be paid copper shareholders, based on the distribution of $30,888,178, by 38 companies in the first quarter of the year.

¶ These figures demonstrate better than a volume of words could, not only the exceptional profits copper stockholders have already received, but the profits through regular and extra dividends to be paid during the balance of 1916.

¶ An intelligent idea of the merits of the dividend-paying coppers and the best purchases among them can be gained from our free Statistical Copper Book. Ask for 16-CT, including booklet explaining

"The Twenty Payment Plan."

¶ This plan enables one to buy bonds, New York Stock Exchange, Curb Market, and active unlisted securities, with a small initial deposit, followed by convenient monthly payments.

Milwaukee Electric Sale.

Linde Air Products was quoted 190@195. Great Lakes Dredge & Dock changed hands at 100. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply remains unchanged at 215@220, ex-dividend. Inland Steel was neglected, with quotations remaining nominal at 300@655.

After several years of disappointment and delay it is now confidently expected that the sale of the Chicago and Milwaukee Electric railway will take place next Monday and the road be taken out of the hands of the receiver. Before an announcement can be made of the exchange of old securities for new the matter will have to be submitted to the public service commission. It is hoped, however, that a definite plan can be made public within a short time.

Public utility stocks have been fairly active, with a general tendency toward higher prices.

Bank Share Quotations.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

LONDON, April 29.—The stock market closed the week subdued, Monday's holiday and the Irish situation effectually checking any expansion in business. Steadiness in American and Mexican issues was about the only bright feature.

Bar silver jumped another penny an ounce to 35½d, with the coinage demand insistent. Sellers are reserved and are talking a further advance. Silver mining shares advanced in sympathy with the metal.

Bar silver, 35½d per ounce. Money, 4@4½ per cent. Discount rates, short bills and three months, 4⅝@4¾ per cent.

PARIS, April 29.—Trading was quiet on the bourse today. Rentes, 63 francs. Exchange on London, 28 francs 29½ centimes. Five per cent loan, 89.

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

The market acted so well that houses with bearish tendencies felt inclined to predict higher prices, barring anything unfavorable over Sunday. Wall street is almost convinced that the submarine situation will work out without a further crisis at this time. Mexico has ceased for the moment to be disturbing, and it is thought that in some way the anthracite coal miners will be satisfied without a strike. With the volume of exports and domestic business showing no decreases, and money easy, the market position is temporarily reassuring.

Reading has come to be the favorite among railroad leaders in the market. Not only is there a strong pool in the shares, but earnings continue to be such as to warrant bull operations. The surplus after charges for March increased $1,293,824, and for nine months the increase after charges was $6,470,681. Reading stock yesterday, while active, did not show much change, but the tone was good throughout the session.

Copper production in the United States for the calendar year of 1915 is given by the geological survey as 1,388,009,627 lbs, against 1,150,137,192 lbs in 1914. Refined copper for 1915 is given at 1,634,000,000 lbs, an increase of 100,000,000 lbs over the previous year. The stock of refined copper on hand Jan. 1, 1915, was 173,640,501 lbs, and on Jan. 1, 1916, 82,210,835 lbs. The copper consumed in 1915 was 1,043,461,982 lbs, against 620,445,373 in 1914.

Distillers' Securities stock was one of the features of the market, advancing from 49½ to a close at 54¼. Several commission houses had advices to buy. In the latter part of May the board of directors are scheduled to meet to take dividend action. Persons close to the management have been advised that a full year's dividend of 6 per cent will be declared payable in quarterly installments and that $1,000,000 of bonds will be retired.

For the year ended Dec. 31, 1915, the Union Traction company of Indiana reports gross earnings of $2,486,246, a decrease of $9,277 compared with the previous year. Net earnings were $896,676, a loss of $23,147. Net income after charges was $57,433, or $10,462 less than the previous year.

The independent stockholders' committee of the Minneapolis and St. Louis is opposing the voluntary reorganization plan, which has been declared operative. The committee is asking for proxies for the stockholders' meeting to be held on May 15.

Spelter declined ⅛c to 18¾c, New York, and 17½c, St. Louis. The lead market is reported dead, and some sellers have reduced their offered price by ⅛c to induce buying.

The American Steel and Wire company announced an advance of $4 per ton on plain wire and a $2 per ton advance on wire nails and barbed wire. The advance goes into effect May 1.

The strength in International Nickel is based on the prospect of a declaration of an extra dividend at the meeting of the directors tomorrow.

MARINES RULE MARKET.

New York, April 29.—Trading during today's short session was almost completely dwarfed by the further feverish activity of Mercantile Marines at advancing prices. The preferred shares made an extreme gain of 6⅜ points to the new high record of 91, and the common rose a point to 25⅛, or ¼ under its maximum quotation, made early in the week. Combined dealings in these issues amounted to 110,000 shares, or over 25 per cent of the total operations.

Demand for marines was so insistent as to convey the impression of a contest for control, despite recent unofficial statements to the effect that new and important interests already are dominant. It is not improbable that today's upswing presages an early issue of a reorganization plan, to which the various contending factions in the company will find it advisable to subscribe.

Other Shares Slow.

The balance of the list was irregular and hesitant at the outset, but became more active in the final hour, under lead of such mixed specialties as Distillers' Securities, United States Industrial Alcohol, the motors, petroleums, and American Locomotive. In these and similar issues extreme gains of 3 to almost 6 points were scored and largely retained.

Rails and other standard stocks were a disappointment to those who looked for a continuance of their recent strength. Shares of this class were dull and pressure was effective throughout, with moderate losses. United States Steel followed the course of the rails, rising only the smallest fraction and closing virtually unchanged.

Reading Shows Gain.

There were further favorable railway returns for March, Reading reporting a surplus increase of over $900,000 and Canadian Pacific a net gain of $448,000.

Trade reports again referred optimistically to country-wide activity in wholesale and jobbing lines and predictions of higher prices for steel and iron were freely made. Incidentally silver rose another 2 cents to 73½, its record price in the last decade.

Bonds were strong, but without any expansion of dealings. United States bonds were unchanged on call throughout the week.

Here is New Power Available for Immediate Use

6,000 Horse-Power, Water—Steam—Electric—Ready for the Manufacturer to Move His Plant in and Start Turning Out Goods

THE scarcest thing in the manufacturing world today is new power. As many a man knows to his cost—the machinery market is stripped bare of power equipment, boilers, engines, and steam turbines—both new and second-hand.

Furthermore, the supply of coal and gas is diminishing and their cost increasing. With electricity produced by water power, the manufacturer is not concerned with coal strikes or delays in delivery of coal.

Fulton, N. Y., is located on the Great Falls of the Oswego River, 25 miles north of Syracuse and 10 miles south of Oswego. It is served by three important steam railroads and one electric railroad, also by the Barge Canal with water transportation to and from all points on the Great Lakes, the River and Gulf of the St. Lawrence, the Hudson River and Tidewater. Good factory sites—ideal labor market.

Over-night from New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Montreal and Boston.

Are you considering an Eastern factory? Let us send you details of our power facilities and our rates.

Close to your raw material market—in the heart of the Eastern selling area, plus cheap power, makes Fulton the practical city for your factory.

6,000 electric h. p. connected and ready for your factory. If you need more power, it can be provided by installing wheels and generators to utilize water now running over the dams.

Do You Need Power and Equipment For Special Work?

We will sell or lease one hydro-steam 1,800 h. p. electric plant located on the Barge Canal; also have available a new steam turbine plant, 2,300 h. p. capacity, located on private trestle switch from New York Central and N. Y., O. & W. Railroads. Both these plants fully developed electrically—good factory sites. Further information on request.

ADOPTS GRAIN GRADING BILL.

House Accepts Measure Designed to Prevent Deception in Traffic —Ignores Opposition.

Washington, D. C., April 29.—Against the protest of the New York produce exchange and other opposition the house today adopted as part of the agricultural appropriation bill the Rubey bill for uniform grading of grain. The bill fixed uniform grades in grain and is designed to prevent deception in grain traffic and to encourage the trade under uniform standards. It authorizes the secretary of agriculture to fix, establish, and promulgate grain grades and compel their use wherever grain is shipped in interstate or foreign commerce and sold by grade. It is similar to a bill passed by the house in the last congress and favorably reported from a senate committee but not acted on by that body.

Clean Up, Citizens, Clean Up!

Mayor Thompson's idea of "Clean-up week" in Chicago is to destroy the dirt and filth and put your premises in a healthy condition. He wants to prepare for summer when the deadly fly plays his star engagement. The idea is a healthy one and every decent citizen ought to respond without question or argument.

But what we want to say, in particular, is that we have been striving for this end for years, with the assistance of the Kewanee Garbage Burner, which has done more real sanitary good than any other one thing in Chicago.

Today there are hundreds of big buildings in this city, where food is served and where many people congregate, that are equipped with Kewanee Garbage Burners. And every one of these establishments is immune from the fly, the rat, and the germs of disease which heretofore had come directly from the foul garbage can in the basement entry-way or the side porch.

These buildings know the foul garbage can no more—the ill-smelling garbage wagon no longer halts in front of them and pollutes the atmosphere—and the reeking garbage man, who left a trail of foul liquid all the way from your back steps to his dirty wagon, has been wholly disposed of. There is now no feeding place for flies and vermin in these buildings, and the children who live in them are free from contamination.

This garbage burner destroys vegetable matter from your kitchen while it is still fresh and green. The scraps are dumped into the garbage burner as wet as a dish-rag. They haven't had time to decay or smell or draw flies. They dry out, become fuel, and help to heat the hot water tank with a distinct and definite saving in fuel of 25 per cent.

No flat building or apartment house is modern or advanced or up-to-the-hour unless it has that Kewanee Garbage burner, for it is the only burner on the market that destroys vegetable matter and debris without the slightest odor. It is a small, compact steel chamber, made of the same high-grade steel as the celebrated Kewanee Smokeless Fire-boilers are made of. The money it will save you in fuel for the heating of water will pay for its cost and its installation long before the year is out.

Kewanee Water Heating Garbage Burner, Type D, for Apartment Buildings, Hotels, Hospitals, Restaurants and Larger Homes

Note the arrangement of the water tube garbage grates. A small coal fire is started on the lower grates, the by-pass at the back (a patented feature of the Kewanee) prevents the wet and damp garbage from smothering the fire, the garbage is quickly dried and burns without odor, leaving nothing but a very small amount of ash. The garbage grates contain water and the entire chamber is surrounded by a water jacket, heating water hot in abundance.

Write today to The Old Man Behind the Boiler and get actual figures and data on the kind of coal consumed in this boiler and what the effect is in various ways.

WEST AND EAST DIVIDE HONORS IN PENN GAMES

Atlantic State Colleges Win Relays—Mucks Sets Two Records.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 29.—[Special.]—In a struggle that embroiled the pick of college athletes of America in the only intersectional college competition of the year, west and east divided honors in the twenty-second carnival of the University of Pennsylvania on Franklin field this afternoon.

Of the special contests on the track and in the field west and east each finished with four victories. On this basis of points for places the east showed a slight superiority with 14 to 11 places, due to the preponderance of numbers. In the relay races, however, the western collegians, for the first time in many years, failed to get a first place, Harvard taking honors in the one mile college championship, Yale in the two mile relay competition, and Cornell at four miles.

Divide Other Honors.

Victories for the west came in the 100 yard dash, 120 yard hurdle and the discus and shotput, while the east fared better in events requiring leaping ability, taking first place in broad and high jumps and pole vault and in the javelin throw.

The only double winner of the day was Arlie Mucks, the giant from Wisconsin, who also set two new collegiate records. He bettered the distance in the shotput and set another new record in the discus. He was far superior to his opponents in all events.

The most spectacular victory of the day was gained by a westerner, Bob Simpson of the University of Missouri, who set a new world's record in the 120 yard high hurdle on grass, but was deprived of a record on a technicality. Simpson covered the ten barriers in 15 seconds, two-fifths of a second better than the best previous mark. However, he was unfortunate enough to knock down a hurdle, and so lost credit for the record.

Smith, Michigan, Wins 100.

In the 100 yard dash the west made a sweep, two Smiths taking the first two places, with Sol Butler of Dubuque, fourth. H. Smith of Michigan, the intercollegiate champion, won two heats and then took a blanket finish by six inches over C. Smith of Wisconsin. The four mile relay, in which Wisconsin was looked upon with fear, was a procession for Cornell, which equaled the world's record of 17:51 1-5 for the distance. Schardt of Wisconsin ran the best individual mile in 4:25.

In the broad jump the west won three places. H. P. Pogue of Illinois finished second, and his teammate, U. Carter, was third. Butler, the Negro athlete of Dubuque, finished fourth.

Had the weather conditions been made to order for the occasion it is doubtful whether the athletes could have been better favored than they were today.

Overton Wins for Yale.

The two mile college relay championship looked like a battle between two western teams, Chicago and Michigan, up to the end of the mile. At that stage Yale jumped ahead, and with Johnny Overton, the intercollegiate champion hurdler, running last, the blue won by fifteen yards in 7:53, equaling the world's record made six years ago by the Irish-American A. C. of New York.

Clark, Chicago's first runner, came in with a three yard lead over Murphy of Michigan, covering his half mile in 1:59. At this stage Yale was five yards in the rear. In the second relay Stout, the clever Chicago half miler, held the lead for his team, getting a half mile mark of 1:58 for the distance.

Meredith Beats World Time.

The one mile university relay championship proved a battle between Pennsylvania, Princeton, and Harvard, with Wisconsin in the running until the final lap, when the brilliant Ted Meredith, running his quarter in the world's record time of :47 4-5, brought the red and blue home ahead of the westerners.

In the first quarter Wallace of Princeton had a four yard lead over Kaufmann of Penn, who was the same distance ahead of Harvard and Wisconsin.

In the next quarter the Tigers continued ahead, but Harvard had stepped into second position, placing Wisconsin third, with Penn hopelessly last. Harvard took the lead in the third quarter.

Ted Meredith was Penn's hope in the closing quarter, but though he passed Smith of Wisconsin in the stretch he was unable to catch Wilcox of Harvard. The Crimson runner came home with a five yard lead over Moore of Princeton, who was in turn three ahead of Meredith, Wisconsin being left in the lurch. The time of 3:19 was only one second behind the world's record.

Ufer Jumps Into Lead.

Ufer was Michigan's runner in this event and he held a five yard advantage over Cooper of Yale. At this stage Yale made its bid. Barker took up the running for the blue, opposing Donnelly of Michigan and Merrill of Chicago.

Barker ran a wonderful race and, making his bid 100 yards from home, flashed past Merrill and Donnelly and beat them by eight yards. Here Johnny Overton dashed out in front and despite the best efforts of Diamond, Chicago's colored flyer, and Carroll of Michigan, breezed home fifteen yards ahead, in time that equaled the world's record, Diamond taking second.

Summary of Events.

BOB O' LINK CLUB NEWEST ADDITION TO GOLF RANKS

BY J. G. DAVIS.

One more golf club has been added to Chicago's growing list, and as it is located along the north shore it looks as if that section was determined to keep ahead of the south and west sides.

Organization has been going along quietly for some time and the club has been given the rather appropriate name of Bobolink Golf club. It takes this appellation by reason of occupying the site which for half a century has been occupied by the farm of that name. Bobolink will now give place to men of the links.

Club Has 125 Acres.

The new club owns the fee to 125 acres located about one mile southwest of the Chicago and Northwestern station at Highland Park and less than one mile northwest of Ravinia station. The property is about six minutes' walk west of the Chicago and Milwaukee Electric railroad and a few hundred yards west of the Green Bay road.

Plans for a clubhouse to cost about $40,000 have been prepared and the work of construction will start shortly. Several of the leading course architects of the country have been consulted in the construction of the course, which will be 6,500 yards in length, one of the longest in Chicago. This will entail an outlay of $30,000. Work on this will be started at once.

Limited to 325 Members.

The membership is limited to 300 regular and twenty-five special members. To each regular member will be issued a transferable certificate on payment of $300, and to each special member a transferable certificate on payment of $1,000. Regular members will pay dues of $100 per year after 1916. Special members are exempt from dues. W. A. Alexander is chairman of the grounds committee and C. N. Kimball is chairman of the building committee.

The officers are: President, Walter W. Ross; vice president, Rufus C. Dawes; treasurer, C. N. Kimball; secretary, George F. Goodnow.

Directors: Knowlton L. Ames, Rufus C. Dawes, George F. Goodnow, C. N. Kimball, William J. MacDonald, W. D. N. Moore, Walter W. Ross, Ernst Wienhoeber, Lucian M. Williams.

Jim Parsons was second and Frank Elliott finished third. Earl Cooper was ruled out of the race at the end of the twenty-fifth lap for failing to report to the referee a change of mechanicians.

MAROON NET MEN WINNERS.

Columbus, O., April 29.—[Special.]—The University of Chicago doubles team captured two hard fought sets from Ohio State in the opening Big Nine tennis matches today, 11 to 9 being the score each time. Curran of Ohio, last year's conference champion in singles, was off form in the team play, but managed to beat out Al Lindauer, Chicago, in three sets in the singles. Clark of Chicago won easily over Zuck, Curran's Buckeye teammate, in the other singles match. Summaries:

WEAVER HELPS SOX WIN WITH TRIPLE PLAY

Russell Checks Browns and Hose Beat Plank in the Eighth, 3 to 1.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

St. Louis, Mo., April 29.—[Special.]—With the aid of a galumptious triple play staged by Buck Weaver, a couple of double killings, and a few other timely things the de luxe White Sox subdued the peeky Browns today in the opening game of the set by a score of 3 to 1.

Weaver turned the machine gun on the ranks of the enemy for the first wholesale slaughter of the season in the seventh inning. The score was tied at one apiece, although both teams had had chances to count more tallies. Two Browns were on bases with nobody out and the top of Jones' batting order coming up.

Weaver in Action.

Shotten tried to sacrifice the runners ahead, but failed, then attempted to poke a base hit over second. He sent it on a line almost straight at Weaver, who nailed the fly on the run toward second, then had the two runners helpless. By stepping on second base he retired one of them and by tossing the pill to Fournier he completed the timely slaughter. The Browns, who had been mighty frisky before that, subsided and behaved the rest of the way.

The White Sox had considerable trouble beating Old Man Plank, the well known southpaw flinger, who was relegated to the crutch age long ago by the dopesters. The Gettysburg vet held them to eight well scattered hits and might have had an even break but for a slip in his support in the eighth inning, when the Rowlands delivered the winning tallies.

Error Gives Browns Tally.

In spite of their agility and threatening aspect, however, the Browns would not have counted at all on Reb Russell if Schalk had not dropped the ball after tagging out the lone St. Louis tally at the plate.

The same Schalk helped Russell out of a couple of bad spots before that. He picked a Brown off third base in the first inning when the sacks were full with one out and he doubled up a stealer who tried to sneak second in a hit and run play in the sixth.

Joe Jackson not only made three safe swats, including a triple, but came to Russell's rescue with a throw which cut down a run at the plate in the third inning when the Browns again had the bags choked with one out.

Sisler Gets Three Hits.

The Browns did not hit Russell so hard, but scratched some of their hits. Sisler made three of the seven, and two of them were scratches. But some bad judgment in fielding helped the Browns a lot. Twice the Rowlands failed on attempts to force runners at second when the batsman bunted.

Russell was in trouble in the opener when Shotten's single, Austin's sacrifice, Sisler's single, and a pass to Marsans filled the sacks. They tried the squeeze play, but Pratt missed the ball and, quick as a flash, Schalk fired the pill to McMullin, nipping Shotten at third. Then Pratt rolled out.

Sox Score in Third.

The Sox counted in the third, which Schalk opened with a single. Russell failed to advance him, so Schalk stole second. J. Collins groundered, but McMullin was there with a timely single, scoring the first run.

The Browns tried to tie it up in their half. Plank singled. Shotten bunted a foul to Schalk, Austin laid down a bunt on which Russell tried to force Plank, but failed. Sisler lobbed a Texas leaguer over short, filling the corners. Marsans drove a fly to left and Plank thought he could score on it, but true as a Cupid's arrow Jackson shot the ball to Schalk for a double play.

St. Louis tied the count in the fifth. Shotten doubled with one out. Austin filed, then Sisler rolled a slow one toward short and beat Weaver's throw to first. Shotten rounded third and tore for home. Fournier threw him out, but Schalk let the ball slip out of his fist after the tag.

Rowlands Win in Eighth.

The Rowlands annexed the game in the eighth. J. Collins opened with a screamer down the third base line for two corners. McMullin bunted to advance him, and Austin helped by a wide peg to first, on which Collins scored and Mac reached second. E. Collins sacrificed Mac to third. Fournier popped out, but Jackson scored the clinching tally with a three base blow to right center. Felsch struck out. Score:

COBB'S DOUBLE BEATS INDIANS IN 11TH, 5 TO 4

Detroit, Mich., April 29.—Cobb's double in the eleventh inning after Witt had singled and advanced to second on Kavanagh's sacrifice gave Detroit a thrilling 5 to 4 victory over Cleveland. Two runs behind when they came to bat in the ninth, the Tigers staged one of their batting rallies. Singles by Young, Crawford, and Cobb tied the score. The game sparkled with fine fielding. Graney twice cut off runners at third by splendid throws after the Tigers attempted hit and run plays. Score:

Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, has written Lee Tannehill, third sacker for the South Bend Central league club and former White Sox infielder, that he will be in South Bend Thursday to witness the opening game here with Dayton. Tannehill and Comiskey were noted for their friendship while Comiskey was the South Bend player's boss.

In the Wake of the News

By RING W. LARDNER

THE DIARY OF A SIREN.

APRIL 25.

DIARY I am so excited I can hardly hold my pen still enough to write these lines. Lennie took me to the Palace last night and tonight he is comeing to call and diary we know the real purpose of his visit. After his actions and words of last night what else can we think? He is going to ask me point blank for my hand at the approaching meeting and how shall I answer him? Time alone can tell. I will act on the impulse of the moment and trust my heart to guide me right. I am sure I love him but not positive. Yet even did I desire to cast him aside I am not sure I have the strength so compelling is his way and so forcable his words.

As we were about to part after he had brought me home from the theater I saw that there was something on his mind and that only his becomeing shyness held him back so when he had pressed my hand and turned away my heart melted and forced me to give him the encouragement he needed. "Lennie," I said, "what is on your mind?" "My hat," he replied resorting to jest in the embarrassment of the moment. "No, Lennie," I said, "you have something to say to me and lack the courage to say it." "What have I got to say, Miss Wise?" he retorted, again trying to treat the matter lightly. "You know best, Lennie. I will prompt you no further," said I. "Well Girlie," he said, calling me by the name he always uses when his feelings are strongest, "are you going to be busy tomorrow night?" "Not if you claim my company," I said. So that is how we parted and tonight he is comeing and when he speaks what is on his mind how shall I reply? O diary if I but knew.

APRIL 26.

Diary I am betrothed. In October I am to become the bride of Lennie and haw strange it will be to be known to the world as Mrs. Lennie Gates instead of the name I have borne for these twenty-two years

It came about last night as my intuition told me it would an when the fateful moment arrived I could say nothing only yes and yield myself to Lennie's embrace.

Lennie had asked if he might come and call and when half past eight struck and he had not arrived I thought something terrible had happened, that he had been struck in the head by a baseball and killed or worse. Moving unsteadily to the phone I called up his boarding house and asked was he there. He was and when I heard his voice on the phone my heart leaped with joy and relief that nothing had happened. I asked him had he forgotten his engagement with me and he said no but he was tired out and thought he would make it another night. "O Lennie," I said banteringly, "how can such a great big man be scared of a little slip of a girl like I?" "If you think I'm scared of you or anybody else you got another think comeing," he said, not seeing the humor of my remark. Then he asked me would not tonight do as well and I told him about me haveing an engagement for tonight. "All right," he said, "if it is not too late I will come out now but can only stay a few minutes as I am dog tired."

So he came. I had been to the hair dresser in the afternoon and the gown I wore was the one I had made for the St. Patrick's day ball. His eyes were a sight when he entered the door and seen me. "Well, big bashful boy," I said, "have you got nothing to say for yourself now?" "You look mighty cute," he replied. "How would you like to look at me all the time?" I said banteringly. "I would not mind it if you always looked so cute," he said. "Do you mean it, Lennie?" I asked. "Sure," he answered. "Why not?" Then I am yours," said I falteringly, "I can not resist you Lennie." He kissed me before he went home and O that first kiss. We did not make any plans for the wedding, Lennie being backward about introduceing the subject and my heart being too full for words. But I presume the nuptials will take place after the baseball season is over when he will be at liberty to take me on our heavenly honeymoon. For the present the engagement is a secret and only Lennie and I know it except you diary.

SOX SYDELIGHTS

St. Louis, Mo., April 29.—[Special.]—Here again tomorrow.

The White Sox now have three victories out of nine games on this trip, with three more to contest.

Manager Rowland probably will use Jim Scott tomorrow and it is a cinch Jones will hand out a southpaw if Wellman is fit.

McMullin seems to have solved the third base problem, for he not only can handle the job defensively, but he looks like a fair hitter. Today he made a perfect record with two singles, a pass, and a sacrifice, and one of the singles was in a pinch.

Schalk almost headed off that triple play in the seventh. Shotten's second attempt to bunt resulted in a little pop foul back of the pan. Ray reached it with his mitt, but could not hold the ball. If he had there could have been no triple killing, of course.

Felsch bulled a play in the second inning. He was on first with one down when Weaver soaked a fly to right. Nobody could stop Felsch, who ran almost to third base and could not get anywhere near [illegible] first before Tobin threw the ball there for a double play.

Plank in throwing to first base to catch a runner uses something the same motion that was penalized by Chill against Danforth to the cost of a ball game in Detroit. Plank makes only a half step toward first in throwing the ball, and that was the fault found with Danforth's motion. The Sox kicked for a balk today, but it was a different pair of umps.

NOTES OF THE CUB GAME

St. Louis is the enemy again today.

The defeat of yesterday was the first one the home fans have looked at, but they undoubtedly will see many more before the season ends.

Heine Zim spiked Hornsby on the hand while stealing second in the eighth round, but the visiting shortstop stuck in the game.

Tom Seaton may do the hurling today, or Tinker may send Gene Packard or George Pierce to the slab. Carl Meadows is the candidate for St. Louis.

There is a crowd of jitney fans looking at the north side game each day. They ride out on the elevated, stand on the platform to see the game, the ride back—all for a nickel.

Mrs. Orvie Overall was a spectator at the game, but her once illustrious husband still is in Los Angeles. She is here visiting relatives, and attended the game just for old time's sake.

Long Cy Williams' homer in the first came down right on top of the brick wall and bounded as high as the three story buildings on the opposite side of the street.

There was a box held in reserve at the park for Teddy Roosevelt, as it was reported he intended to come out and look the Cubs over, but Teddy never got that far. That box was about the only empty one in the stand.

The Cubs have only two more games at home, both with St. Louis, and then they go to Pittsburgh for a series of four, returning for two here with Pittsburgh before taking on the eastern clubs on the north side lot.

GIANTS BEATEN BY DODGERS IN TWELFTH, 5 TO 4

New York, April 29.—The Giants lost their seventh straight game today when they were defeated by Brooklyn in twelve innings, 5 to 4, before the largest crowd of the season. After a seesaw contest in which the lead changed several times Brooklyn won in the twelfth on successive singles by Daubert, Stengel, and Wheat.

Fred Merkle of the Giants won an automobile in the eighth inning when his two base hit struck a sign on the left field fence, the advertiser having offered a car to the first player who hit the sign with a fly ball. The sign has been up since the opening of last season.

Manager McGraw of New York made a radical change in his lineup, sending Merkle to third, while Kelly, a Northwestern league recruit, went to first base. Score:

Philadelphia, Pa., April 29.—New York Yankees defeated Philadelphia in ten innings today by 4 to 2. HOMERS CRUSH TINKERS, 8 TO 4; BREAK STREAK

Cards Score 5 with Circuit Clouts Before a Crowd of 12,000.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

That long winning streak of the Cubs was broken yesterday when the other fellows were hitting the ball to the fences and sometimes over them. Even with Big George McConnell on the slab the north siders were unable to continue their killing pace and succumbed to the St. Louis Cardinals after a valiant fight, the score being 8 to 4.

There were a few things which happened on the ball field which would be better untold, but as there were at least 12,000 persons there who saw them with their own eyes it can't be a secret. The Cubs weren't quite on edge and they didn't have any luck and they couldn't hit much, but still they made a great fight, coming from behind and scoring three runs in the seventh, which tied the count and set everybody roaring.

Mulligan's Error Nets Runs.

That was about the only time all afternoon that they were in their regular stride. In the next inning they tossed a tally to the enemy when young Eddie Mulligan, who had supplanted Mike Doolan, let loose with one of his wildest throws. That run was enough, but in the ninth with two men on Bob Bescher was served a nice groove ball and he poled it over the right wall for a homer.

Big McConnell was far from the form he showed in his previous games, but it wasn't he who was charged with the defeat. He was taken out in the seventh inning to let "Dutch" Zwilling hit for him, and when the seventh was finished the score was tied. Mike Prendergast then was sent to the slab, and he was the unfortunate one present when the game was lost.

The Cubs started off just as if they would demolish the Cards and make their string of victories eight in number, for in the first inning after two were out Long Cy Williams drove the ball over the fence in right center for a homer.

Smith Opens with Single.

In the fourth Young Jack Smith started a fuss with a sharp single past Big Mac's ankles. Then Betzel drove one over Schulte's head to the left wall for two sacks, sending Smith home and tying the score. Long dumped a bunt in front of the plate, and Fischer snatched it, turned to shoot to third, but found Heine Zim wasn't on the bag, then fired the ball frantically toward Saier. The ball rolled to right field, letting Betzel score and Long reached second.

The one run lead didn't scare any one away from the park, but at the start of the sixth Big Mac walked Bescher, the second man he has walked this year. A sacrifice and an infield out put Bescher on third, and then Long smacked the ball into the left bleachers for a homer, Bescher trotting in ahead of him. That made the game a serious matter, and in the seventh the Cubs instituted one of their regular rallies.

Story of Cubs' Seventh.

With one out, Saier was hit by a pitched ball and Doolan walked. Tinker sent Leslie Mann out to run for Doolan, and Fischer bounded a slow one down the first base line and converted it into a single by good running and getting the best end of a close decision. That filled the bases and Steve Yerkes followed with a ripping single to right which scored Saier and Mann. Fischer went to third and Yerkes made second on the peg to the plate. Zwilling appeared as pinch hitter for McConnell and Sallee replaced Doak. "Dutch" hit the first pitched ball to Smith in deep center, and Fischer came in with the tying run. Schulte ended the rally by striking out.

The eighth was bad for the Cubs. Smith opened on Prendergast with a single and Betzel sacrificed. Long fanned, then Miller came. He swung wildly at one and flung his bat away down toward third base. Heine Zim ran in accommodatingly to toss the bat back and while third base was uncovered Smith scooted on to that station. Miller then rolled an easy one to Mulligan, who first fumbled, then recovered, and heaved to the visiting players' bench. Smith scored and Miller reached second, but further damage was averted when Beck popped up.

FROM COP'S JOB TO RING CAREER, FULTON'S STORY

Heavyweight Contender Boss of Traffic While Learning Angles of Game.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

Fred Fulton, the Rochester, Minn., giant, is on his way to the heavyweight championship—at least one is forced to that belief after hearing the huge Frederick and his manager, Mike Collins, talk a few lines. Fulton admits that he has a lot to learn about the game of fisticuffs, but at the same time he is confident that he has the mental capacity to assimilate the knowledge in which he is lacking.

The writer has just received a letter from Mike Collins, who is with Fulton in New York, and as Mike is the official mouthpiece of Fulton, what he has to say of course "goes double" for the giant. "Fulton is going right along and upward and his work in Gotham is making a big hit with the fans," writes Michael. "He is getting on to a lot of things and is improving every time he puts on a glove. I don't think any of these heavyweights are going to stop him in his march to a battle with Champion Jess Willard."

Collins an Unusual Manager.

That's a whole lot coming from Collins, who is just a wee bit more talkative than a clam. Mike is a careful person. He's careful in everything he does and he is equally as careful in picking the words with which he phrases paragraphs. Mike says that Fulton has some things to learn about the fighting game, but at the same time he says that Mike Collins has a lot to learn about the business of managing a scrapper. Perhaps this is one of the reasons he is just the reverse of a bunch of other managers—Tom Jones, who looks after Jess Willard's affairs; Danny Moran, who is manager for Battling Levinsky, and Jack Britton et al. Adhesive tape, such as some of the docs advise for pasting on the lips to prevent snoring, wouldn't stop the flow of conversation from some of these other managers.

Plasterer by Trade.

It is known that the Minnesota giant is a plasterer by trade. In fact, Frederick boasts that at the age of 17 years he was a contracting plasterer in his adopted home of Rochester. But according to Fulton there often are times when business in the plastering trade isn't brisk and one of these times came when he was just turning the 20th milestone. He was a big husky chap then, but never had done any scrapping. In fact he wasn't quite sure what a boxing glove looked like.

So one day when Frederick was loafing around town, he happened to run into a "Mysterious Stranger." This stranger later was uncovered as Norman King, who was a detective in Minneapolis. King opened up a conversation with Fulton and finally asked him if he had ever tried the boxing game. Getting a negative reply, King asked him why he didn't give the sport a whirl. "Sure I'd try it if there was anything in it for me," was Fulton's answer.

Lands Job as Traffic Cop.

It never has been divulged whether the Minneapolis detective made that trip to Rochester for the express purpose of pulling Fred Fulton into the boxing game, but the next chapter tells of the beginning of making Frederick a fighter and also a policeman. Of course a "green" one like Fulton couldn't exist on the large fresh ozone of Minneapolis, so it was up to some one to get him a job to hold down while he was learning the first rudiments of the sport of hit and get away.

King knew Frank Force, then a Minneapolis newspaper man, and between them they started the wheels going until they had landed a job for Fulton on the Minneapolis police force. As Fulton didn't know much about the city he was not put at traveling a beat, but they installed him as a traffic cop at one of the busiest corners in Minneapolis. What Fulton has to say about that job is plenty. He didn't know where any of the hotels or big office buildings were located and was trying to look about fourteen different ways at the same time so that he wouldn't be run down by an automobile or be put in the hospital by a street car.

Gets Through by Bluffing.

In talking about the traffic cop business Frederick says:

"Everybody that came along my way that first day seemed to be looking for information. Some of them wanted to know where this or that building was located and others where to find a hotel or a street. I sure was up against it but I couldn't let them get wise to the fact that I couldn't tell them what they wanted to know. I made one guess and that was right. That was that they didn't know any more than I did, so I began bluffing and for that whole day I just pointed when the inquisitive ones asked a question and said 'this way' or 'that way.' I guess some of them are still looking.

"About the middle of the afternoon when I was beginning to grow tired it took a little news kid to nearly get my goat. This chap kept running back and forth near me selling his papers and got wise to the fact that I was a "green" one. I thought he was going to get hit by an automobile and shouted to him to keep out of the way of the machines.

"'Aw, g'wan,' he answered. 'Get out of the way, did you say? Why don't you keep that advice to yourself? You can't keep one of your big feet out of the way of the other.'"

Fulton admitted this was right, for not long after, while dodging a flivver, he stepped on one of his own feet.

Perseverance was Fulton's long suit and he didn't allow the little troubles of that first day or those following to stop him from holding down the job of traffic cop. He held the job for a year and at the same time was breaking into the boxing sport under the tutelage of a bunch of local talent at whose expense he made quite a local reputation.

Track, Golf, and Tennis Tourneys Will Be Combined on May 12 and 13.

Urbana, Ill., April 29.—[Special.]—The University of Illinois will combine three prep school athletic tournaments in one huge meet Friday and Saturday, May 12 and 13. The twenty-fourth annual interscholastic track and field events, the fifth annual tennis tourney for high school men, and the first invitation golf tournament will be run off on the Illinois athletic fields during the two days.

The golf tournament will be the first event of the kind staged by a college for prep contestants, it is said. The track meet will in reality be three meets, as the prep contestants will be classed in three division, with three winners. Class A will include high schools of Illinois with an enrollment of over 400 students; class B, Illinois high schools with less than 400 pupils, and class C, academies in Illinois and high schools and academies outside this state.

Golf at Champaign Club.

Preliminary track events in class B, which is the most numerous division, will be run off Friday afternoon. The other track contests will be held Saturday morning. The golf qualifying play will begin Friday morning and finals will be played Saturday morning over the Champaign Country club course. Tennis preliminaries and finals will be played on varsity courts on Illinois field simultaneously with the golf.

Illinois and Chicago will engage in two Big Nine contests on Illinois field Friday afternoon, and the prep contestants will receive tickets to these attractions. Coach G. Huff's diamond worthies will meet Pat Page's Maroon nine at 1:30 o'clock, and Coach Gill's 1916 conference indoor track champions will be pitted against the squad drilled by Old Man Stagg, in a dual meet at 3:30 o'clock. The high school athletes will be furnished other diversion during their stay.

Frats to Entertain Preps.

The fraternities and campus clubs will house and entertain the preps during their week end at Urbana. The university military band is scheduled for a concert, and the athletes will be guests at a reception and informal program when the trophies are awarded the victorious teams and individuals on Saturday. An interscholastic oratorical contest will be held Friday evening. The eleventh annual interscholastic circus—when the freshmen compete for the clown championship of the campus—will be a feature Saturday afternoon.

Because of the possibility of danger to the health of young athletes, the track men will be restricted to two events, although allowed the privilege of entering three. Runners in the quarter, half, and mile will not be permitted to take part in any other event except the relay. Other track and field contestants may enter the relay in addition to two other events.

The three schools winning the championships in the different divisions will be given trophies, and individual medals will be given contestants placing first, second, third, and fourth.

Expect 100 in Net Tourney.

Managers of the high school tennis meet are planning to take care of more than 100 prep players. The net meet did not attract much attention when inaugurated in 1911, but has opened the year's campaign on the courts for high school racket wielders in recent seasons.

The golf tournament will be conducted over two courses. The entrants will meet at the university gymnasium at 9 o'clock Friday, May 12, and will be divided into two squads. One division will play eighteen holes over the university course, and the other will compete at the country club. After this round the squads will be transferred, each man playing eighteen holes over each course on Friday. The final eighteen holes will be finished Saturday morning. The four leaders in the tournament will receive prizes.

STECHER AND DEMETRAL IN BOUT AT COLISEUM.

If present plans of the Coliseum Athletic club's officials go through, one of the greatest gatherings of heavyweight wrestlers ever assembled on one stage will be seen at the Wabash avenue building next Friday night.

It was a problem to find suitable opponents for these men. Gradually this difficulty is being overcome, and inside of a day or so the complete program will be announced. In the meantime these athletes have been engaged: Joe Stecher of Dodge, Neb., American champion; Charles Cutler of Chicago, former American champion; Wladek Zbyszko of Poland.

William Demetral, the Greek demon, has accepted terms for a finish match with Stecher, and this will be one of the big features. Opponents for the other men will no doubt be selected within the next twenty-four hours.

BASKET TOURNEY RESULTS.

The field in the Illinois state 125 pound basketball championship at the Hebrew institute was reduced to eight quintets as the result of four games last night. In the feature combat the Training A. C. of Stanford Park defeated West Side Y. M. C. A. Browns, 21 to 20, after trailing, 13 to 9, at half time. Atkin won for his team by shooting two baskets in the last minute of play. In the other games the Delts of Kenilworth defeated the Palmer Park Monitors, 35 to 30; Foster Speed Boys of Evanston downed the Chicago Hebrew Institute Intermediates, 19 to 11; and Hamlin Park Triangles upset Armour Square, 30 to 11. Four more games will be played Tuesday night, with the semi-finals on Wednesday and the final on Saturday.

Thomas won first prize in the class B tournament at Muzzey's, defeating Ed Berg [41], 41 to 26.

DONATES TROPHY AND $2,000 COIN FOR SPEED KING

BY J. C. BURTON.

The Elgin road races of 1916 will be more attractive to drivers than ever before as a result of negotiations recently completed between the contest board of the American Automobile association and the Bosch Magneto company, whereby the latter will give a trophy and $2,000 purse to the speed king making the best showing in this season's championship events.

The Elgin trophy race has been designated by the A. A. A. as one of the contests which will count in the award of the title, consequently drivers who heretofore have been backward in entering the Watch City meet because of the small amount of prize money hung up, but who are anxious to win the Bosch trophy and purse, now will look upon Elgin with more favor.

Other Championship Races.

The other races that will be listed as championship events are the 150 mile Metropolitan trophy contest, which will be run at Sheepshead bay May 13 and the 300 mile motor marathons to be held on the Indianapolis and Chicago speedways May 30 and June 10, respectively. Other events are to be so designated by the A. A. A. later.

The winner of the trophy will be decided by the A. A. A. contest board according to a point system, as yet to be worked out. However, the course, distance, number of starters, etc., will all have an influence on the number of points awarded to each place. The driver with the highest number of points will be awarded the Bosch trophy and the sum of $2,000 in cash. The driver gaining the second best number of points will be given $1,000, and the driver getting the third best number of points will receive $500.

Solid Silver Trophy.

The Bosch trophy is to be of solid silver and will have a value of more than $1,000. It will be presented to the winning driver together with his cash prize at the Chicago Automobile club dinner during the week of the 1917 automobile show.

Dillon to Box Porky Flynn.

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 29.—[Special.]—Leo Levy, matchmaker of the Randolph Rose Athletic club, announced tonight that he had signed Jack Dillon and Porky Flynn to fight eight rounds here on the night of May 16.

WHIST QUERIES

Osage, Ia.—[To the Editor.]—West bid one spade, north two diamonds, east passed, south passed, west three clubs, north three diamonds, east three spades, and the bidding closes. Who plays the hand, west or east?

North bids two spades, east two no trump, north three spades, east doubles. Now, has north a right to pass? I know he has a right to change the bid, but was not certain about the passing. J. B. E.

Ans.—1. West would play the combined hands. 2. North might either bid or pass.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—In 500, A bids eight no-trump. B to get lead away from him leads ace of hearts. A has king and other hearts. Can be trump with joker? M. D.

Ans.—A must play a heart.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—There are three in the pot. Cards are drawn and A checks, no bet being made. B passes, C checks. A calls deuces; C says two pairs. A takes in the pot. Then C discovers he has three fives before throwing his hand away and shows them. Who wins? C. L. S.

Ans.—Three fives win.

Dunne, established a new record in the javelin, hurling the missile 156 feet 10 inches.

THE GREAT CONSTANT

¶ We enjoy the cartoon, laugh at it if it's good enough, but we don't hang cartoons in our homes. Perhaps the stooped and sombre figures in "The Gleaners" by Millet express a wholesomeness that we like. Perhaps a strain of adventure in us responds to one of Remington's paintings of the rugged west. Perhaps it isn't a famous picture at all—maybe the face of a laughing girl by some artist whose name we have never heard. Whatever our choice, we hang on our walls only pictures that we like; and we don't really like any picture unless it expresses something of ourselves.

¶ Likewise, after we have heard all of the ragtime and tuneful musical comedy airs, in our more serious moments we come back to something else. If we are educated musically it may be some classic opus; otherwise it is doubtless a quaint, old folk song or a plantation melody.

¶ Although most of us like the bizarre for its own sake—still, when we get away from the bustle of things for a while, we express ourselves in a more substantial way. The bizarre was all right for the moment, but when we have time to think it over we realize its awful insignificance.

¶ We live for self expression. Our homes, our clothes, our pictures, our music, our friends, our books, our conversations, are, to a considerable degree, reflections of ourselves. And in taking the aggregate of these things and boiling it all down we do not get a puffy kettleful of fickleness and inconstancy and frivolity, those traits so frequently mentioned by casual critics of the American people, but a substantial residuum of good judgment, good taste—constancy in things that count. We might call it the Great Constant—this line toward which nearly all of us converge in worth while matters.

¶ In this 1916 one of the greatest mediums for self-expression is the automobile. Of course the automobile is primarily to ride in just as the home is primarily to live in. But neither house architecture nor automobile architecture really satisfies us unless we like it; and we don't really like it unless it is in some manner an index to the better part of ourselves, the part of good judgment and good taste.

¶ We have the cartoon in motor cars, and the musical comedy in motor cars, yes, and the vaudeville. Some of us seize upon them in our novelty-loving moods; but just as we would sicken of seeing the same cartoon every day or of hearing the same fox trot with every meal, we must sicken sooner or later of riding in a motor car which does not represent the stratum of constancy that is in us.

¶ Trace the line of the Great Constant in motor vehicles. See the lines bending toward it in design and constructive quality. Some converge up to it in price, some down to it in price; some up to it in style, and many down to it in style, from the countless peaks of freakishness.

¶ Out of fifteen years of experience has been built a car of the Great Constant for a public that is constant in things that count.

DOUBLES SCORE MAY LAND STATE BOWLING TITLE

Count of 1,270 by Faetz and Hildebrandt Features First Week of Tourney.

Bowlers completed the first week of the annual Illinois Bowling association tourney with only one score registered which fans expect may last—the 1,270 of Mattie Faetz and Charley Hildebrandt in doubles. High mark in the five men event was reached by the Chalmers, present state champions, who got 2,865 on the late shift Friday.

Victor Schulz of Wheaton tops the singles with 664, but is expected to be passed on almost any shift now that star teams and men are in action almost continually. Harry Leffingwell, one of the Cosmos of the Business Men's and Jefferson leagues, rolled nearest to Schulz yesterday with 639. Several others rolled over the 600 line.

Two men work was tame, the best approach to Faetz and Hildebrandt's mark being the 1,184 of J. A. Grauer and Pete Moerschbacher of the Berghoffs, who ran fourth. Paul Heine and R. C. Timm of the Edgewater Country club shot 1,145. Jimmy Blouin and Bob Rolfe, two cracks from the Chalmers club, dropped 1,137.

IOWA RECORD HOLDER

Grinnell College Furnishes Sprinter Who Sets 220 Yard Mark on Circular Track.

CHARLES HOYT, the Grinnell college sprinter, who won the special 220 yard dash at the Drake relay carnival at Des Moines April 22, set a new world's record for curved track by making the distance in :21 2-5.

From a spectacular point of view the special dash, a new feature in the Drake relays, will not soon be forgotten. Competing in this event were Barker of Northwestern, Smith of Michigan, holder of the eastern intercollegiate record with a mark of :22 flat; Carter of Wisconsin, whose interscholastic record of :21 3-5 was lowered for the first time Saturday; Hohman of Illinois, with a record of :22 in the Wisconsin-Chicago meet; Hoyt of Grinnell, whose best mark of 21 4-5 was recorded in an interscholastic meet at Chicago; Pershing, Coach Stagg's best bet, and Shearer of Drake, holder of the Iowa state record of :22.

The men finished: Hoyt of Grinnell, first; Hohman of Illinois, second; Shearer of Drake, third. Time, :21 2-5.

CHICAGO TARS PREPARE BOATS FOR CAMPAIGNS

BY JACK PROCTOR.

Taking advantage of recent fine weather, local yachtsmen swarmed about the shipyards and made rapid progress in the work of getting their boats ready for the coming season. As usual, the greatest activity was among the members of the Jackson Park Yacht club, who are obliged to claim their moorings soon after the middle of May or forfeit their right to them.

At Kraft's South Chicago shipyard about forty yachts of the Jackson Park fleet were launched Friday and yesterday and towed to the lagoon, where the work of rigging and fitting out is to be carried on. Oscar Larsen was the first Chicago yachtsman to place his boat in commission. Larson broke the ice when he sailed his twenty foot class champion Rascal to its mooring.

New Clubhouse Ready May 30.

Work on the new clubhouse of the Jackson Park club is progressingly rapidly and Commodore William M. Lawton expects it to be entirely finished for the official opening of the season on May 30. The quarters, which are about three times as large as the old clubhouse, will cost $6,500.

Secretary Charles Scates of the Lake Michigan Yachting association yesterday sent out the schedule of racing events for 1916. While the official opening of the season is set by all the clubs for Memorial day, no race of importance will take place until June 17, when the Columbia Yacht club will run its annual cruising race to Michigan City.

Corkill Sells Yacht Margaret.

Chicago is to lose another big boat. John J. Corkhill has sold his eighty foot schooner yacht Margaret to an eastern yachtsman and it will leave for the Atlantic coast as soon as navigation opens. Margaret never has been seen in action in local waters, having reached Chicago last fall too late to engage in any events.

To offset the loss of Margaret, the Chicago Yacht club fleet will welcome a "comeback" favorite in Dr. William L. Baum's 100 foot schooner yacht Amorita, which has been out of commission for the last three years. Dr. Baum has decided to return to the game.

KING
EIGHT CYLINDER

10% of the hundreds of Chicago owners of King "Eights" are doctors. Most of them are physicians and surgeons of highest standing—men who are BUSY—who MUST have a car that is ALWAYS ready to go at the mere press of the starting button. The trouble-free-ness of the King "Eight," its locomotive speed, its stanch reliability, its never-failing fidelity to its owner—these qualities that make it the Doctor's most popular car, are all qualities that have a REASON. The REASON is the King's imperial QUALITY from fender to tail-light. Those who would willingly pay more for a car than is asked for the KING, find the necessity gone when confronted with King PERFORMANCE and LUXURY.

12½% of the hundreds of Chicago owners of King "Eights" are prominent women. ALL but two of these women do their own driving, and over half of them care for the car themselves. WHY IS the King "Eight" the popular choice of WOMEN drivers?

Because the King Eight is SIMPLE. It OBEYS. It steers without effort. It is always in apple-pie ORDER. It never causes the slightest trouble. It rides with "easy-chair" comfort. Its lines are incomparable. ANY woman can learn to run it just about as quickly as she can GET IN AND DRIVE OFF. The REASON is the KING'S remarkable EIGHT cylinder engine. The EIGHT cylinders make it TWICE as SIMPLE as any FOUR cylinder car for a woman to manage.

The endorsement of Doctors who require CERTAINTY in a motor car, and the choice of women who must have SIMPLICITY is a big and concentrated argument in favor of the KING EIGHT FOR YOU.

Comparison is the deciding factor; not in the store but on the road; not on a smooth road, but on a rough road, and up a hill; not up an easy hill, but up a steep, bad hill. THEN, YOU'LL have A KING, and you'll be enthusiastic and convinced, too.

Urbana, Ill., April 29.—[Special.]—Red Gunkel, backed by faultless fielding, shut out Wisconsin today, 4 to 0, and held the Badgers to two hits. The Illini veteran was in good form and the Cardinals were never in the running.

The Illini took an early lead. Moon tightened with the bases full on one occasion, but in the eighth the locals slugged. Moon's support was ragged; the visitors throwing the ball wildly at critical times. Score:

Lafayette, Ind., April 29.—[Special.]—Purdue whitewashed the ambitious Indiana nine, 7 to 0. Kaufman pitched invincible ball, while Ridley was beng hit hard, and the Boilermakers took advantage of every bobble by the visitors.

Perrin, Kistler, and Stonecipher were Purdue's best batters, Perrin driving in two runs. The infield showed great improvement and the whole team played in rare form. In the fifth inning Shively replaced Ridley and did good work. The crowd was the largest that ever saw a game on Stuart field. Score:

HITTING MAROONS HUMBLE ROSE POLY BY 14 TO 0 VERDICT

The University of Chicago nine whaled out six runs in the first inning yesterday and piled up fourteen runs while Larkin and George were holding Rose Polytech of Terre Haute scoreless. The Maroons got thirteen runs and ten hits in the first four innings and then tried to take two bases on every play to get the game over. Griffin led the slugging with a single, a double, and a home run, and a diving catch by Carter robbed him of another extra base swat.

In the first inning Hap Rudolph of the Maroons tried to dodge a wild pitch, but was hit at the base of the skull and knocked unconscious. He was carried to the bench, but was revived and went back on the field, making two pretty stops.

Larkin held Rose Poly to one scratch hit in four rounds and George finished, allowing only three bingles, no two of which came in the same inning. Score:

Braves Release Blackburn.

Boston, Mass., April 29.—Earl Blackburn, a catcher, was released to Providence Internationals by Boston Nationals today.

BY KEENE GARDINER.

FRED BILLS, Jay and Ed Graham, Jesse Young, Fred Gilbert, Guy Dering and other well known trap shooters, beware!

There is a little fellow, now 8 years old, who is apt to beat you. His name is James J. "Six" Cooper, and he lives at 4853 Washington boulevard, Chicago. He has been shooting only two years, but in a recent tourney held at the Long Lake Gun club he broke 41 out of 50 targets while "shooting over the trap," and incidentally won a gun which will enable him to shoot from the sixteen yards rise.

Jimmy, or "Little Six" as he is known at the traps, inherited his ability from his father, who was one of the best live bird shooters in the country at the time Tom Marshall ruled supreme. Little Jimmy learned to shoot when on duck hunting expeditions with Cooper, père, and since that time has been a constant devotee of the sport.

Of course, followers of the shotgun know what the term, "shooting over the trap," means. For the benefit of those who are not familiar with the sport, explanation is necessary. Little Jimmy stood over the trap, the instrument from which the targets are sprung. In other words, he was on top of the bird, and at the command "Pull," denoting that the target should be sprung at some difficult angle, Jimmy broke them with the accuracy of a Bills or one of the Grahams, or Clarke of Chicago, who won the Grand American handicap on the lake front last summer.

Naturally shooters are taking a keen interest in the little fellow. He has mastered the rudiments of the sport, and as soon as he gains enough strength to hold a big gun, one that will break targets from at least the sixteen yard rise, the dopesters look to see him improve until possibly he may become champion of the world at clay birds.

Previous to breaking 41 targets out of 50 Jimmy's best record was 15 out of 25, while shooting over the trap. Shooting from sixteen yards his best total was 10 out of 25. Because of the small bore of his shotgun he dusted many targets, but they were registered as lost because there was not enough power behind the charge.

"Little Six" is an enthusiastic admirer of Jay Graham, with whom he shoots at Long Lake, and who won the Olympic title at Stockholm in connection with the Olympic games. He intends soon to take part in a tourney under the guidance of his proud father.

AMATEURS PLAN TO MAKE NOISE NEXT SATURDAY

BY SAM WELLER.

Next Saturday will be amateur base ball day for the United States. The executive committee of the National Base ball federation, meeting yesterday at the Hotel La Salle, drew the proclamation, and has made plans to celebrate the occasion in fitting manner by special contests, speeches, parades, and added features at the games, after a week of campaigning to bring out amateur and semi-pro nines all over the country.

The amateur officials framed regulations for the summer's campaign of the nines under their jurisdiction, and planned to conduct municipal, sectional, and national championships. Applications from fifty-five cities were on file at the meeting, but none was passed on. One hundred and fifty cities were covered in a report on a survey of amateur base ball all over the country.

Must Play in Five Games.

A rule was passed making a player ineligible for title games unless he will have played with the team five games during the season. This will prevent "stuffing" teams for championships, according to Secretary Tom Nokes. All clubs will be restricted to sixteen players, including the manager, but home clubs will be required to pay the expenses of only fourteen men when the championship series bring teams from different cities together.

Competition under the federation rules will be in two classes. Class A includes strictly amateur teams, and class AA semi-pro aggregations. Championships will be decided in both classes. The title series will begin Sept. 1, on which date each city championship must be settled. To qualify for titular games a team must be the recognized champion of its city.

File Names by Aug. 16.

The list of sixteen players, on which a nine will depend in the title games, must be filed with Secretary Nokes by Aug. 19. In case the city championship is not settled by that date, all nines with chances to land their city pennants, and thus qualify for the big series, must send in their membership rolls.

The Butler Brothers nine of Chicago, last year's city champion, and Cleveland White Autos, national amateur title winners in 1916, will play an exhibition game at Cleveland early in June, making the first big game of the season under auspices of the federation. The proceeds will go to the treasuries of the federation and the Cleveland and Chicago local bodies. The executive committee will meet in Cleveland July 6 to arrange playing dates and draw for the championships.

President C. C. Townes of Cleveland was in charge of the sessions. Other officials were Secretary Tom Nokes, Johnstown, Pa.; Vice President C. W. Sturr, Cincinnati, and W. B. Bickford, Chicago. J. Garland (Jake) Stahl and Henry M. Tufo, local amateur officials, also attended. Nokes is mailing application blanks and giving information to amateur teams wishing to affiliate with the federation at Johnstown, Pa.

RIVALS PROTEST WHEN LA GRANGE NINE WINS, 7 TO 6

New Trier Claims Interference and Bum Ruling—Fists Fly in Morton Game.

BY OTTO A. ENGEL.

La Grange won its fourth Suburban High school league game yesterday, defeating New Trier, 7 to 6, but will have to face a protest which will be filed by Coach Snyder next week. According to the New Trier tutor, three or four small boys bumped into Right Fielder Searle as he was attempting to make a catch on fair ground.

Umpire Corsant permitted the La Grange runner to go to first. Later Casper of La Grange was hit by his batted ball and Snyder declared the umpire refused to call the batsman out.

Losers Threaten at Finish.

After getting a seven run lead La Grange was threatened with defeat by New Trier rallies which netted six runs. In the eighth the visitors filled the bases, but two pop fouls and an out at first killed off chances for victory. Score:

Evangeline
Reproduction of a painting by G. H. Boughton

Every week The Sunday Tribune will reproduce in four colors on this page one of the world's most famously beautiful paintings. There will be a brief biography of the painter and a story of the painting. Herewith is reproduced another in the series.

By LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

ON the burnished grasses of Acadie, at the noontide of a beautiful flowering day, the fabulous maiden of Longfellow's creation is bringing home brewed ale to the reapers. Soft grays and sensitive greens convey by their delicacy and charm the quiet and contentment which pervaded Acadie before terrible tragedy ruined the land.

Evangeline is dreaming the dream of her love, the dream which was never destined for fulfillment. She looks as though she were seeing a thing divine, as if in her heart there must be heavenly harmonies from which the great joys of her life were to be wonderfully radiated. In the words of the poet:

Fair was she to behold, this maiden of seventeen summers,
Black were her eyes as the berry that grows on the thorn by the wayside—
Black, yet how softly they gleamed beneath the brown of her tresses!
Sweet was her breath as the breath of the kine that feed in the meadows,
When in the harvest heat she bore to the reapers at noontide
Flagons of home brewed ale—ah, fair in sooth was the maiden.
Fairer was she when on Sunday morn, while the bell from the turret
Sprinkled with holy sounds the air, as the priest with his hyssop
Sprinkles the congregation and scatters blessings upon them.
Down the long street she passed with her chaplet of beads and her missal,
Wearing her Norman cap and her kirtle of blue and the earrings
Brought in the olden time from France and since an heirloom
Handed down from mother to child through long generations.
But a celestial brightness, a more ethereal beauty,
Shone on her face and encircled her form, when after confession
Homeward serenely she walked with God's benediction upon her.
When she had passed it seemed like the ceasing of exquisite music.

But love's fairest consummation was not for Evangeline. The adored image that had taken possession of her heart was snatched from her at the moment it was about to be hers. The day of their marriage all the strong men of the province were summoned to appear in the church to hear a proclamation. Gladly they gathered there, thinking some great good was about to befall them. Immediately they were seized by English officers and shipped out of Canada into New England, there to be distributed for the general good of the various colonies.

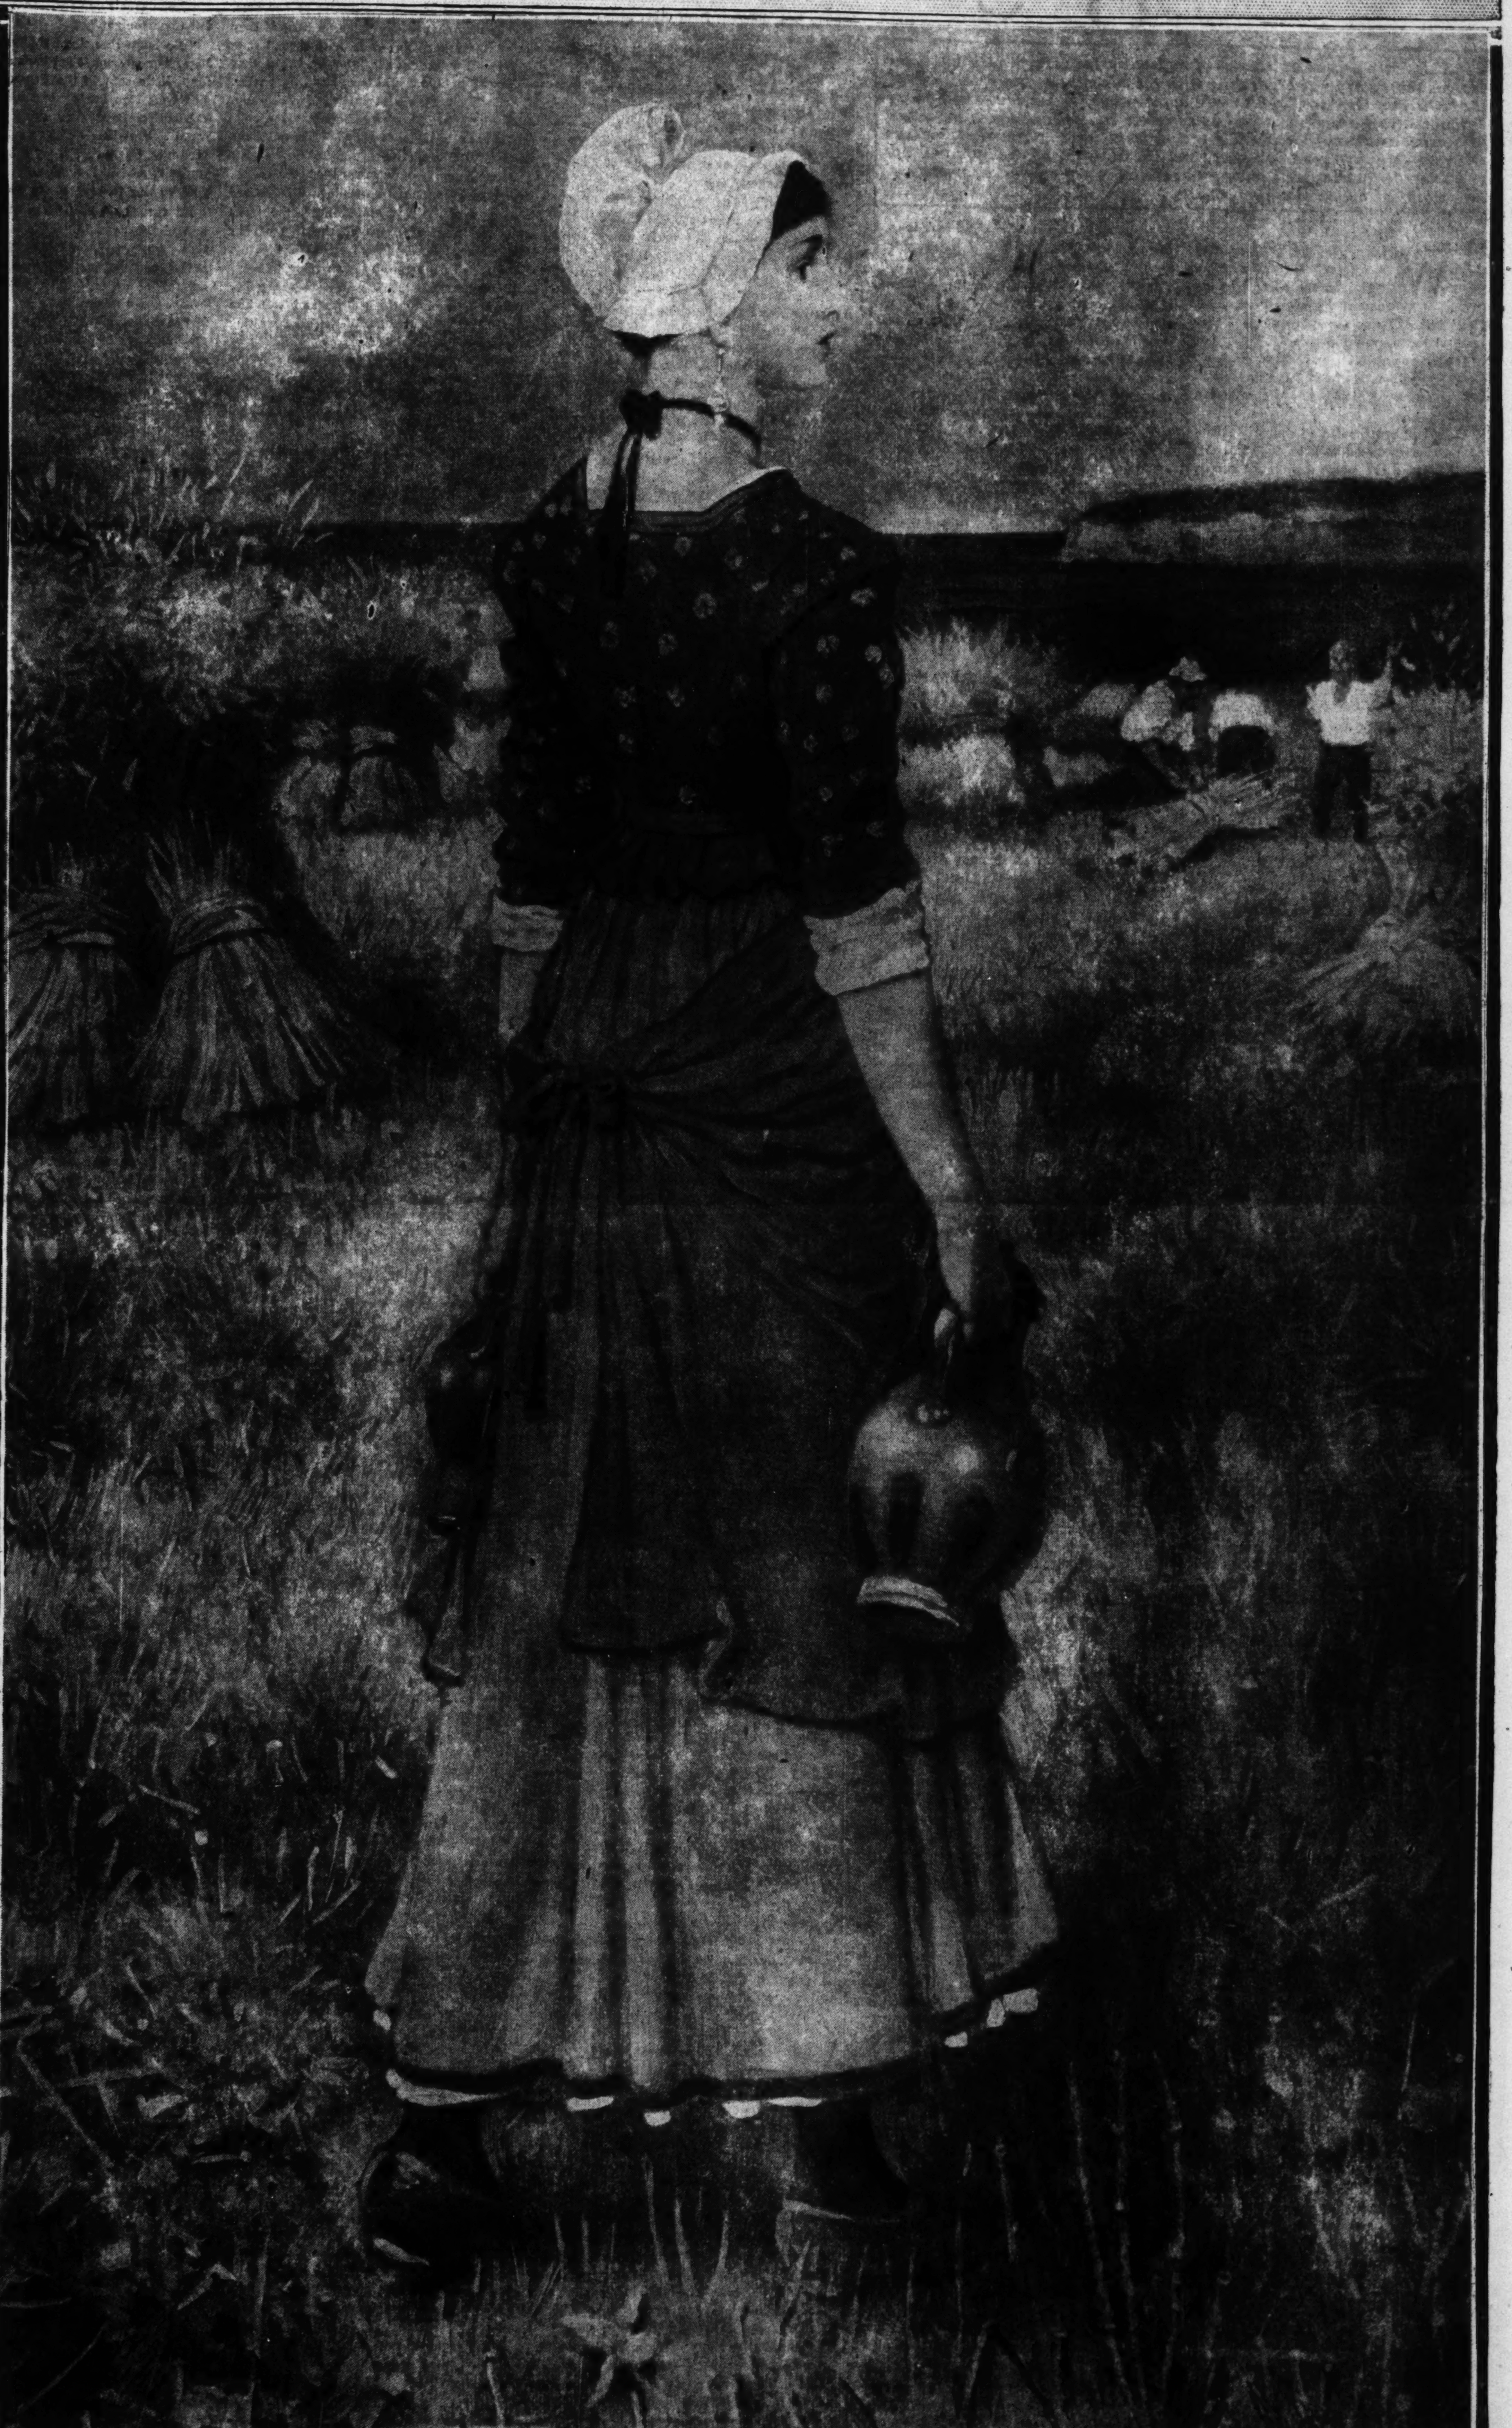
After Evangeline had rallied from the shock of the incredible treachery, so the legend goes, she abandoned herself utterly to the task of searching for her lover Gabriel. She made for him a palladium in her heart and all other interests faded. Alone she set out on her immortal journey, the journey that was destined for fifty years to stretch out enduring, unending. Again in the words of Longfellow:

Thus did the long sad years glide on and in seasons and places
Divers and distant far was seen the wandering maiden—
Now in the tents of grace and of the meek Moravian missions,
Now in the noisy camps and the battlefields of the army,
Now in secluded hamlets, in towns, and in populous cities,
Like a phantom she came and passed away unremembered.
Fair was she and young when in hope began the long journey,
Faded was she and old when in disappointment it ended.
Each succeeding year stole something away from her beauty,
Leaving behind it broader and deeper the gloom and the shadow.
Then there appeared and spread faint streaks of gray o'er her forehead—
Dawn of another life that broke o'er her earthly horizon
As in the eastern sky the first faint streaks of the morning.

It is only after a lifetime of bitterest, fiercest disappointment that she comes, spent and weary, to the side of the dying man. With touching emotion, the fires of her passions not cooled by the ashes of the years, she sees her lover, unconscious, on the verge of death.

Boughton's best work has been done in his subject groups and single figures dealing with life in New England. This present picture was among his earliest paintings of this character. "Rose Standish" and "Priscilla" are similar in character and surroundings, and all of them express through their soft simple harmonies the sincere simplicity of the folk of that time. No complexity of emotion, no grossness of passions, but honest, true loves that are absolute, life lasting.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next week.



The OLLIVANT ORPHANS

Standing By.

By INEZ HAYNES GILLMORE

This is the second of a series of stories by Inez Haynes Gillmore, the famous short story writer, dealing with the adventures, trials, and joys of the "Ollivant Orphans," which will appear every Sunday in The Sunday Tribune. Each installment will be complete in itself, although the series of stories as a whole will make a delightful novel. You will find the Ollivant Orphans good company, and the author's facile style and apt character delineation will make you remember the stories as among the best works of fiction you have read.

CHAPTER II

"WELL, I found it," Mrs Mac Veagh called from upstairs. "I spent the whole morning and the whole afternoon at it, and just as I was about to give up I happened on the peachiest proposition."

"I hope you didn't tire yourself out," Ed Ollivant called back to her. "It's pretty stiff work going about looking at apartments, Rita."

"O, no! I had the car, of course!" Rita had now crossed the hall to the doorway. Standing there, she swept a profound curtsy. "Do I look tired?" she demanded.

Ed Ollivant's eyes lingered for the whole of that moment on the drooping figure of which the slender bust, bare armed, bare necked, bare shouldered, emerged from the center of a petal-like satin skirt, and the oval face, pendent to a mass of bronzed brown hair, almost touched one uplifted satin knee. "No, you don't look tired, Rita," he answered.

"You can't imagine what the places were like that the agent showed me. I never was so discouraged in my life. And then I ran into Myra Crosby and she told me about a place in the—where do you suppose?"

"Give it up," admitted Ed.

"The Channing building," announced Rita triumphantly.

"The Channing building," Ed repeated. He whistled.

"It's not anything like so expensive as you think. Now listen. It's only a part of an apartment, anyway. People by the name of Peyton rented the whole apartment. Then both their children went and got married on them. They had rafts of rooms they did not know what to do with. And you can get the rooms for $35 a month. They particularly wanted to rent it to a man."

Ed whistled again. "Lord, that sounds too good to be true. I'm afraid it'll go before I have a chance to see it."

"I was too foxy for that. I cinched it. They were going to be away today; but I said you'd come over tomorrow night to see it. It's exactly what you want. One big room for a living room, a bedroom, a kitchenette, and a bath. And a lovely view over the Fenway. Wait a moment! I drew a plan of it the moment I got home, so that I could plan where the furniture would go. It's upstairs." Rita flashed out of the room and fluttered brilliantly up the stairs. "If there is anything I love to do it's to plan furnishings and things"—she threw this over the banisters. "I did this house, you know"—she called this from the second floor.

Sitting alone, Ed looked about him as though from a new point of view. The big room—it was all dull grays and Gobelin blues—was more solidly than artistically furnished. The broad seated, cushioned couches, the wide armed, cushioned chairs, the big tables heaped with books and magazines, the small tables that offered smokes and drinks, the low bookcases with their foreign litter, the few distinguished pictures; it not only had the masculine touch—it had all the ease of a man's club. But, in addition, it had its feminine accept.

With a sudden gesture of impatience that seemed to accent a sudden reminiscent scowl on his face, Ed seized a cigaret, lighted it.

Rita dashed into the room, papers and pencil in one hand. Lustrous, apricot colored gown, sparkling slipper tips, slim, gleamy shoulders, delicate odor of violets, she deposited herself beside him on the couch. Her big, white hands—she wore rings of diamonds and emeralds—made a swift, vivid panic among the papers. "There, this is the living room. My idea is awfully simple furnishings, but awfully manny. For the bedroom, double white iron beds in case you want to entertain a guest. In an emergency, you can use the big couch in the living room. Didn't you tell me you had a chiffonier?"

"Yes," answered Ed, "curly maple."

"You'll need a big, wide dresser. Have you anything else of your own? I mean your share of your mother's furniture. Was there, for instance, any nice old mahogany?"

Rita was bending over the paper. Ed was bending over her. He stirred as though uneasily. Before he replied, he blew a volley of smoke rings over his hostess' head. "Well, of course, I suppose there is a share of the household furniture coming to me if I wanted to claim it. But I wouldn't like to take any of it away. It puts it up to the rest of the family to replace it. And at the same time, I'd rather like to have some new, up to date, modern stuff. Lord, you don't know how I long for the conveniences of life."

"O yes, I do. I know exactly how you long for them. I was brought up in a family mausoleum in West Roxbury, furnished in the black walnut and hair cloth period. There wasn't a door in that house smaller than a half acre, or a window lower than Bunker Hill monument, and you could only see the ceilings with the aid of an opera glass. When I married Big Chief and he handed me the largest check I ever saw, and said, 'Go as far as you like, Chicken,' I all but took the first train out to Grand Rapids. Maybe I didn't make a hole in that check. By the way, have you told your sisters that you are going to leave yet?"

Ed stirred again. And again, before he spoke, he sent a volley of smoke rings over his hostess' head. "No, I thought I wouldn't until the thing was settled. You see—"

"Oh, I got this furniture catalogue from Daintry while I was downtown," Rita interrupted. "I thought you could look it over today. Do you suppose they'll feel very bad about it?"

"Well—of course—I suppose they—at least, it would be only natural——" Ed was not stammering. He was only starting up successive squirrel tracks, translating his own ideas to himself. "But it isn't as if it was going to make any difference financially," he went on, beginning again. He was voluble enough now and he was addressing Rita. "I'll send Beckie a check every week. And you see three of them are independent: Beckie and Matt and Lainy."

"Lainey's the teacher, isn't she?" Rita asked. "What's her real name?"

"Elaine. My mother was very romantic. She took it out on every other child. Rebecca, Matthew, and Ann are all family names, but she named Elaine after Tennyson's poems."

"Is she pretty?"

"I don't know. I never thought of it."

"Blonde or brunette?"

"Blonde, I should say," Ed answered after an interval of wrinkled concentration. "Lainey's a strange girl. I don't understand her." Ed's calm broke into an interval of sheer perplexity. "She's quiet and serious—very absent minded—I suppose you'd call her dreamy. She studies all the time—reads Plato and Browning, and high-brow stuff like that. She's the easiest one in the family to manage six days out of the seven—then, suddenly you'll strike an obstinate streak and nothing can move her—I don't understand her."

"The two younger ones are in high school, aren't they?" Rita went on.

"Yes," said Ed.

"Len Lorrimer pointed Ann out to me on the street the other day," said Rita. "She's awfully pretty, isn't she?"

"Yes," Ed admitted reluctantly, "but she's awfully hard to manage. She's one of those girls who want everything they see. She's smart, though—smart as a whip—makes her own clothes, trims her own hats, and mixes the finest salad dressing I ever tasted." Ed conceded these facts with pride.

"I'm glad," Rita said, "that you've noticed how pretty she is, for others will notice it soon enough, let me tell you. Len Lorrimer got it all right. She's pretty enough to eat. What does she do?"

"She's in a dentist's office," Ed answered. "She seems to be secretary—"

"Is she pretty?"

"Not exactly," Ed answered. "But Beckie is very—" He paused and did not finish. A filming stiffness came into his tone, a shadowing hardness into his face. It was as though he began to chafe at these interrogatories.

Mrs. MacVeagh changed the subject immediately. "There this is the kind of desk I want you to get. It's a standard pattern; but it's big and simple and convenient without suggesting a roll top. You can go tomorrow evening to look at the apartment, can't you?"

"Yes."

"And I think you'd better tell your sisters pretty soon now."

"Yes, I will," said Ed.

"Where are you going, Ed?" Beckie asked the next night. Freshly shaven, very elegant in his correct evening clothes, very handsome in his regular blond featuring, Ed had just descended from his eyrie chamber.

"Out," Ed answered briefly.

"There's something I want to talk to you about." Beckie lowered her voice, looked about her. "I don't want anybody to hear us. The boys are upstairs and the girls are doing the dishes. Come into the parlor."

Ed followed Beckie. The big, front room was dusty and neglected looking. There was no fire in the fireplace. The furnace fire had gone out in the afternoon.

Beckie took the couch. "You look stunning, Ed," she said admiringly; "just like a picture in a book." Beckie looked far from "stunning." She was the least attractive of the handsome Ollivant orphans. "It's about Roly," she went on, as her brother frowned her compliment to oblivion. "I think he's playing truant right along."

"What makes you think so?" Ed asked.

"Sh—sh—sh!" exclaimed Beckie. "I don't want the girls to hear."

The folding doors which separated the parlor from the living room were open. Lainey and Ann had come in from the kitchen for the dessert dishes.

"—the dance the Tuesday afternoon girls are giving, and so this morning her aunt went to Boston and got her another dress." This was Ann's round note. "Edwina showed it to me this afternoon. O, Lainey, it's a darling, and so smart. That makes four evening dresses that Edwina Allen has. O, I feel so poverty stricken and so out of it. I'm ashamed to wear that old plaid dress again. Sometimes I think I'd do almost anything for some of the pretty things I've always wanted. I'm sure I'd steal if I could be certain I wouldn't be found out." Ann's discontent rasped in her voice.

"But, Ann," this was Lainey's soft, clear accent, "what do you care when everybody says you're the prettiest girl in Brookline?"

"Well, of course, I'm not pretty," Ann protested. "My mouth is too big, and there's something about the left side of my profile that I positively hate. But supposing I was pretty, then it seems to me I have all the more right to some pretty clothes once in a while."

"You're the prettiest girl I ever saw in my life," said Lainey, her flutelike tones filling to a volume as robust as her conviction. "And no matter how shabby your clothes are, they always look different from other girls'. You know how to wear them."

The kitchen door cut off the tail of this discussion.

Beckie tiptoed to the folding doors and drew them softly together. "Two days ago," she began, turning, "I saw Roly go by on the other side of the street with two boys. That Dink Hardy was one of them. I didn't know who the other one was."

"All right," said Ed, rising with an obvious impatience to get off. "I'll talk to him tomorrow morning. But don't worry about this, Beck. All boys hook jack, you know."

"O, yes," Beckie replied, "I know that. I used to play hookey myself. It doesn't worry me any. Only if he's going to do it right along he might just as well leave school and go to work. It does seem so queer—neither Roly nor Ann take the least interest in their studies. O, I'm so glad you're here to cope with this. I couldn't. Good-night Ed."

"O, this is great, Rita," Ed was saying an hour later. "This big living room gets my game. It's a corker. I can give some pretty classy little parties up here. You've got to chaperon them all, you know, Rita."

"Sure," laughed Rita. "That's my graft. I'm going to run this joint. I've planned a house warming that will be the prettiest party you ever saw. I tell you what. Just as soon as it gets warm enough we can use the roof. Let's give a tango party up there. Want to see it?"

"Crazy to," smiled Ed. He followed her out into the hall and up a narrow stairway. Another moment and they were leaning against the coping, gazing alternately up at the sky and down on the world. Above the stars lay fine and thick, like piles of silver seeds. Below the city lamps grew large and lush, like strange tropical flowers.

"The automobiles look like beetles, don't they?" Rita commented. "See how fast that limousine is going. O, that reminds me. You'd better warn that brother of yours—not the kid—the red headed one—"

"Matt," Ed suggested.

"That's the one—he's awfully good looking, isn't he? What does he do?"

"He's with the Chapman Automobile company, salesman," Ed answered. "What were you going to say about him?"

"That he'll be arrested for speeding if he doesn't look out. We met him last night in Newton—Len Lorrimer and myself. I didn't know him, of course, but Len did. They were going at a great clip. Newton's full of traps, you know."

Ed frowned. "If I've warned him once, I've warned him a dozen times. He runs with a man named Walton who has never yet recognized the existence of the speed laws. He'll lose his license if he isn't careful. I'll talk to Matt tonight."

"How do you like Len Lorrimer?" asked Rita idly. She gave a quick side glance at her companion's face; her glance held a tinge of mischief.

"Not at all," Ed answered briefly.

"Don't you?" Rita flashed a second side glance; this one held a tinge of complacency. "I think he's great fun."

Ed made no comment.

"What kind of a boy is your younger brother?" Rita asked. "Roland?"

"Just kid," Ed answered briefly. "Always wearing my ties and thinking I don't know it."

"Then you're not disappointed in this place?" Rita went on.

"Disappointed!" Ed exclaimed. "I feel as if it were the beginning of something I'd never known before. It's awfully tough on a man to have to live with his family, you know. As long as mother was alive I considered that it was up to me to stay. But of course I've never been able to entertain at all or to do anything I wanted. They wouldn't mix with my friends any more than I'd mix with theirs."

"Oh, don't apologize," Rita said. "I understand perfectly. When I tell you that my mother was president of a woman's club, that one sister was an anti-suffragist and the other an anti-vivisectionist, perhaps you get the dope on my new atmosphere. Big Chief came along and rescued me. Oh, by the way," she turned her face up to his as she pulled the collar of her leopard coat closer about her throat; her shining head—tonight she wore her hair banded close—lifted like a seal's from water, "have you told your sisters yet?"

"Not yet," Ed said. "I forgot it last night."

"I think you'd better tell them," Rita smiled. Her white teeth made a brilliant sally into the shadowed softness of her face. "They may change their plans a little if they know you're not going to be with them."

When Ed let himself into the house that night the light was still burning in the parlor.

"O, Ed!" Beckie exclaimed, starting up. "Thank heavens, you've come!"

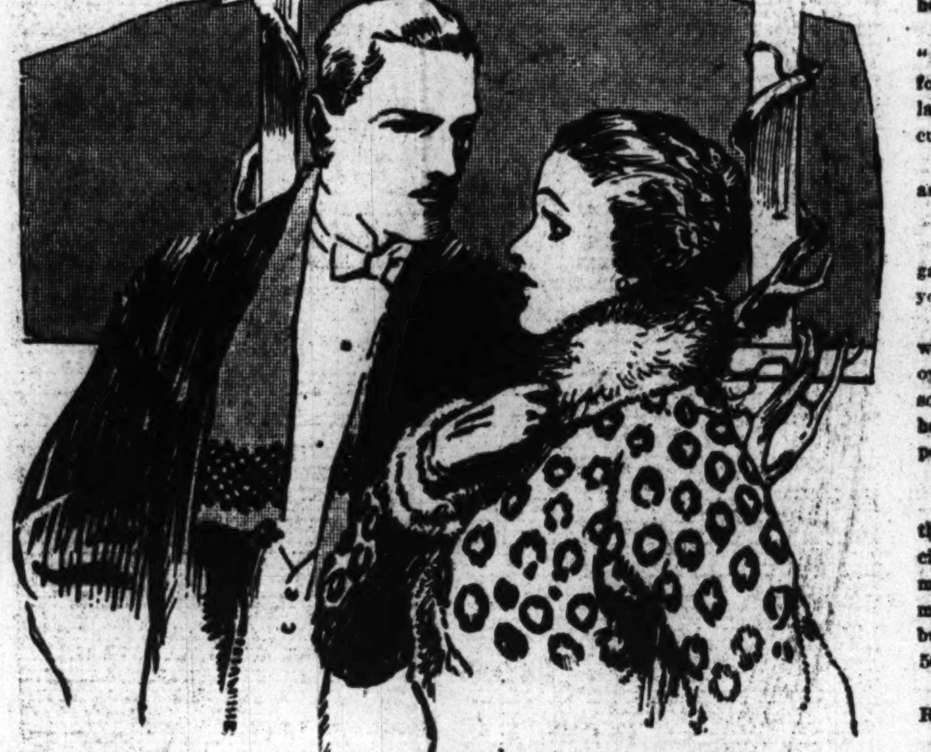
"What's up?" Ed asked. "What's the matter with you, Ann?"

Ann, lying face downward on the couch, was torn by spasms of weeping. She sobbed aloud. And Lainey, seated near, the tears standing in great drops at the tips of her long lashes, panted and quivered in sympathy.

"Matt's been arrested for speeding," Beckie explained. "He telephoned from the police station for you to come down and bail him out. That was at 10. We've been waiting here for you ever since."

"The damn fool!" said Ed. "The damn——" And suddenly Ed's smooth brow corrugated with fury. "Everybody has told him that he'd get pinched. I've warned him a dozen times myself. Where's Walton?"

"Out of town—Matt didn't know where.



"Oh, by the way, have you told your sisters yet?"

He was afraid to call up the Walton house because Dave had lent him his car without telling his folks. Do hurry down there, Ed. He didn't happen to have any money with him. He hasn't had any dinner yet."

"And he won't get any breakfast either," said Ed. "At least not until late tomorrow morning. I'm not going to bail him out tonight. Why, he told me only last week that that park policeman—the fat, good natured one—had stopped him twice and told him he'd pinch him unless he cut it out. I'm glad they jugged him. It will be a good lesson to him. One night in a cell with a fine of $10 in the morning will take the speed out of him quicker than anything I know."

"Ed, I think you're just too mean for words," Lainey said, the flash in her eyes dissipating the dew on their lashes. "If I only knew anybody who would bail him out, I'd appeal to him even at this hour."

"I'm very glad you don't, Lainey," Ed said grimly, "because I'm determined to give the sport of the family the lesson of his young life."

"Come to bed, girls," Beckie said. "It's no use trying to argue with Ed when he looks like that. Besides, I must be up by 6 to get breakfast. I'm tired as a dog."

The three girls followed their brother upstairs. "I shan't close my eyes tonight," whimpered Ann. "I shall keep seeing poor Matt in prison stripes with his face pressed against the bars of his cell."

"Well, I shan't sleep either, but it's because I'm so mad," sputtered Lainey.

"I don't know but what you're right, Ed," Beckie said after the girls' door had slammed shut. "It will be a lesson to him. I'm so glad you came home tonight. I was so worried—I don't know what I would have done without you. I do hope the girls get some sleep, but I'm afraid they won't. I'm so tired—I could sleep standing up."

But, in point of fact, Ann fell immediately into the soft thick kittenlike slumber which she could command at any time. Lainey followed her, almost as quickly, into a dreamland as light and clear and gay as the fairy country of her childhood. Ed tossed and turned for a protracted fifteen minutes and then, after a muttered curse or two, dropped into that well of oblivion to which ordinarily his closed eyes immediately admitted him. But Beckie, after lying silent and moveless for three or four hours, arose. Seating herself at the window, she watched until the sunrise began to gild the little place with scanty winter gold.

"I'm glad you decided the way you did," Rita said, three or four days later as they sped in her limousine up Boylston street. "Of course, the other desk would have done. At the same time, I don't think you ever would have been satisfied with it after seeing the more expensive one. There's no economy in buying a thing you don't want."

"O yes, there was nothing to it," agreed Ed. "After I saw that mahogany one, it was all off with the oak."

Have you told your sisters yet?" Rita continued after a pause.

"No, I haven't," admitted Ed.

"I really think you ought to tell them."

"I suppose I should have," said Ed slowly, "but I don't want to take any definite step until everything is fixed up. For if there was any hitch, it would be just as well—"

"But what hitch could there be—" A rising note of alarm reached a crescendo on Rita's last word. "You're going to sign the lease for the apartment tomorrow noon."

"None that I can see," answered Ed. "I'll tell them tonight."

"No more shopping this noon," decided Rita, "or you won't get back at 2. Just time for a little spin in the Fenway." She snuggled back into her opulent sables. "Isn't it a beautiful day? And isn't it great to be young? Somehow I feel so gay." She turned her eyes up to Ed's. "Ed, do you know you're a good looking thing? And just think, you're going to have rooms of your own."

Ed turned, gazed at his companion. Rita was physically brilliant, but she was a cold type. She was like a light which gives illumination without heat. Now an extraordinary animation—an animation pointed by triumph—gave her a misleading effect of warmth. Her ivory cheeks glowed, her hazel yellow eyes glistened, her bronze brown hair glittered; it seemed almost to crackle. The wind whipped her lips to a brilliant crimson. "You're something of a looker yourself, Rita," Ed said. "I can gaze at you without straining my eye muscles any. Yes," he added, as though her look held some voiceless question, "I'll tell them at dinner."

"Where's Ann?" Ed asked that night when he seated himself at the table.

"Why, I don't know," Beckie answered. "She went into Boston to do some errands for me. I can't guess what could keep her as late as this." Beckie articulated with difficulty; she was hoarse.

"Where'd you get that cold, Beckie?" Ed asked.

"O, the other night," Beckie said evasively.

"Well, now that we're all together," Ed began in an awkward voice, "I want to tell you that today I—"

"Oh!" Lainey exclaimed, as though Ed's words had hit an unexpected mark in her own thoughts, "that reminds me I bought something today." Lainey was obviously happy over her purchase. "What do you suppose it was?"

"What was it?" Beckie asked.

"A man came round to all the teachers in the school," Lainey began in her preoccupied, circumlocutionary way, "selling the most remarkable bargains in books on the installment plan. They're beautifully illustrated; but as they're in paper covers, they only cost 50 cents apiece."

"How many volumes are there?" asked Roland.

"Forty-five!" Lainey answered, with the triumph of those who bargain well.

"Forty-five!" exclaimed Matt. It was the first sign of real vivacity from the chastened Matt who had emerged from a prison cell.

"Forty-five!" croaked Beckie. "Why, it will take fifteen months to pay for them."

"Whose works are they?" Ed asked.

"Longfellow's," answered Lainey triumphantly.

"Longfellow in forty-five volumes!" exclaimed Ed. "O, my God!"

"Lainey," he said, "you've gone against a game that you'll be up against for the rest of your life. Business men are visited every hour of the day by agents who want to sell them anything from a corkscrew to an aeroplane. Onece you begin to listen——"

This, at 6:45, was the beginning of a long harangue of advice. It was interrupted by the entrance of Ann at 7.

"What makes you so late, Ann?" Beckie demanded in a peremptory accent. Perhaps Beckie wanted to draw attention from Lainey's crushed condition.

"I've had the loveliest time." Ann was excited. She was all light and warmth. Her great eyes were blazing golden moons. Her round cheeks were burning rose velvet. Everything else about her shone or shimmered. Her very teeth, between the full scarlet of her lips, made a soft flash like silver. "No, don't help me to any stew, Ed. I couldn't eat a thing. What do you think—I've been out to tea. At the Plaza. O, wasn't it pretty. Such smart clothes. And such pippins of girls! Lainey, there was a girl there who wore a green broadcloth, trimmed with moleskin, that was the loveliest thing I ever—And a lot of Harvard men at a table in the corner. Wasn't it a shame that I didn't have on my other hat? But I went into the ladies' room and fixed up my hair. O, such a lovely place—they had all kinds of cosmetics there. One girl made her face up right before my eyes, and another was smoking a cigaret—I saw it hidden behind her hand."

"But who took you?" asked Beckie.

"Len Lorrimer," said Ann, "and, oh, he was just perfectly lovely to——"

"Len Lorrimer!" Ed exclaimed electrically. "What do you mean, Ann?"

"Why!" Ann exclaimed. "Why—why—what do I mean? I don't know what you mean. I met Mr. Lorrimer on Bolyston street, and he asked me to go to tea, and I went."

"You went to tea with Len Lorrimer?" Ed arraigned her sternly. "Don't you know he's a married man?"

"Why, yes," said Ann. "Of course, I do. Everybody knows it. But he's separated from his wife, and everybody knows that, too."

"But he's not divorced from her," said Ed, "and he never will be. He can't get a divorce. He knows, as everybody knows—Don't let me ever hear of your going anywhere with him again."

Ann tossed her head. "I don't see why I shouldn't," she said rebelliously. "He's been separated from her so long nobody looks upon him as married."

"Nevertheless," Ed ordered crisply, "he is married. Don't let me hear of you going anywhere with him again."

The gayety melted out of Ann's face, taking the light with it. It hardened as it darkened. "He invited me to go to the matinee with him next week. Now, why shouldn't I go? I want to."

"Simply because," Ed said in a tone iron with command, "unmarried people can't go about with married people without making talk."

"Well, then," Ann flashed triumphantly, "how about you and Mrs. MacVeagh? I saw you coming out of the Touraine with her once during the tea hour. And I don't know how many times Lainey and I have seen you riding alone with her in her automobile. If it's all right for you to go places alone with Mrs. MacVeagh, why isn't it all right for me to go alone with Mr. Lorrimer?"

A brickish red flush rose slowly over Ed's smooth face; it flowed turgidly under his golden hair. But he held Ann with the steady gaze of his frigid blue eyes. "That's quite a different matter, Ann," he said. "In the first place, I am quite as much Mr. MacVeagh's as Mrs. MacVeagh's, friend. It would be impossible for me to compromise Mrs. MacVeagh; it would be presumption for me to think so. Her social position is absolutely established; her character above reproach. I am only one of half a dozen men to whom she is equally hospitable. She has absolutely nothing to lose by accepting my escort when her husband is away; and I have a great deal to gain. Lorrimer, on the other hand, is the kind of man I don't want my sister to be seen with. He will lose nothing, of course, by taking you about; but it will hurt you with everybody who knows him."

"Still," Lainey broke in stormily, "after all, the principle is the same. And you wouldn't let Ann go about with Len Lorrimer, even if his wife liked it. I cannot see that it is any more right for you than for her."

Of all the Ollivants, Lainey seemed superficially the most silent, colorless, and uncharacterized. But she had the knack of asking perturbing questions. Ed, for instance, was often nonplused by her queries. Now a look—obviously it was bafflement—came into his face. "It all depends on circumstances, Lainey," he said. "And these two cases could never be parallel."

But Ed did not bring up the matter of leaving the family roof during dinner. Perhaps he did not wish to introduce the name of MacVeagh into the conversation again. Ed wandered from the living room to the dining room, from the dining room to the kitchen, from the kitchen to the living room again, his head bent, his brow moody with wrinkles.

Once, "O, Ed," Beckie croaked, "what would I have done about Ann if you hadn't been here? She's so headstrong, I can't make her toe the mark. And I hate that Len Lorrimer; he's a snake in the grass."

A deep silence followed. Ed resumed his lonely pacing.

Suddenly he dashed out of the house. At a run he made for the drug store on the corner, panted into the telephone box: "Give me Back Bay 8786," he said: and at the end of an interval in which he stared frigidly into space, "Is this you, Rita? Say, Rita, I've called you up to tell you it's all off about the apartment—Yes, I know, but it can't be helped—Yes, I understand, but it's impossible—Yes, you're perfectly right, but it's out of the question—Yes, that's true, but it can't be done—Yes, I get all that, but I can dispose of it in some way—All right, I'll explain when I see you."

Ed sauntered leisurely back to the house, let himself leisurely in. Beckie's darning still absorbed her. After an interval, she turned to her basket, fumbled a moment among its mending miscellanies. A letter eddied up from among the spools and darning cotton, came to the surface of the stockings.

"Why!" Ed exclaimed, "that's Aunt Margaret's handwriting, isn't it?"

"Yes," said Beckie. She dropped her eyes and, as though involuntarily, pushed the letter under the stockings.

"Well—can I read it?" Ed's tone was a little nonplused.

"O, there's nothing in it, I—I—" Beckie was stammering—quick, curt, decisive Beckie. "It wouldn't interest you."

"Beckie, what's the answer to all this?" Ed demanded. "Don't you want me to see that letter?"

For answer, Beckie held it out to him. He pulled a closely written sheet out of the envelope:

My Dear Niece: Your dear mother has been dead for three months now, and I think the family must be in good running order by this time. Perhaps what I am going to say in this letter may sound premature; but as I must say it sooner or later, I might just as well say it now. You know that you were named after my mother; and you also know, for I have told you often enough, that you are my favorite niece. Of course, we have all known for several years that your mother's days were numbered. I made up my mind some years ago that when the time came, I would ask you to come and live with me. I am often very lonely, and I should like your companionship very much. In that case, I should discharge Matty, but although you and I would do the housework together, I should insist upon paying you what I pay her—$8 a week. I am sure that is more than your present salary—minus your contribution to the household expenses—amounts to. And, of course, when I die my little house and what I have in the bank will go to you. If, however, you cannot see your way clear to accept this offer, I shall make no changes in my present will, which divides my money equally among my living relatives. Please let me know as soon as possible what your decision is.

Your affectionate aunt,
MARGARET FOSTER.

"Good Lord, Beckie!" exclaimed Ed, "when did you get this? Nov. 18. Last Monday. You must say yes to that, Beckie. It's a great opportunity. When are you going to answer it?"

"I have answered it," said Beckie. "I refused." She resumed her tranquil darning.

"Beckie," Ed broke the silence after a long while, "what made you refuse?"

"Because I wouldn't leave you alone with all this responsibility, Ed," said Beckie.

Ed mused an instant, his frigid gaze on the distance. "Well, Beckie," he said at last, "you can be sure of one thing: I'll never leave you."

Right off the Reel by Mae Tinee

How It Feels to Be a Child of Billie Burke.

"MISS CHERRY have been here—I think she take Ziegy out. You plees will wait in Miss Burke's room an' I am sure she will soon be here—yes?"

"Yes—please," and I followed Miss Burke's trim French maid into the dainty suite set apart for her use at the Kleine studio in New York while she is taking the pictures of "Gloria's Romance," there to wait until Miss Burke's ward, Miss Cheridal Watson, and "Ziegy," whoever "Ziegy" was, should appear. My motive I might as well state here and now was to ask that young lady leading questions regarding just how it felt to be the child of one so famous and beautiful as our little blonde heroine.

"Cherry"

I didn't have long to wait—though the waiting was pleasant, for the cheerful room was flower and sunshine filled—when I heard voices outside the door. One I recognized as that of the maid. The other was strange to me, but it was a low voice with an echo of wistfulness that was most appealing. Both voices were appealing to some one or something which answered not.

"O, do be good!"

"Plees to come—now, now, plees!"

"Ziegy, dear, what shall I do?"

The door having by this time been opened I discovered a charming girl in a simple outing suit and golden furs and the maid making frantic overtures to a plethoric and obstinate little white dog that evaded all their efforts to capture him, retreating slowly but with firm resolve toward the stairs which should lead him to the out of doors from which he had just come.

Miss Watson meeting my eyes called a pleasant greeting: "You will excuse me just a moment, won't you?" she begged. "I dare not leave Ziegy alone."

"Surely," I said, then, after the manner of maiden aunts who have never had children to raise and who know, therefore, just how to raise 'em, I exclaimed: "Why don't you grab him and simply make him mind?"

"Grab Ziegy!" It was a horrified duet. The maid said, "O, zat would hurt hees feelings." Said Miss Watson, "O, I shouldn't like to do that. Billie is so fond of him—he's named after her husband, you know. Come, Ziegy—please, dear, come!"

At that moment Ziegy spied me and his curiosity overcame his obstinacy. He waddled into the room. The door was shut—and peace prevailed.

Miss Watson, or "Cherry," as Miss Burke fondly calls her, came over and sat down by me. She was shyly cordial and I thought I would never tire of watching her face with its great gray eyes, sensitive mouth, and clear, pale skin. The whole, topped by a riot of golden brown hair, sounds delectable, you must admit.

We exchanged the customary commonplaces involving weather, the fashions, "Gloria's Romance," which, by the way, is no commonplace at all, and then I came to my subject. Cherry smiled.

"I should say" she told me, "that being a child of Billie Burke was quite one of the nicest things in the world. She has certainly been wonderful to me—Fate was kind when she gave me my foster mother." She went on then to tell me just how it all came about.

"You see, my mother and Mrs. Burke were great friends. They used to visit back and forth and mother would make little dresses for Billie—she's only nine years older than me, you know—and all that. The families were exceedingly intimate and when Mrs. Burke and Billie sailed for Europe in 1909 mother and I went down to the wharf to see them off.

"I shall never forget that day—it was raining, a cold, drizzling rain. Mother shivered all the time and after we got back to the house—it was the Burke house, for we were to live there until the Burkes returned—she became ill with a cold that developed into pneumonia and mother died.

"When Billie landed on the other side a cablegram awaited her: 'Mrs. Watson died your home today. Await orders.'

"Waiting for nothing, Billie cabled back for my mother to be buried at her expense and for me to be sent over to her immediately. I went and she simply devoted herself to making me forget my sorrow. She took me on a tour of France, Italy, and Switzerland, only returning to America when it was time for her to begin her tour. Fearing to leave me, she still kept me with her. Later, when I had recovered my health and looked on life with more composed eyes, she had me live for a time with cousins of hers until she came off the road. She sent me to school and had me taught French, dancing, and O, everything she thought might help me. She adopted me, but I was no adopted daughter. I was a real, honest to goodness child. She has always made me feel that I was a real—a vital part of her life—not a charge."

"It must be interesting—living in the same house with Miss Burke," I ventured. Billie Burke's "baby" laughed.

"It is," she said. "You'd think so if you could see her with her animals—we always have a dozen dogs—her flowers, etc. Then, when she's studying a new part she's especially interesting. Every person and thing becomes an audience—nothing more—nothing less. All over the place you find her exhorting, dying, eloping—whatever she has to do in the play. Then—about two days before the opening night we obliterate ourselves as far as possible—fade into thin air—for Billie does not wish to be spoken to. She stays all by herself and we have orders not to annoy her on any pretext whatever. The opening night she's so nervous she hardly knows what to do. After that she's her dear self again. Yes, it's an interesting Billie!"

"They say," saith I, "that you, like your foster mother, mean to become a stage favorite."

The face of the "child" was wistful. "Well—" she hesitated, "I do want to do something for myself and I love to act. I have the part of the maid in 'Gloria's Romance,' you know, and I've done several other little things. O, I'd love to be just like Billie—only, I'm afraid it can't be done."

Just then "Billie" in widow's garb fluttered in accompanied by her mother and the conversation became general. When I left I felt that indeed I had accomplished something in life—I had met the entire Burke family, including Ziegy. What? O, I'd forgotten. Well, you know Ziegy hubby is not a Burke.

May Allison

MAY ALLISON, that blonde and gifted little screen star so long affiliated with the American company, and who has now gone to the Metro, was born on a big plantation in north Georgia in the year of 1895. She was educated in a private school in Cleveland, Tenn., and afterward attended a finishing school in Philadelphia. From a child "up" she had nursed the ambition to become an actress—"One of those actresses that sing," she told her mother—and her wish came true. Her beauty and ability won her positions in various light opera companies, as the ingenue lead with De Wolf Hopper, and was an alternate for Ina Claire in "The Quaker Girl," and in various other productions of note. Ingenue leads are her specialty. She has been in pictures not more than two years, having started with Famous Players. Since then she has been with Lasky, the American, and is now being featured in Metro productions, where she probably will play opposite Harold Lockwood. Miss Allison has golden hair and violet blue eyes, weighs 124 pounds, and is five feet five inches tall. She is an outdoor girl and delights in tennis, swimming, horseback riding, automobiling, and long hikes. She also dances. The young lady is not married, but believes in marriage. She says that she is too old fashioned to believe in suffrage. Bless her heart, her fans do love her.

Told by the Stars on the Stars

DOROTHY DAVENPORT.

March 13 and Dorothy Davenport arrived at the same time under the guidance of Mr. Pisces. The young lady thus ushered into the world naturally would be:

Exceedingly perservering.

Kind hearted.

SESSUE HAYAKAWA.

And now we learn of Mr. Sessue Hayakawa that, having been born on June 10, he comes under the sign of Gemini. It is, therefore, ordained that he be—

OH WELL! SUCH IS LIFE!
BANG!

CAN ADAPT HIMSELF TO CONDITIONS

Restless and changeable.

Vivacious, nervous, and anxious.

Far sighted when it comes to judgment.

A fluent talker—his conversation marred, however, by a too frequent use of the pronoun "I."

Exceedingly energetic.

Ambitious.

Almost abnormally careful about health, as the dread of illness is always present.

Able to adapt himself to any conditions.

Destined to fill important positions.

A faddist.

Always busy mentally whether occupied physically or not.

ABNORMALLY CAREFUL OF HEALTH

A wearer of the agate, his birthstone.

MAE TINEE'S ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS

"ASK ME! ASK ME!"

W. O.: Do I get you correctly? "Who was the young man that drew the lot and whose father took his place in the play by the name of the man that went out?" I ask you to "ask me," as this is beyond me. If anybody knows who the young man was that drew the lot and whose father took his place in the play by the name of the man that went out, I wish they would please communicate with me at their earliest convenience. Perhaps you are trying out a puzzle on me, W. O.

BABETTE: Yes, I please would answer the following questions. It pleases me vurr much to do it. Theda Bara weighs 129 pounds and is 5 feet 6 inches tall. Leah Baird is married to a man whose name she does not divulge. At the present time Edwin August is not married.

FAITH: In "Carmen" Wallace Reid played opposite Geraldine Farrar.

"LITTLE MARY'S" IDOL: I try to be a true friend, Idol, and I sure am glad you love me. I am afraid you will have to send me the picture you clipped from the magazine if you wish me to tell you whom it represents. I have not a copy of the periodical. I don't know the exact number of years that Mr. Bushman has been married. He has five children. Mary Pickford's eyes are blue. Yes, she's a darling, and, better than that, she's a capable little person. Seventeen years old and do not care in the least to be a movie actress! No! It can't be true. I shall rank you hereafter in my thoughts as among the world's greatest wonders and in the same breath, here's to you, Idol!

DYNAMITE: You sound dangerous, but I guess I'll answer your questions just the same. I don't know how old the gentleman is. Sidney Dean played opposite Marguerite Clarke in "The Goose Girl." In "Nearly a Lady," a Bosworth production, Frank Elliott took the part of the Englishman. Following is the cast of "Little Pal": Little Pal was Mary Pickford, Sid Gerue, her father, was Russell Bassett; George Anderson took the part of John Grandon, William Lloyd was Pill Box Andy, Constance Johnson took the part of Frances Grandon, Joseph Manning played the part of Black Brand, and Bert Hadley was Little Pal's servant. Stewart Baird was the superintendent in "The Incorrigible Dukane." John Barrymore is in his 30's. For the other casts you wish you will have to send a stamped and self addressed envelope. I haven't room here to print all of them.

JUNE: So Daddy calls you his little Juno Rose, does he? I think that is mighty sweet, and I reckon he wouldn't trade you for all the roses that have bloomed in all the Junes in all the world. I am quite sure a letter addressed to Marguerite Snow in care of the Metro company, 1465 Broadway, New York, will reach her. She is usually very nice about answering letters. Better inclose a stamped and self-addressed envelop for reply. She and Mr. Cruze have not as yet started a company of their own. She is to be seen in pictures right along. I think Mr. Cruze has not been working for some time. He has been on an automobile tour, you know. Didn't I answer your questions when you wrote before? I am vurr sorry, but don't see how such an omission could have occurred. Yes, if you will send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope I will write you a personal letter telling you all I can about the people in whom you are so interested. Thank you for thinking me wonderful and I hope you will never be compelled to do without the Right Off the Reel page, since you say you could not live without it.

PICKFORD FAN: If you'd spend the time you say you spend worshiping Mary Pickord's picture in doing something a little helpful for yourself there would be much more chance of you in time becoming a second Mary Pickford. If we all of us stood around wishing we were somebody else, I reckon there would none of us be anybody. Think it over, Pickford Fan. Am I right?

LITTLE ME: My dear Little Me, I wish I had the time to personally acknowledge the receipt of every note, but I just simply haven't. Every week the votes are counted and thrown away. Cheer up, sometime you might send in enough to get your favorite in the Frame. Why don't you ask a lot of people to help you? I don't wonder you think Cleo Madison is attractive. She is.

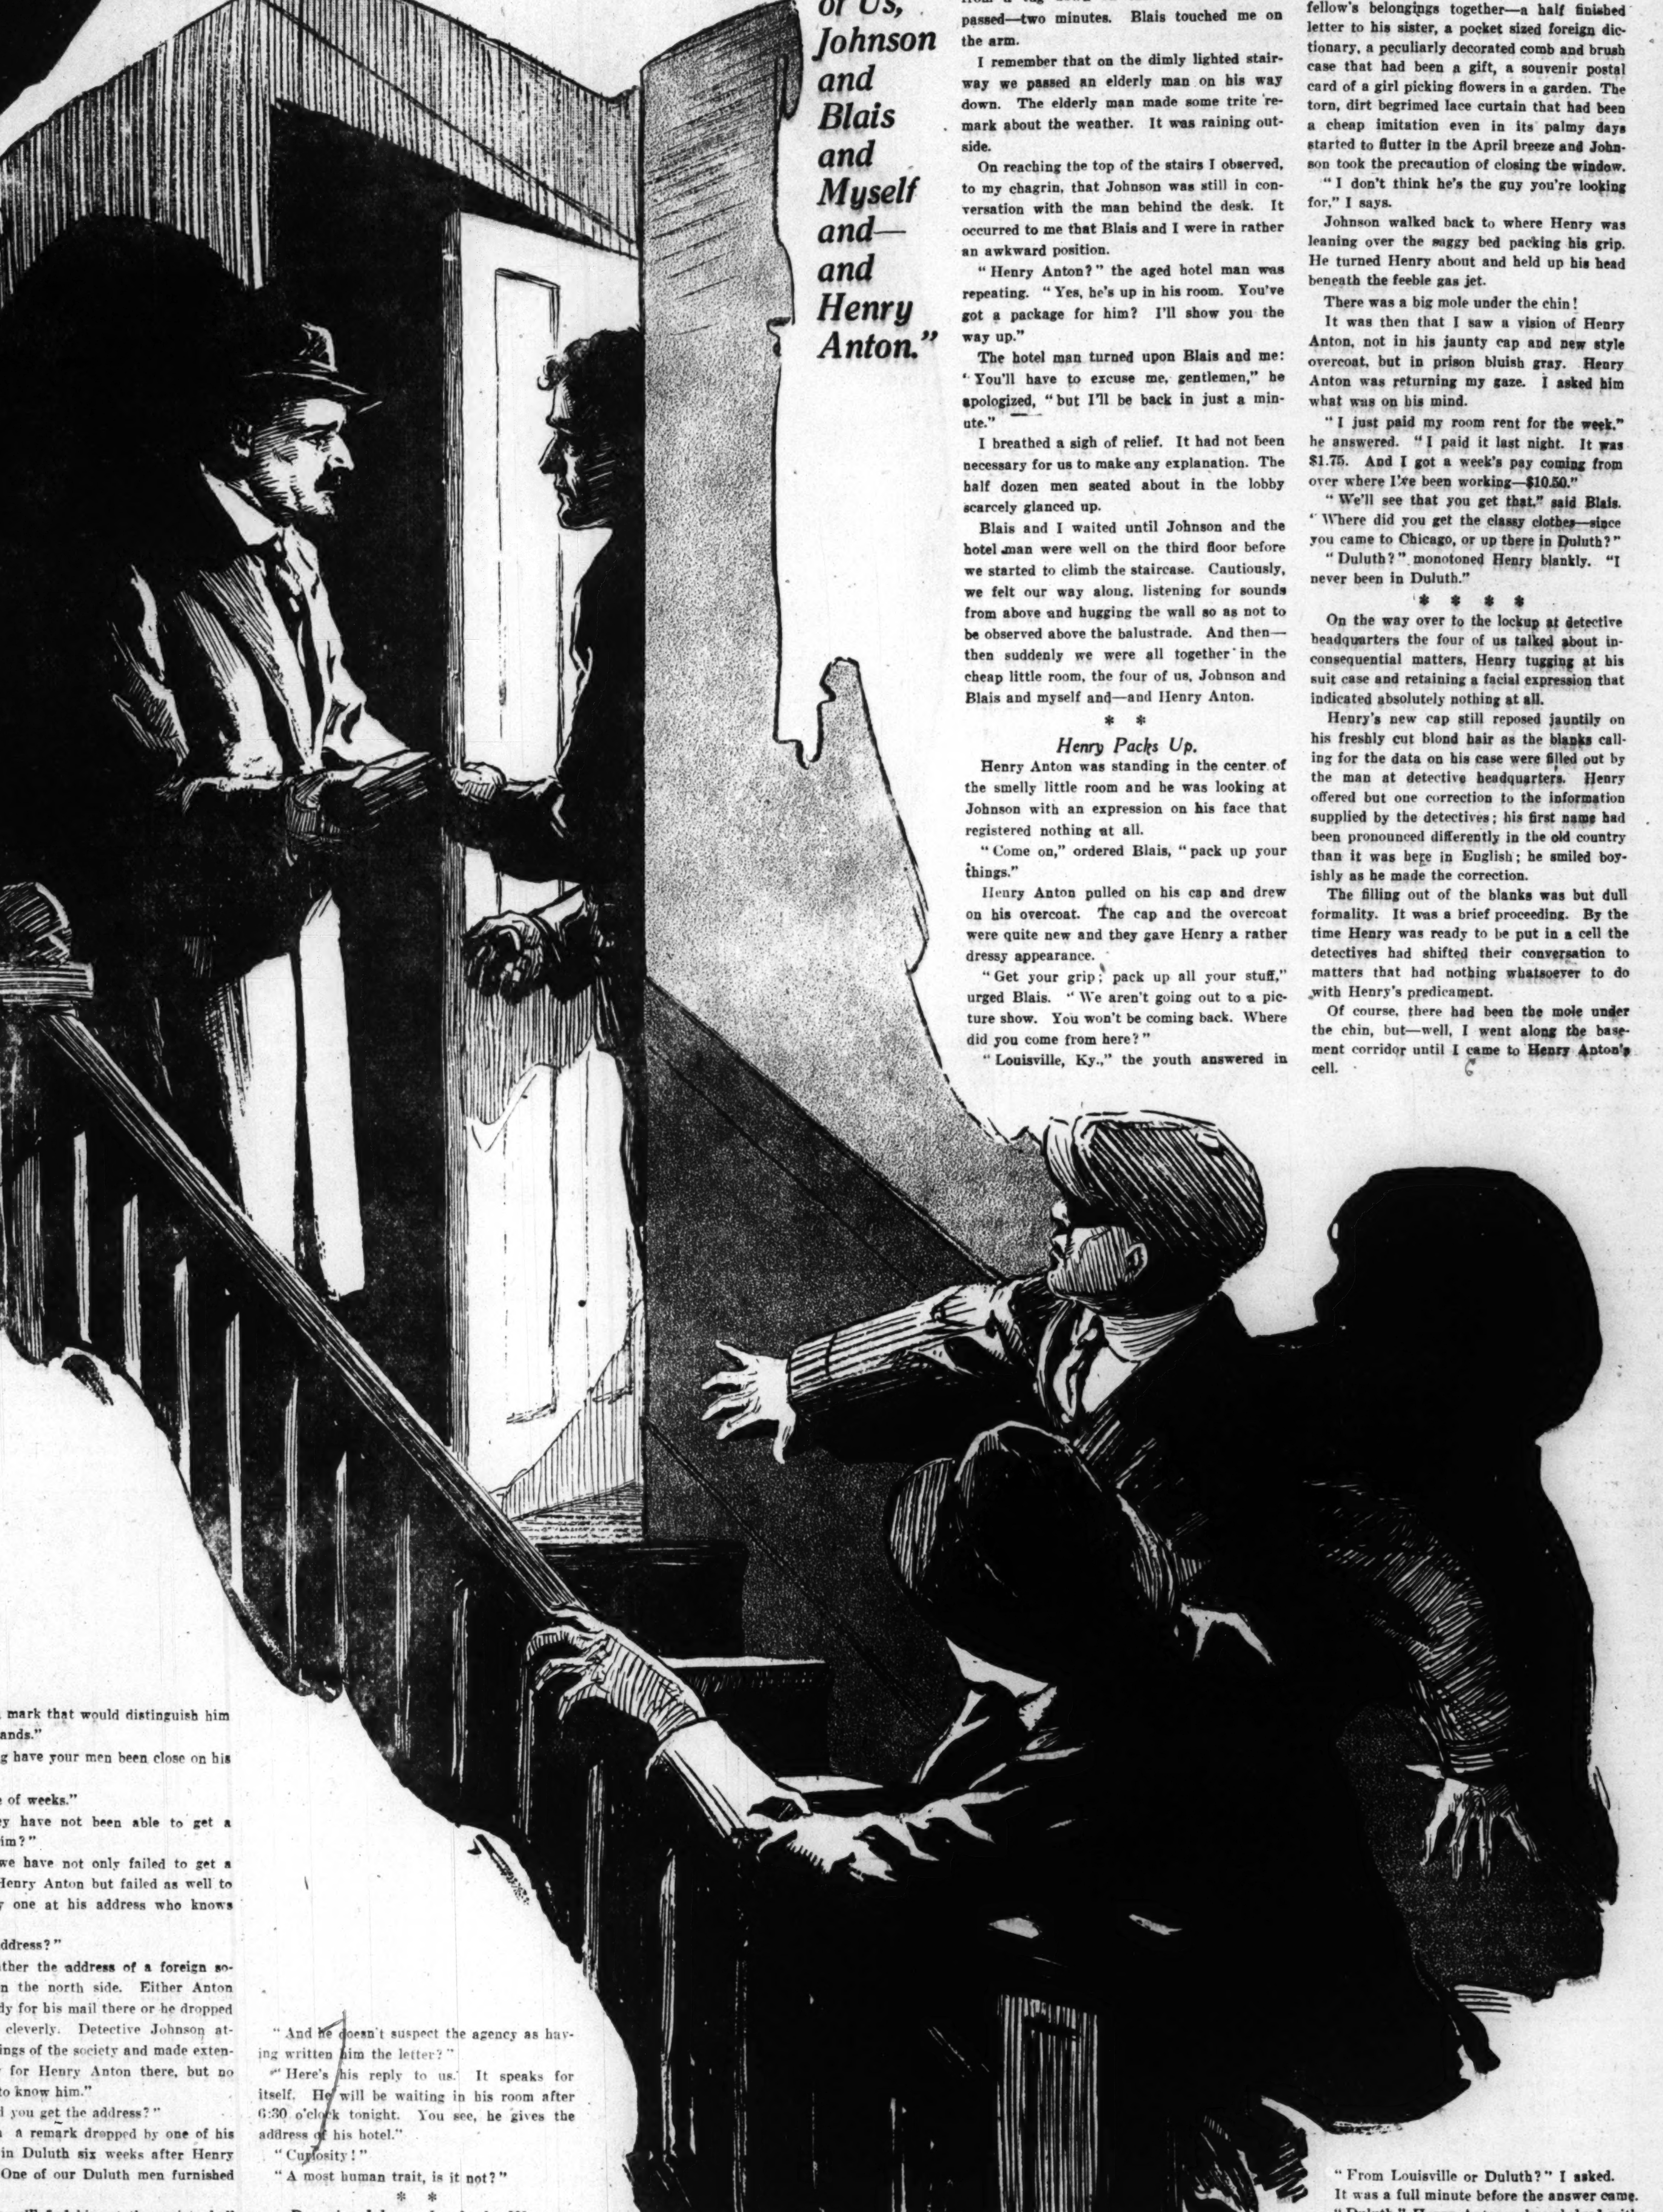
"FOR ONE NIGHT I WAS A DETECTIVE"

Recalls
ONEY FRED SWEET

"Cautiously, We Felt Our Way Along, Listening for Sounds from Above and Hugging the Wall So as Not to Be Observed Above the Balustrade. And Then—Then Suddenly We Were All Together in the Cheap Little Room, the Four of Us, Johnson and Blais and Myself and—and Henry Anton."



Up in the Chicago headquarters of the Burns Detective agency I saw a closet full of photographs, mounted and arranged in racks. They were portraits. There was not a smiling face in the bunch. The subjects appeared as if they had been obliged to sit for the camera hurriedly, without an opportunity to comb their hair or adjust their collars.

All of them had been convicted of forgery. They were all alike in the respect that they had conceived the idea that scratching another man's name to a scrap of paper was a mighty soft way of getting hold of a piece of money. I suppose Henry Anton's photograph is in that closet now. Of the hundreds of others whose pictures appeared in that closet I know but little. Of Henry Anton—well, I saw the net close in about him.

I remember that when I shut the door of the closetful of forgers' faces I turned to Mr. Tobie, who was going over a card index system at his roll top desk. Mr. Tobie not only has the forgery fraternity card indexed on his desk; he has them indexed in his brain.

"Look at these checks," he remarked, "signed by half a dozen different aliases, but the same handwriting kinks through all of them. Clever in a way—this bird was—had a trick of stepping into a bank in a strange town and greeting the cashier and president by first names and incidentally referring to some current local event. Landed him over in Dubuque yesterday. Practically broke when we got him; they're always that way. The money never does them any good, and after the first fool stunt a fellow puts over his mind is always uneasy."

"How do they happen to put over the first one?"

"Fellows in clerical positions most of them. Live beyond their means. Extravagant wife, more often an affinity. Fast associates. Get to practicing at duplicating a signature. Put the first one over and then a repetition of the thing until they get behind the bars. I was just looking into this case of Henry Anton—the fellow we're going to nab at 6:45 o'clock tonight."

Sure of His Man.

"A fellow you're going to nab tonight?" I echoed. "How do you know? How can you be so sure you're going to get him? Where is he?"

"I see," smiled Mr. Tobie, "you're going to work with us on the case, eh?"

I fidgeted in my chair by Mr. Tobie's desk.

"Well," answered the detective, "Henry Anton is over in a certain North Clark street hotel."

"And the forgery?" I encouraged.

"Was committed last February up in Duluth. There were two checks—one that he raised from $9.20 to $59.20 and another for $126 to which he forged his employer's name."

"Does Henry have any inkling you're going to nab him tonight?"

"None whatever."

"Maybe he won't be home."

"He'll be waiting for us."

"Some of your men have seen him since he left Duluth three months ago?"

"No."

"How will they know the man is the one wanted?"

"He has a mole under his chin—quite a large mole, a mark that would distinguish him among thousands."

"How long have your men been close on his trail?"

"A couple of weeks."

"And they have not been able to get a glimpse of him?"

"So far we have not only failed to get a glimpse of Henry Anton but failed as well to discover any one at his address who knows him."

"At his address?"

"Well, rather the address of a foreign society hall on the north side. Either Anton sent somebody for his mail there or he dropped in and out cleverly. Detective Johnson attended meetings of the society and made extensive inquiry for Henry Anton there, but no one seemed to know him."

"How did you get the address?"

"Through a remark dropped by one of his old friends in Duluth six weeks after Henry left there. One of our Duluth men furnished us that."

"And you will find him at the society hall tonight?"

"No. He will be waiting for us at his hotel."

"For detectives to come and get him?"

"Indeed not! He will be waiting to receive a package that we wrote him he would have to receive in person."

"And he doesn't suspect the agency as having written him the letter?"

"Here's his reply to us. It speaks for itself. He will be waiting in his room after 6:30 o'clock tonight. You see, he gives the address of his hotel."

"Curiosity!"

"A most human trait, is it not?"

Detective Johnson Leads the Way.

It was just 6:30 o'clock by Detective Johnson's watch as the three of us were crossing the Clark street bridge. At the Chicago detective bureau we had picked up Detective Blais, for Anton was to be turned over to the police immediately upon his capture. Detective Johnson was carrying the decoy package—a neatly tied and sealed package, carefully addressed. I don't know how many blocks we walked along North Clark street before Johnson remarked:

"There's the place!"

All I had observed was a dimly lighted stairway and above it "Rooms 25 Cents" shining through a black sign. At the next corner we stopped. There was not much of a consultation. Johnson was to lead the way with the package and Blais and I were to follow closely behind.

A street car clanged past; there was a toot from a tug down on the river. A minute passed—two minutes. Blais touched me on the arm.

I remember that on the dimly lighted stairway we passed an elderly man on his way down. The elderly man made some trite remark about the weather. It was raining outside.

On reaching the top of the stairs I observed, to my chagrin, that Johnson was still in conversation with the man behind the desk. It occurred to me that Blais and I were in rather an awkward position.

"Henry Anton?" the aged hotel man was repeating. "Yes, he's up in his room. You've got a package for him? I'll show you the way up."

The hotel man turned upon Blais and me: "You'll have to excuse me, gentlemen," he apologized, "but I'll be back in just a minute."

I breathed a sigh of relief. It had not been necessary for us to make any explanation. The half dozen men seated about in the lobby scarcely glanced up.

Blais and I waited until Johnson and the hotel man were well on the third floor before we started to climb the staircase. Cautiously, we felt our way along, listening for sounds from above and hugging the wall so as not to be observed above the balustrade. And then—then suddenly we were all together in the cheap little room, the four of us, Johnson and Blais and myself and—and Henry Anton.

Henry Packs Up.

Henry Anton was standing in the center of the smelly little room and he was looking at Johnson with an expression on his face that registered nothing at all.

"Come on," ordered Blais, "pack up your things."

Henry Anton pulled on his cap and drew on his overcoat. The cap and the overcoat were quite new and they gave Henry a rather dressy appearance.

"Get your grip; pack up all your stuff," urged Blais. "We aren't going out to a picture show. You won't be coming back. Where did you come from here?"

"Louisville, Ky.," the youth answered in monotone, undecided whether the socks hanging at the foot of the bed were worth taking along or not.

"You mean Duluth, Minn., corrected Blais, "but we won't discuss that now. Say, you ought to use a little more system about getting your clothes in that grip. How old are you, Henry?"

"Twenty-one."

"How long have you been over from the old country?"

"Three years."

I walked over to the dust covered bureau where Johnson was assisting in getting the fellow's belongings together—a half finished letter to his sister, a pocket sized foreign dictionary, a peculiarly decorated comb and brush case that had been a gift, a souvenir postal card of a girl picking flowers in a garden. The torn, dirt begrimed lace curtain that had been a cheap imitation even in its palmy days started to flutter in the April breeze and Johnson took the precaution of closing the window.

"I don't think he's the guy you're looking for," I says.

Johnson walked back to where Henry was leaning over the saggy bed packing his grip. He turned Henry about and held up his head beneath the feeble gas jet.

There was a big mole under the chin!

It was then that I saw a vision of Henry Anton, not in his jaunty cap and new style overcoat, but in prison bluish gray. Henry Anton was returning my gaze. I asked him what was on his mind.

"I just paid my room rent for the week," he answered. "I paid it last night. It was $1.75. And I got a week's pay coming from over where I've been working—$10.50."

"We'll see that you get that," said Blais. "Where did you get the classy clothes—since you came to Chicago, or up there in Duluth?"

"Duluth?" monotoned Henry blankly. "I never been in Duluth."

* * * *

On the way over to the lockup at detective headquarters the four of us talked about inconsequential matters, Henry tugging at his suit case and retaining a facial expression that indicated absolutely nothing at all.

Henry's new cap still reposed jauntily on his freshly cut blond hair as the blanks calling for the data on his case were filled out by the man at detective headquarters. Henry offered but one correction to the information supplied by the detectives; his first name had been pronounced differently in the old country than it was here in English; he smiled boyishly as he made the correction.

The filling out of the blanks was but dull formality. It was a brief proceeding. By the time Henry was ready to be put in a cell the detectives had shifted their conversation to matters that had nothing whatsoever to do with Henry's predicament.

Of course, there had been the mole under the chin, but—well, I went along the basement corridor until I came to Henry Anton's cell.

"From Louisville or Duluth?" I asked.

It was a full minute before the answer came.

"Duluth," Henry Anton acknowledged with a sigh. "It was three months ago that I wrote in that 'five' before the 'nine.' I was just thinking about that package. I guess there wasn't anything in it, was there?"

"No, I guess not," I says. "Anyhow, I saw Johnson toss it into the river when we were coming back over the Clark street bridge."

OLD LADY LUCK AND THE UNBELIEVERS

by Berton Braley

This is a story of Thalia and Fortuna. In other words, it is a tale of the Drama and of Luck.

"LUCK?" said the Great Manager; "there's no such thing. Other managers say I'm lucky because only one out of five of my productions fails—but the luck in my case consists in knowing my business. There's very little luck in it when a man applies his brains and experience to learning what constitutes a dramatic success and then supplies that kind of production. If I didn't let my enthusiasm run away with my judgment now and then I wouldn't even fall down the fifth time."

"Luck?" exclaimed the Playwright, bitterly, "I'm not blaming my lack of success on luck. The trouble is with me. Here I've got a play that all this tribe of producers would sneer at, yet it has the goods and I know it. There's just one producer who is keen enough to realize its possibilities, and that's Morton. But you've got to have nerve and daring to get past the outer office in Morton's place—and even an ordinary office boy can daunt me."

"Why don't you leave your play—probably he'd read it," commented the Playwright's friend.

"Nobody ever reads plays that are left in a manager's office," the Playwright explained, "and Morton is no exception to that rule. Some underling pokes the manuscripts away in a box for a few months and then sends 'em back—unless he loses 'em—with a polite note explaining that 'Mr. Morton has read your play with interest, but regrets that the present state of the theater makes it impossible——' O, piffle!"

"Why not try to catch him at his house?"

"His house is worse than his office—it's almost a barricade. And he's apparently never on the street except in an automobile going twenty miles an hour. I suppose if I had the right qualities I'd jump to the running board and read him the play as his chauffeur tooted his horn, but I haven't those qualities, so I reckon I'll tuck my little manuscript under my arm and beat it back to the tall grass where I belong. I've got money enough for the fare home and I guess my old job on the paper will be waiting for me. I can't stay here any longer, that's a cinch, and I'm just the poor, weak sort of a dub who'll never have the nerve to take another chance. I'm going home. But if anybody ever tells you I had hard luck you tell 'em there ain't no such thing as luck—and say that if I'd been any good I'd have landed."

That afternoon the Playwright bought his ticket for home. When he counted his money following that purchase he found he had $10 which he would not absolutely need.

He pondered, "This is my last night among the bright lights. I've been the economical little tightwad ever since I hit this wicked city and I haven't ever spent more than 50 centimes on a meal. But tonight I bust loose and dine—once—like a regular guy, where there is music and dancing and high cost of living food. Because I'm going to be out in the wilderness for the rest of my life."

Music and Dancing.

Therefore he went to the St. Martin, where his lack of evening clothes won the scornful stare of the head waiter—a stare under which the Playwright shrank for a moment. But perhaps the resolution to buy a good dinner and tip well for it, perhaps the fact that he was going to use his last $10 for that purpose and then shake the metropolitan dust from his feet gave him confidence, for he ceased to shrink, stared insolently back at the head waiter, tossed his hat and coat at the hatboy without looking at him, and followed the "captain" to a table behind a column and near the kitchen.

When he discovered the sort of table to which he had been assigned he protested vigorously and indignantly, still spurred by the new found insolence of wealth—the wealth of his last $10. And the captain moved him to a better table alongside the space for dancing.

"Ah, this is something like," he sighed as he glanced about him, taking in the lights and laughter and movement, the gowns of the women, the flash of jewels, the glitter of silver, and the sheen of snowy linen. The orchestra struck up a rollicking, raggy piece and the dancing floor was presently filled with swaying, swinging couples. There was about the place the atmosphere of sumptuousness, of prodigal pleasure, of assured and sophisticated gaiety which one can find only in a great city. The waiter leaned over the Playwright solicitously. He gave his order and leaned back, blowing luxurious wreaths of cigaret smoke before him.

An idea flickered through his brain—a flash of inspiration for a slight change in his play. He recalled that the manuscript was in his overcoat pocket. He hadn't packed it in his trunk because he was expecting to go over it again—as one cons the virtues of the dead—on the train. Of course the change he thought about was no use, since he was to bury the work of genius in a drawer of his desk at home, but he felt that he'd like to make it, nevertheless, and when the waiter returned with his bread and butter he asked that dignitary to summon the hatboy that he might get the papers out of his coat.

After the usual delay and the usual tip, the Playwright began searching the pages of the manuscript for the lines he wanted to alter. But the waiter came with his oysters and a gleaming girl in gold stepped out and sang a rollicking, frolicking, reckless ragtime song, and then the floor filled again with dancing couples, and amidst this activity and that of feasting the play was pushed aside.

Professional dancers danced, the patrons danced, the violinist of the orchestra gave a solo, the golden girl sang again, a joyous and daring little ditty which she directed gayly to the Playwright, who, forgetting his usual diffidence—the wine had something to do with that—threw her a kiss, to the delight of the other diners.

Forgets His Play.

And thus the play lay neglected under the light at his table, and as course followed course and he feasted on delectable food and on music, and dancing and song and beauty, he forgot the drama completely, and visioned himself as an opulent epicure, whose life was always amid lights and laughter and women and music, with noiseless servants to move at his nod. And through this dream the golden girl, lithe, elusive, sparkling, with eyes that dared and a mouth that denied, moved swiftly, magically, the gleaming goddess of delight.

He resolved that he would meet that girl and woo her and——

But the waiter was at his elbow with the check, the dream was finished, and he was going home. He threw down his napkin, paid the bill, overtipped the waiter handsomely, and left for his train.

"Nice boy, that chap" whispered the golden girl to Mary Leary, the Spanish dancer, as they watched his departure from the performers' table, "he made a real hit with me. Not a johnny; just one of the real 'honest-to-gawd' fellows you knew back home. Hope he comes again; I'm strong for him."

She would have been pleased if she knew that the Playwright was so deeply immersed in thinking of her that he never missed his play manuscript until he was two hours on the train. Then he went frantically through his clothes in search of it, and remembered that he had left it on the table in the restaurant. He supposed he must have thrown his napkin over it when he left and thus concealed it from the waiter's view. At the first stop he got off and wired the St. Martin, but two days after he reached home he received a letter from the management, informing him that his play had not been found.

"Oh well, I have a copy," he remarked, philosophically, and even if I hadn't it wouldn't be any great loss."

So far, the hand of Old Lady Luck has not been evident in the game. But here is where she takes cards. And it was on those cards that the Great Manager should dine in the St. Martin, and that the head waiter should lead him and his secretary to the table which the Playwright had just vacated.

"Yes," said the Great Manager, as they were seated, "the thing we want now is a sane American play which has to do with the lives of the fifteen dollar a week clerks and the twelve dollar a week stenographers. A play without any millionaires or paupers in it—just plain humor and pathos and drama out of the lives of everyday commonplace people who fill the subways and the "L" trains every evening in the rush hour."

Now Enter Luck.

His foot struck something under the table, and the waiter, investigating at his request, produced the Playwright's neat but worn manuscript. Evidently it had slipped down, unnoticed, at some time during the meal.

Interested, he looked at the cast of characters.

"Ha!" he exclaimed, "listen to this: 'Henry Hornden, bookkeeper for a wholesale house. Maggie Dolan, stenographer for Heminway and company. Fritz Dusselhof, janitor of the Stesinton apartments;'—why, this looks like the kind of play I've been talking about. I never heard of this man Springer before," he noted the name on the cover of the manuscript, "but if he has the goods to go with this cast of characters, we're both luck—fortunate."

The Great Manager turned the pages swiftly, grunting over a passage here, smiling at a line there, grasping dialogue and business with the trained mind of a producer whose intelligence had been almost a sure guarantor of success.

"Humph!" he said at last, laying the play aside as he finished the first act, "I'll take it home and read it all—it shows promise, it shows promise."

The landlady at 344 Stuyvesant street held the thin envelope of the Morton Theatrical company up to the light, shook and felt it, and tried to peek under the flap. Getting no satisfaction or information by these processes, she laid it down with a dissappointed sigh and began going through the mess of papers in her overcrowded desk to find the address which the Playwright had given her for the forwarding of his mail. She found none, because he hadn't left any. The Playwright couldn't think of any one who would want to write to him, except his friend Briggs, and Briggs, who lived at another boarding house, knew his home address.

His play, however, had borne the number of Mrs. Geraghty's boarding house, and that was the place to which the Morton Theaterical company letter was directed. It looked, for a time, as though Old Lady Luck was off the job.

But she wasn't. That night she put it into the mind of one of the young ladies in the boarding house to recall that Mr. Springer, the Playwright, had come from some town in Indiana which sounded like a magazine.

"Muncie?" asked the landlady, eagerly.

"Yes, that's it," said the young lady.

Therefore the letter went to Muncie.

The Playwright was not prominent in that city and his address was not known to the postoffice authorities, so after a time the letter was advertised. Once more Old Lady Luck got busy. The Playwright never in his life had read the list of advertised letters, but on this particular day he had clipped an item out of another local paper for rewriting—and on the reverse side was the list of advertised mail, wherein Old Lady Luck saw to it that he should note his own name.

He went to the postoffice and got his letter.

"Here's Luck" Said They.

And thus it is easy to understand how the Playwright, then brilliant and successful author of "The Treadmill," one of the biggest of the season's hits, entered the opulent precincts of the St. Martin several weeks later, in immaculate evening dress, tossed his fur-lined coat to the worshipful hat boy, and was ushered by the head waiter himself to the table he had occupied that night when, beaten by the big city, he had had one last spree and gone home. It wasn't luck that led him to this table tonight, he had reserved it.

"My friend will join me soon," he said to the waiter, "bring me a Martini while I wait."

He seated himself. The orchestra played, the golden girl, in a more glorious gown than ever, came out and sang a gay, debonair song which set the feet to tapping and the pulses to leaping in time. She recognized the Playwright by a sudden start and then a glad smile, and directed her voice and her eyes to him alone, as though there were no one else present. The Playwright rose to his feet, lifted his glass to his lips, and drank a toast to the winsome singer. The diners laughed and applauded. The golden girl beamed and blushed a little under the cabaret makeup. The Playwright, warmed by the drink and the frank glance of gladness in the eyes of the girl, sat down, smiling. All was well with the world.

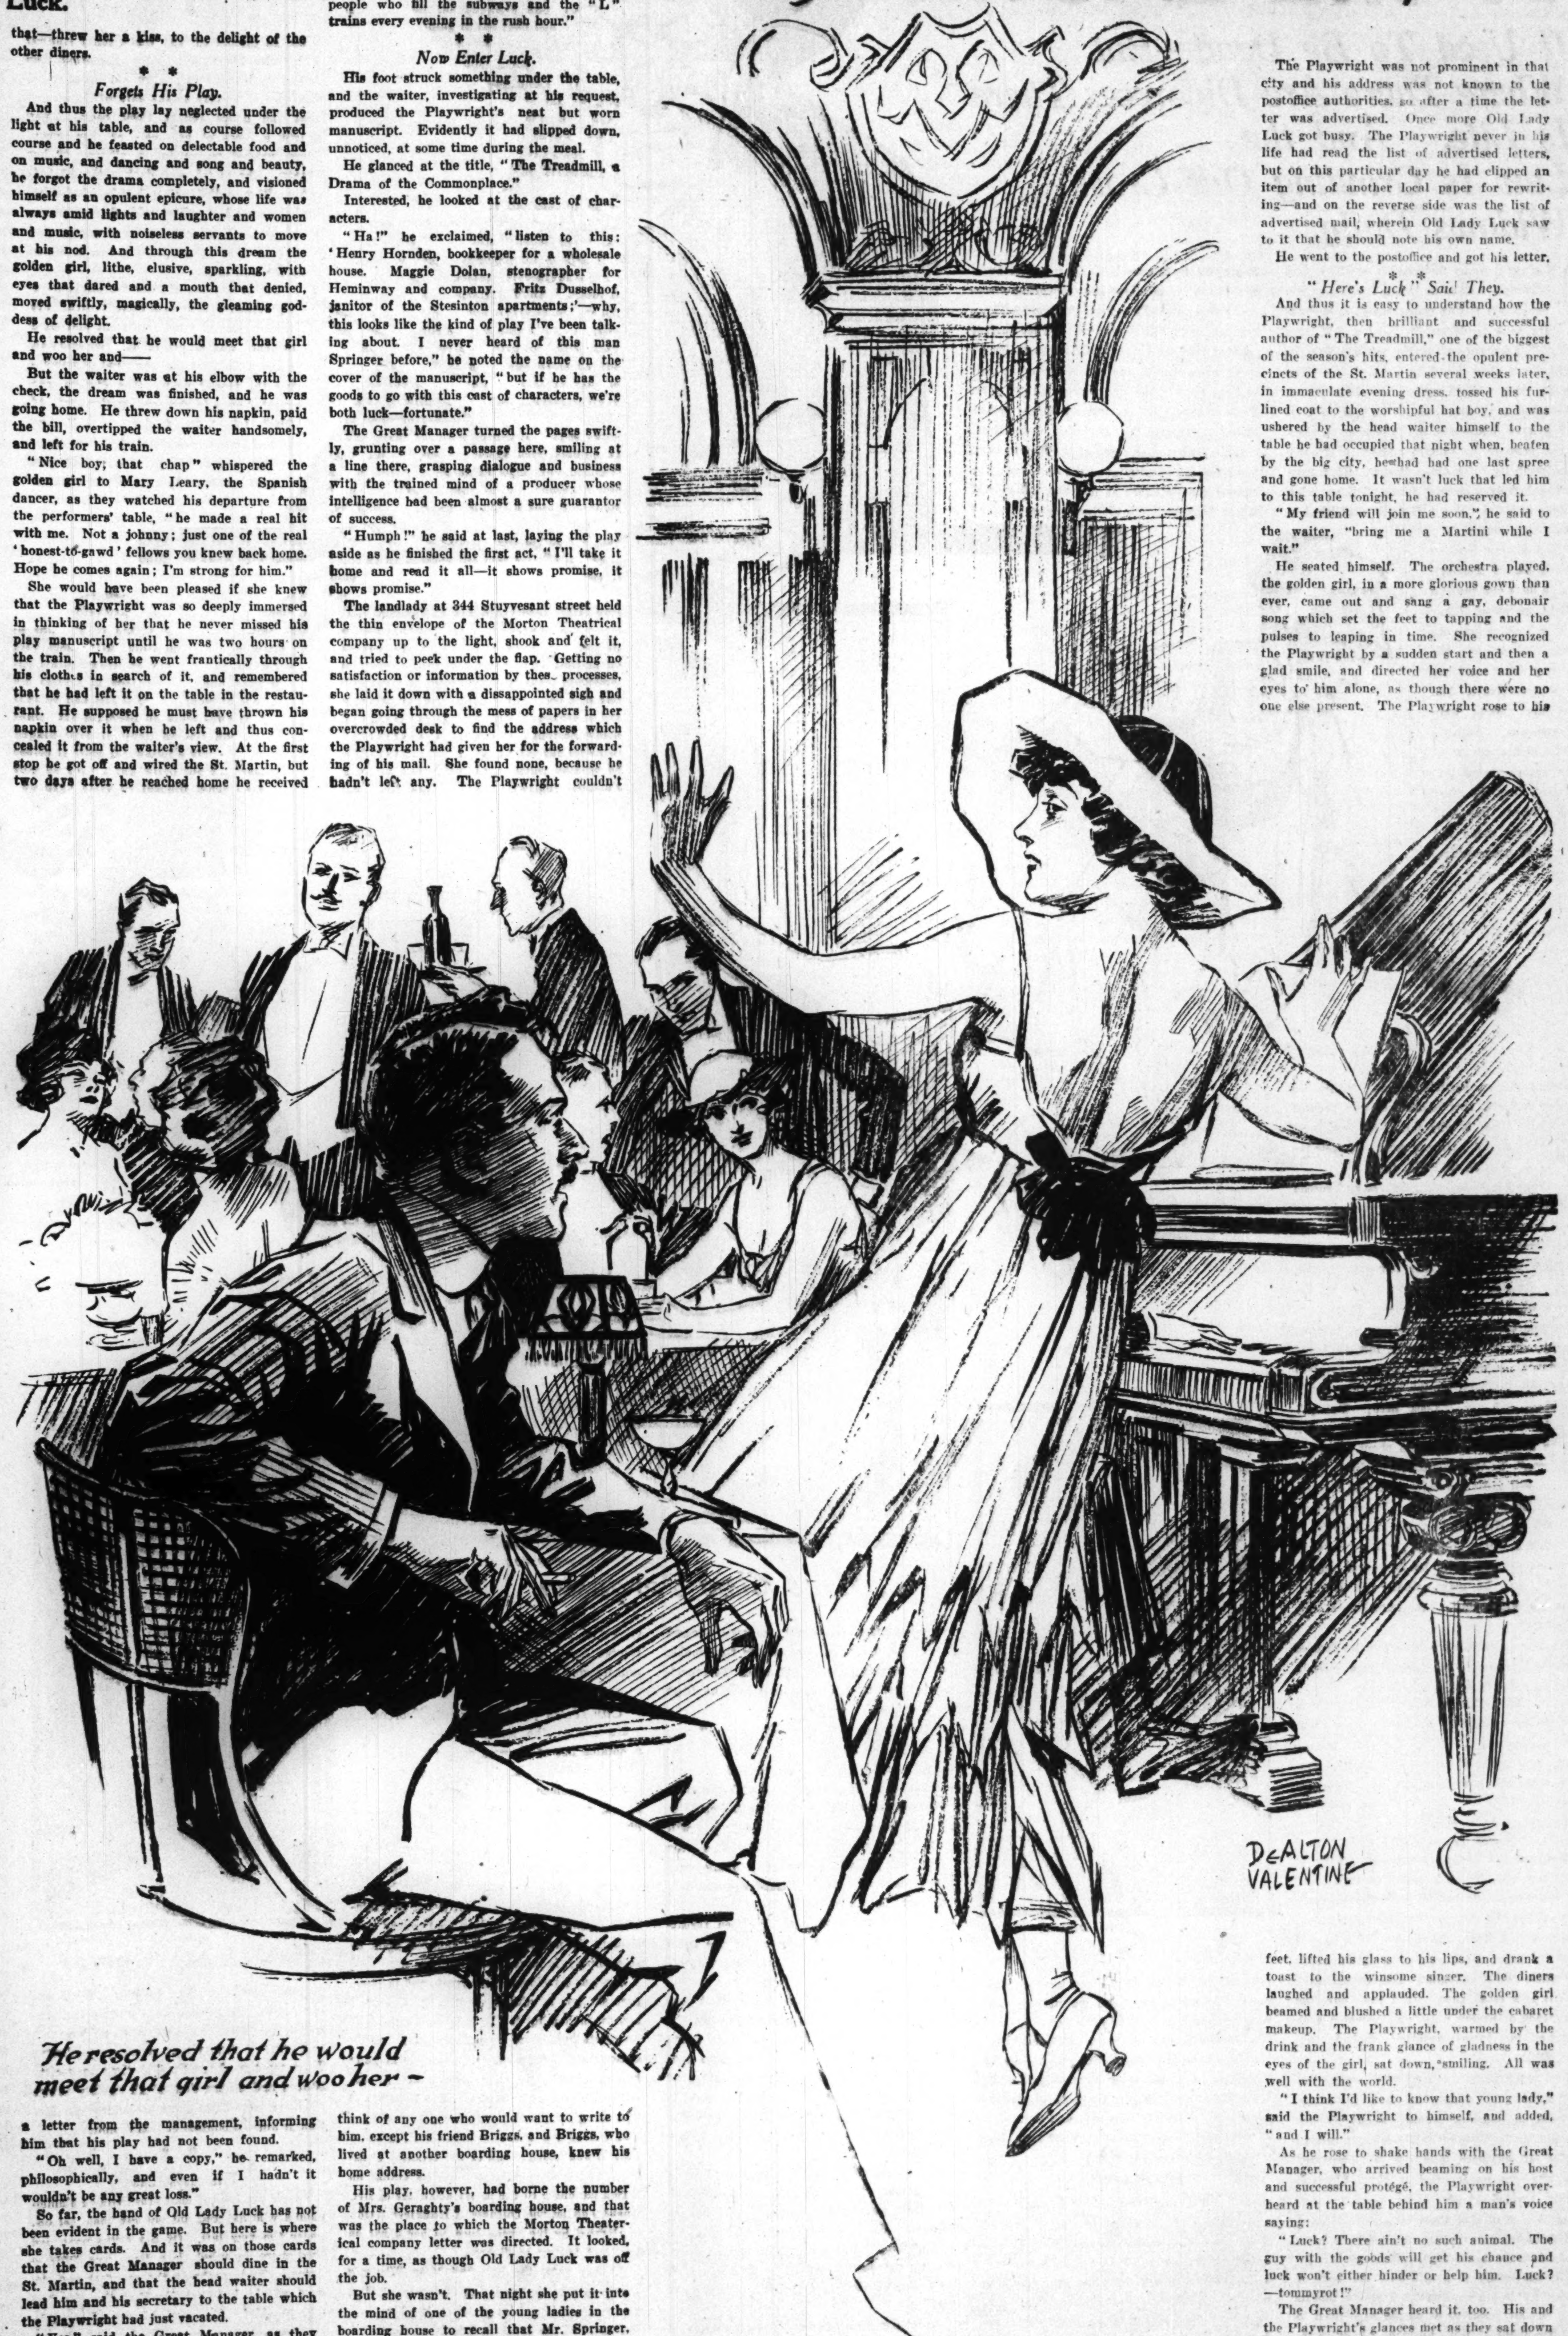
"I think I'd like to know that young lady," said the Playwright to himself, and added, "and I will."

As he rose to shake hands with the Great Manager, who arrived beaming on his host and successful protégé, the Playwright overheard at the table behind him a man's voice saying:

"Luck? There ain't no such animal. The guy with the goods will get his chance and luck won't either hinder or help him. Luck? —tommyrot!"

The Great Manager heard it, too. His and the Playwright's glances met as they sat down and the waiter brought two more golden cocktails. There was a flicker of amusement in the eyes of both men, then they grinned, widely, raised their glasses and

"Here's luck!" said they.



He resolved that he would meet that girl and woo her—

STAID OLD PHILADELPHIA, NOW THE RENO OF THE EAST.

by Mary Brush Williams

It Used To Be Dead—But Where There Are Divorcees There Is Life. And the Law Is Grinding Out Grass Widows Daily.

IN a great many fashionable, wealthy, and otherwise well to do homes of Philadelphia people are sitting round hearth fires shaking their heads and exclaiming, "What a pity!" I am sure all of the world will agree with them when they hear the situation. The people thus exclaiming are the divorcees or the families of divorcees of the Quaker city. They have themselves, or those near to them have, gone to an infinite amount of trouble and publicity to obtain a divorce. They have changed their residence, many of them going as far as Reno. Now a Reno is established in their very homes.

The divorce laws of the state of Pennsylvania have undergone a slight operation. They did not suffer even an incisional wound; the surgery was a mere surface performance. And yet the results were tremendous. An irate Philadelphia orator of reactionary mind expressed them the other day when he said "You have made out of this conservative, dignified city a veritable Reno." Divorces can, so to speak, now be obtained by a turn of the hand. That is why the above mentioned groups are so sad. Having stuck out their infelicity as long as they did, they might have stuck it out a little longer and been divorced with ease and without depriving themselves of the convenience of their own bathtubs. No cross-continent trip is now necessary.

There were, before this important event, eleven grounds of divorce recognized by the courts of Pennsylvania. Among them were nonsupport, habitual drunkenness, extreme cruelty, use of drugs, insanity, infidelity, and impotence. A woman was, however, required to tap her husband on the back, figuratively speaking, and say, "Look here! I've put up with this as long as I've a mind to. I hereby notify you that I am about to obtain a divorce." In other words, proceedings could not proceed until the defendant was directly notified by personal service. Today he may not even be living in the state, he may be at the wars, but if a notice is published of what is about to befall him he is deemed legally notified, and he may actually be divorced from his wife without ever knowing the difference.

No new grounds were added to the divorce laws of Pennsylvania. There were already more than in almost any other state.

The little adjustment was merely in the modus operandi. Notice by publication was suddenly legalized by the state legislature. One might almost wonder if the operation was not performed for an emergency case.

Scores Have Tried It.

You can see for yourselves how greatly it simplifies life. There is one advantage about it, however, overlooked by even the conservative orator. He mentioned that his home town had become a Reno, and did not think to note that the same truth might be stated about the whole of Pennsylvania. Your conservative east is now established with a Reno covering thousands of square miles and provided with every adjunct to easy residence, including accessibility.

Legend has it that a rich Pittsburgher had the amendment made. He had years ago married an English woman about twenty years younger than himself. After a certain period of residence with her he discovered that she was uncongenial to him. She evidently arrived at the same conclusion; at least, she separated from him and returned to live in her own country. She did not, however, care to be divorced. To meet her peculiar obstinacy, so people say, the laws of Pennsylvania were changed. Whether this be true or not, numbers of people have lived to call her blessed. With the new law in its infancy, scores have already tried it.

This is not the only change made in the Pennsylvania divorce law. There must be in the disposition of a legislator something essentially generous. The group that guides Pennsylvania are hospitable as well. They further enacted that the courts could try suits for divorce even though the parties bringing suit had not lived in the state more than one year. Perhaps they were in league with the census maker to increase the population of the state.

Elsie Ferguson was one of the first to avail herself of the hospitality of the new law. She crossed the Delaware at just about the point where Washington made his way over. The laws of New Jersey, where she and her husband, Frederick Hoey, had maintained their residence, are strict and admit of only limited divorce. Once domiciled in Philadelphia, all she had to do was to insert an item in the paper—I do not know in what part of it, but might guess that, by the laws of classification, in the society columns—and after that her course lay undeviatingly before her. She obtained her decree in 1914.

No Contest in Carter Case.

Another who would have availed herself of the law had it been necessary is she who was Lucille Polk Carter, Mrs. Willie Carter, herself of Baltimore and for many years the wife of one of the Rittenhouse Square set of Philadelphia. She started proceedings after the law was in effect, and she did it without any direct mention to her husband of what she had in mind. Before he had stumbled on the information unassisted, however, certain journalists waited on him at his fashionable club to ask him how he felt under the experience of getting a divorce and how he liked the new law.

"Hadn't heard I was getting one," was his reply. He did not seem to react to the news in any large way, and he did not contest the suit. Perhaps it seemed but a mild experience indeed after the marital episodes in which he was an actor. His wife, you will perhaps remember, was the hostess at the "trouble" party a number of years ago, where the women were masked and the men were not. As a result of it six wives returned to their fathers' roofs and four men threatened divorce. Things were never the same again in the domestic lives of those who attended.

Another time, when the harem skirt was fashionable, Mrs. Carter walked through the corridors of the Bellevue-Stratford in green tights, concealed only by a loose cape that slipped from time to time. At Mr. Stuyvesant Fish's Mother Goose ball at Newport she impersonated a fairy, and she wore very fairylike costuming, I can assue you, for I saw her myself.

In getting her divorce she charged cruel and inhuman treatment and cited as one detail that she and her husband were on the Titanic. When she dragged herself up the side of the Carpathia her husband was standing on the deck above her and greeted her with the salutation, "I didn't think you'd make it."

It is indeed not strange, one would say, if anything so unsensational as a new divorce law and a new divorce for themselves scarcely caught their attention. The charming Mrs. Carter is married again. She is now Mrs. George Brook of Philadelphia and is totally uninterested in divorces and divorce laws.

City Noted for Sensational Divorces.

No city in the world has furnished such a notable list of divorces as the slow moving city of Philadelphia. It is celebrated for its charming women, the brilliancy of their marriages, and the sensational quality of their divorces. Following the little affair of Mrs. Lucille Polk Carter Brook her very dear friend, Mrs. Bobby Goelet, who was Miss Elsie Whelen, famous Philadelphia belle, obtained her decree. Why she did not get it in Philadelphia under the new law, and where particulars do not have to be insisted upon so screamingly, is more than meets the eye.

She was a resident of Newport, and in Newport she got it, although little Rhode Island insists on holding to the hidebound tenets of its forefathers more tenaciously than its big sister state, Pennsylvania. To dismiss your husband legally in the tiniest state in the union is a real feat. Mrs. Goelet accomplished it, although not with the golden gift of silence. The din of the endeavor made such a noise that it was heard in all of the civilized countries, and is said even now to be acting as a real handicap to the social activities of Mr. Goelet's sister, the Duchess of Roxburghe, who is slighted by the queen because her highness does not believe in divorce.

At any rate, the beautiful Miss Whelen's marriage was the sensation of the quiet city. She was considered its prettiest daughter, and she married its most distinguished beau. A mob gathered at the church because the courtship had been so thrilling. At one time Mr. Goelet had to abandon his wooing temporarily while he discovered who was wooing another girl under his name! Alice Roosevelt was one of the bridesmaids. People crowded round the bride so fiercely as she entered the church that the police fought them back. They sought a piece of her veil or her gown. They insisted on getting a glimpse of her beauty. She is tall and dark with rich coloring. They called out to her in admiration that she was the loveliest bride they ever saw. People said it was the most romantic and most perfect marriage that had ever taken place in their city.

In the summer of 1914 the whole country reeked with news of their divorce. Mrs Goelet charged cruel treatment and cited evidence was not printable. She said as a minor aside that she was tired of upholding the Goelet pride. The divorce was granted even in the conservative state of Rhode Island, Mr. Goelet was in Europe and represented merely by his counsel. But ther is one point on which you may rest morally assured; he received personal notice of the contest. Why, one asks, when their home state affords facilities for so much quieter a divorce, do the rich and great of Pennsylvania resort to publicity? They mention from time to time to society editors and others that of all earthly things publicity is to them the most annoying. But that is not the subject of this discourse.

The Astor Case.

People are talking about the lovely Philadelphians who did and did not get their decrees under the new law. Of the latter none has been more in mind than Mrs. Ava Willing Astor. She is probably the proudest and the most widely known bride that the city has ever provided. She carried her head superbly high even before she plighted herself to the son of the great American house. People said that it was a rousing match. At least one duke had wooed her.

Things seem not to have gone happily in the marriage from the start. There were rumors that she was living in the great Fifth avenue mansion with her husband on estranged terms. She made frequent trips to Europe, and word always came back of the admiration excited by the proud American in the minds of the aristocracy of England. But never was there any scandal. After long years of marriage with a man possessing one of the greatest of American names, and after bearing him two children, the eldest of whom is now the head of the house, she sued for a divorce. The episode was managed as noiselessly as possible—which was not very noiselessly. The case was tried in White Plains, N. Y., and women filled the courtroom, thinking Mrs. Astor would be there. As a matter of fact, she was in Europe. Still, the newspapers of the country blazed with accounts of the proceedings, even to the manner of the personal service of Mr. Astor. They record everything there is to be told about her.

They tell now of her goings and comings and of her suitors. Lord Curzon was supposed to be one of them and the Duke of Essex another. She says that she will not marry, and this in spite of the fact that for a long time she insisted on being known simply as Mrs. Ava Willing Astor. When her husband was lost on the Titanic, however, she took back the name of Mrs. John Astor, since he had a widow who claimed his full name, and as Mrs. John Astor she apparently wishes to remain. For the purposes of this story, however, she is interesting for her divorce and not for her marriage, past or prospective. Everybody is wondering how she would have used the laws of her state if they were then as they are now.

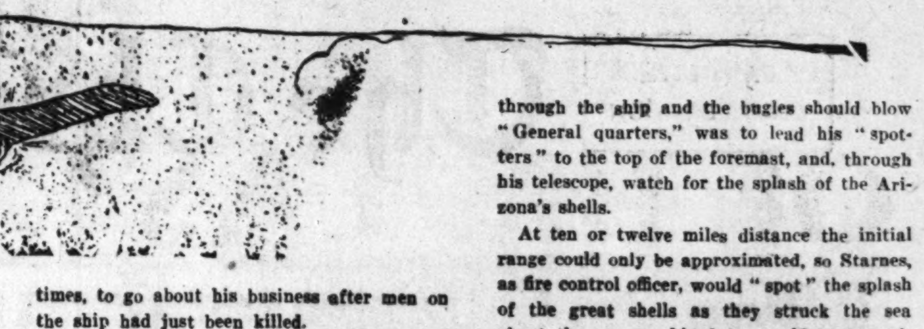
One Drawback to Law.

They are likewise wondering about a lot of her contemporaries, some of whom will demonstrate their stand yet. Rumor has it that divorces among the fashionable of Philadelphia are not on the wane. We may expect some soon, and then we shall see for ourselves how the new law works, for, even if its processes are noiseless, results are sure to be announced.

For the present we must content ourselves with the use made of it by Miss Ferguson and Miss Brook. They demonstrated typically what can be done. Miss Ferguson took advantage of the second provision of the law and moved to Pennsylvania instead of to a far western state. Mrs. Brook served notice by advertisement. It is the merest incident that the reporters aided the situation by carrying the word to Mr. Carter. He would have heard about it eventually. And, if he had not, he would have been divorced just the same.

If there are those who on the strength of this article contemplate availing themselves of the divorce laws of Pennsylvania let us close with the mention of one drawback. Divorces so obtained are limited to the borders of the state and are a nullity beyond it. If the husband from which you obtained a divorce in this state wished to contest it just as you were about to marry in New York state he would have the best of the case. If you wished to consummate your marriage you would have to live in Pennsylvania. And this is quite a restriction on one's life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness.

1917—by EDWIN BALMER



Herewith is presented the ninth installment of a fiction serial dealing with what might happen should European powers, after they had settled their own differences, wage war upon the United States. The author, one of the best fiction writers in the country, has based his story upon a thorough understanding of military, naval, and internal conditions in the United States and upon a sound knowledge of military and economic history. The story will cause you to realize the critical situation in which this country and you, your neighbors, and your family are placed by the let-well-enough-alone attitude of the pacifists.

SYNOPSIS.

In Elgin, Ill., live the Ashby family, consisting of Nathan Ashby, owner of the Ashby Brass company, and his wife; a daughter, Nellie, married to Bob Wendell, a navy lieutenant; and Jim Ashby, a son, engaged to Agnes Ware. Nathan Ashby is the archtype of pacifist, deaf to the warnings of impending danger to America. Almost out of a clear sky news is received that the U. S. scout cruiser, Salem, proceeding against orders, in the North Atlantic has encountered the fleet of the league of former European enemies and has been sunk, a deliberate act of war. Bob is recalled to Newport News. Spies are discovered in the Ashby works, and evidence of a league of spies that swarm the country and are even enlisted in the army is held by Jim Ashby, who for a time is held prisoner in one of the spies' rendezvous in a fashionable residence in Chicago. Jim after his adventure returns to Elgin. War is on and Jim has signified his intention to enlist. Bob arrives in Newport News to find that the battle preliminaries are already being fought. A message is handed him telling him he is to report at once aboard the Arizona.

THE three from the train followed the boy down to the boat and preceded him on board. The ensign—his name was Wayne—steered the launch swiftly across the water toward Norfolk. All about the anti-aircraft guns were going incessantly. Wendell's pulses quickened with the nearness of the firing, but for a few moments he silently studied the silhouettes of the ships lying further down the river and in the roads.

The big, four funneled, two masted destroyer which had started the firing was the Cummings; the Cassin of the same class was just beyond; a little further off the larger and newer destroyers, Aylwin and Balch, both had brought their anti-aircraft guns into action; a couple of great cruisers—they had the two turrets, four funnels, and the cage foremast of the Montana class—spat a shell now and then, but, for the most part, they were silent. Sailors sprawled over their sides with paint pots and brushes daubing big splotches of gray over the lead colored paint; the superstructure and funnels of the cruisers the turrets and the barrels of the long guns, were already dappled so that the outline of the ships, even when close by, was vague and broken.

Beyond the cruisers, and sentineled by a dozen small torpedo craft, lay three monster warships, each with a single gigantic funnel, two tall cage masts, and four huge turrets, two forward and two aft. They were mottled like the cruisers, gray and darker gray; at a distance of eight miles or ten—at which such ships should fight—the mottling must make doubtful their silhouettes, but at three or four miles Wendell knew them—three of the most powerful superdreadnaughts of the American first line of battle.

The blood burned in Wendell's face as he saw them, and he raised his prismatic glasses to his eyes. "Which is which?" he asked of Wayne.

"The Nevada is nearest," Wayne replied. "The Oklahoma lies next."

Wendell nodded; he had made out, through his glasses, the distinguishing lines of the two nearer monsters; their lower turrets, bow and stern, mounted three guns each; three of the huge fourteen inch rifles; the other turrets showed but two guns apiece—ten fourteen inch rifles on each vessel.

"The next is the Pennsylvania?" Wendell referred. All of its four turrets showed three guns each—twelve fourteen inch guns together.

"Yes, sir. She came in just this morning."

"Then the Arizona's at the navy yard?"

"Yes, sir; we're taking on ammunition."

"I see." Wendell looked an instant across the water to the estuary of the Elizabeth, where the city of Norfolk lay on the left; Portsmouth, with the navy yard, was on the right. He turned his glasses then back to the roads and the bay beyond. "What's out further?"

"Some of the mine layers; we've put out most of the mines at night, of course, but the regent's aircraft were here right after daylight and spotted most of them, so we're adding a few more now—mixing the dummies and the real ones."

Wendell nodded. Aloft in an aeroplane at Pensacola he had seen how distinctly the mines—hidden by water from lookouts on ships' decks—stood out to the pilot and observer far overhead. Every mine at the entrance of the bay might be spotted on such a sunshiny day, but the observers in the air could not tell the real mines from the dummies.

"So, our friend up there," Wendell searched the sky for the blue streak of the enemy aeroplane, "isn't our first visitor?"

"No, sir; I should say not!"

"Where have they been coming from?"

"Some say that they must be coming from a secret shore base—in a swamp somewhere or a backwater along the coast. They're all hydroaeroplanes, but they're more probably coming from some 'mother' ship which is with their battle cruisers."

"Where are the battle cruisers?"

A flush stained Wayne's face as he answered, "Haven't you heard, sir? They've been raiding the coast all day. Two cruisers up above Boston, they say, shelled Salem and Newburyport; there's some more have been raising hell along Rhode Island and Long Island and New Jersey. They're all battle cruisers of their Carthage class or armored cruisers of the Pera type—six or seven knots faster than anything we've got except our destroyers. Our ships at Boston and in New York have tried to drive them away, of course, but we've got to send out our first line ships to do that; their battle cruisers give us the laugh and keep just out of range of us, and—shoot hell out of the coast. Atlantic City was on fire this noon with two or three hundred dead, and the squadron down this way—which that plane comes from, probably—shelled Ocean City, in Maryland, this morning, and another ship killed twenty women and children at Virginia Beach."

Wendell gazed at the great dreadnaughts lying in the roads; he felt the flush which had flamed to the ensign's cheeks as he confessed the helplessness of the fleet against the regent's battle cruisers now burning in his own veins. The two tall cage masts of the Arizona, toward which he was bound, showed above the other shipping before Portsmouth, and the objective of the aeroplane, at which the anti-aircraft guns of the destroyers had been firing for twenty minutes, now had become clear. Twice, while the launch had been crossing the James, the enemy's plane had dashed over the city, but had turned in a long ellipse to swoop back again. On the third return now, the pilot appeared better pleased with his position; as he passed over Portsmouth something dropped, which glinted in the sunlight, and where it fell flame and black smoke and flying débris billowed up. At the roar of the explosion the anti-aircraft guns redoubled their racket, but the aeroplane only "banked" and swung about, short, and dropped another bomb, which blew up a second black cloud of destruction.

"He's deviling the Arizona, you see," Wendell handed his glass over to Ross, who was beside him, "or he's trying to get the navy yard arsenal."

The red warning flag—the signal for other craft to keep away while the battleship took aboard its powder, shells, and guncotton—fluttered from the Arizona's halyards. Wayne steered directly for the great ship. The aeroplane of the enemy had passed on; from a field near the water an American biplane whirred into the air. It was all white wings and brown-body, compared to the other, but it rose in a slow spiral and set itself in pursuit.

"That pilot has his nerve," Wayne admired. "The fellow that tried to chase one of the planes this morning got shot down for it."

"Killed?" Ross asked.

"He fell in the bay from 3,000 yards."

But the blue streak—the wings of the enemy's plane were again quite invisible—ignored both the American biplane and the shells breaking in the sky; it circled and flew for the navy yard once more.

Wayne brought the launch to the side of the Arizona as the blue aeroplane headed into the wind from the sea and maneuvered for position overhead. It was plain that the pilot was to drop bombs again, but Wendell, with Ross and Fulton just behind, climbed to the deck of the battleship, and now, as they were in sight of other officers and men, they did not even look up at the menace overhead.

The Arizona, as Wendell had observed as he approached, was cleared for action; everything movable which had been on the deck had disappeared—davits, boats, railing, stanchions, flagstaffs, and ventilators; a crew of painters at work forward were finishing the prescribed mottling of the ship. The officer of the deck was standing on the side toward the dock with another officer superintending the taking on of ammunition. The officer of the deck, glancing up at the aeroplane, shouted an order for the men to cease bringing powder. Wendell approached him, tensely; from directly overhead—as nearly overhead as the pilot of the plane could calculate—an aerial torpedo was descending upon his ship. Wendell knew this without looking up; Ross, who was beside him, knew it, as did Fulton, who followed. The officer of the deck, turning, saw the three junior lieutenants and cried to them to take cover; at the same instant a cry of alarm came from a seaman who was standing further forward, shouts from others on the docks gave warning, cut short in the middle by a shock and roar which battered and deafened. Bob Wendell, swaying and grabbing for support, caught the shoulder of some one; the gas from the explosion choked and stifled him; pain in his eyes blinded him for a moment; then he coughed the gas from his lungs and was able to look about.

A seaman lay on his face at Bob's feet; there was a horrid hole in his back; it needed no second glance to see that the man was dead. Further forward, three bodies were piled up at the barbette of No. 2 turret.

The officer of the deck—it was he against whom Bob had been thrown—saw the dead men, too, but he did not concern himself with them. He gave no greater concern at that moment to the officer who had been superintending the taking on of ammunition, who now lay unconscious. While Bob still clung to him the officer of the deck gazed overhead and saw that the areoplane had gone on. He gave a curt order for resuming the work of taking on ammunition; then he spoke to Wendell. "All right, now."

Bob regained some steadiness, apologized, and reported himself.

"Go below," the officer of the deck directed, "and as soon as you are yourself report to the captain and inform him that you report for duty."

Bob dizzily went below. A surgeon had appeared to give attention to the officer—he was a lieutenant named Varney—who had fallen. As Bob turned about men of the doctors' detail were lifting the bodies of the men who had been killed. The loading of ammunition and the work of painting the ship had ceased only for the few seconds before and following the explosion; the slaying of four men and the wounding of others had interrupted no one of the unhurt who had work to do.

Wendell, on his way to quarters where he could wash, passed through the wardroom. Everything which belonged there had been stowed away—electric fans, china, plate glass and looking glasses; battle ports were closed. A junior lieutenant—"Garry" Starnes—who had been a classmate and a close friend at Annapolis, appeared and led Bob into his room. From that room, too, all breakables had been removed. Bob was used to the bareness of the rooms as a preliminary to the firing of the big guns in battle practice, but the bareness affected him differently now.

In addition to absolutely essential articles, there was nothing in "Garry's" room but two photographs in leather frames fastened above the desk. Bob gazed at one of the photographs; it was of a smiling, direct, eyed, likable looking girl of 16 or 17. The picture was rather faded; it was seven or eight years old. Bob remembered it well. Garry had had it back in midshipman days; the girl was the one who came down to Annapolis, all flushed and excited, for Garry's graduation, and who had danced with him all but three of the numbers at the "hop." The other photograph was a picture of her, too—a photograph recently taken—showing how beautiful that laughing little girl had become, how happy Garry had made her, and photographed with her was a little boy of 4 (Starnes had married the year after he graduated; Bob was his best man), very like his mother and a good deal like Garry, too, and wearing proudly as a band for his straw sailor hat a ribbon, "U. S. A. Arizona."

Bob bent and gazed closely at the picture of the little boy, and, suddenly and quite unconsciously, his eyes blurred.

"That's a great kid," he said to Garry after a minute.

"He's all right." Garry winked and looked away. He was pleased that Bob had noticed the picture, but he did not want to talk about it. "You mighty near got it above, Bob."

Garry had not been close enough to suffer from the explosion, but he was badly shaken; he had had to make more of an adjustment, perhaps, than Wendell; for Bob, forty hours before, had seen a man destroyed and he had gone off and left the body beside the road because it was war. It was yet novel to Garry, though he had played the pretense in practice many times, to go about his business after men on the ship had just been killed.

A mess man of the detail who brought on board the officers' baggage appeared at the door with Bob's bags. Garry received them and opened them on his bunk.

"You're rather a sight," Garry informed Bob. "You'd better make a complete change; if you haven't everything you want I guess my things'll fit you. And, by the way, you might as well bathe now. Every one's been ordered to."

Wendell looked about quickly. The order for every one to bathe and put on clean clothes was the preliminary of battle, a precaution taken so that expected wounds would be as clean as might be. "You mean we're going out soon?"

"Looks like it."

Bob went to the shower bath; when he returned Garry was gone, but the next moment rejoined Wendell in the room.

"How's Varney?" asked Bob.

"Pretty much hurt about the head, but he's conscious and the doc thinks he'll pull through, but he'll not fight his turret in this scrap. They're taking him ashore to the hospital. And two of the men that are got for good were gunners—one was Ferris of the Kansas, remember him? The best pointer on the ship."

Wendell realized that the sound of the anti-aircraft guns had ceased. It surprised him, when he thought of it, that he did not take trouble to find out what had happened to the machine and that Starnes did not concern himself about it, either. The fate of one aeroplane, which no longer was menacing, was too trivial among the events now upon them.

"What are you here?" Starnes questioned. "Watch and divisional officer, Bob?"

"That's what the orders said which I got on the train. I haven't seen the old man yet. You're still on fire control, Garry?"

"Yep."

"Foretop?"

"Right. I'm in charge there. And you've a turret?"

"No. 2, Wayne thought. He said on the way over he understood he's to be my junior."

Garry shook his head. "Not any longer—not if they're carrying Varney ashore! I don't mean you won't have the turret; I mean you'll have it all to yourself, and Wayne'll have a turret, too—or Ross will have the turret and Wayne take a division of fives by himself."

Wendell glanced about quickly. It was not like Garry to find fault; he was notorious for eagerness to take on two men's work in an emergency, cheerfully, and as though he preferred it. His battle station, as he had just been told, was chief fire control officer in the tops; his business, when the alarm bells should boom through the ship and the bugles should blow "General quarters," was to lead his "spotters" to the top of the foremast, and, through his telescope, watch for the splash of the Arizona's shells.

At ten or twelve miles distance the initial range could only be approximated, so Starnes, as fire control officer, would "spot" the splash of the great shells as they struck the sea about the enemy; his duty would be to estimate the distance of the splash beyond or short or to the right or to the left of the target; to telephone his estimate instantly to the chief fire control station far below the armor and the water, from which there would go to the guns the instructions for the correction of the sights so the next shots would be closer and the next might hit.

Garry was naturally adapted to this work and had been trained to extraordinary skill in it; there was no better man of any rank for this work in the fleet, so the fact of his being chief fire control officer in the foretop betrayed no weakness of personnel.

The fact of Wendell's appointment as second divisional officer without a junior would be different. His battle station, as he had said to Starnes, would be to command No. 2 turret—the great turrets, housing three fourteen inch guns, just forward of the bridge and the conning tower. A lieutenant of full rank, with a lieutenant of junior grade (like Wendell) or with an ensign as second in command, belonged at such a battle station. Wendell had realized, therefore, that his order to report for duty as watch and divisional officer was proof of lack of officers, but he was used to that fact. Often enough, in battle practice, he had been senior divisional officer in command of a turret. But if Varney's loss meant that he was to have no junior in the turret who had been trained at the big guns, the weakness in battle might be serious indeed.

"What's the department doing?" he challenged Starnes.

"Doing!" Garry burst forth with pent up rage. "Dragging every damned hulk out of reserve or out of the navy yard cemeteries and taking away good men from ships to man 'em to make a show—a rotten political parade of names of 'ships in commission' to bunk the country with! They haven't recommissioned any of Farragut's sailing vessels yet, and so far they've left the Constitution alone, but half the Spanish war jokes are going to sea again. Damn it, Bob, think of it! They took Duval—except for the old man and Mr. Stacey, the best officer of this ship—to resurrect the Iowa. Alward's ordered to apply the pulmotor to the Kentucky.

"They're sending officers—men, Bob—men that we need and the Oklahoma and the Pennsylvania and the Nevada need, to take out destroyers that haven't done twenty-five knots this century, and they're stripping us of ensigns and boatswains to command nine knot tramps to lay mines—which every tramp captain ought to have been trained to do ten years ago—they're manning more rotten merchanters to drag for the mines which the regent's men are thoughtfully planting everywhere they get a chance and just setting adrift in other places, and——"

Garry cut short and jumped up and stood listening. Mmmmmmm! a deep, resounding reverberation rumbled over the water. Mmmmmmm! It vibrated again. Mmmmmmm! It was far away, very far away, but there was no question of what it was—one of the forts or a ship somewhere out in the bay firing its heavy guns.

Wendell, finishing dressing, hurried to the captain's room, where, formally reporting himself for duty, he was ordered to Mr. Stacey, the executive officer, for assignment to his division.

Cries and commotion came from about the ship, and as Bob turned from the executive officer to inspect No. 2 turret, which he was to command in action, the Arizona left the navy yard. He went out to the quarter deck as the battleship headed to Hampton roads and increased speed as it steered into the wide water. A number of the ships which had been in the roads when he had crossed from Newport News in the launch now were in the bay and headed out to sea. Two light cruisers, a half dozen destroyers, and the great dreadnaught Pennsylvania were in motion. The yellow haze of powder smoke, puffing from the Pennsylvania's forward turrets and blown swiftly back by the breeze, told that it was the battleship which was firing, and now a spurt of spray—dashing up a hundred yards ahead of the Pennsylvania and half as high as her foremast—told that somewhere out at sea a ship of the enemy was returning the fire. The Arizona steamed more swiftly after her sister ship, and now, as the vessel rose and fell to the swell rolling in from the Atlantic, the alarm bells boomed below and the bugles called all men to battle stations.

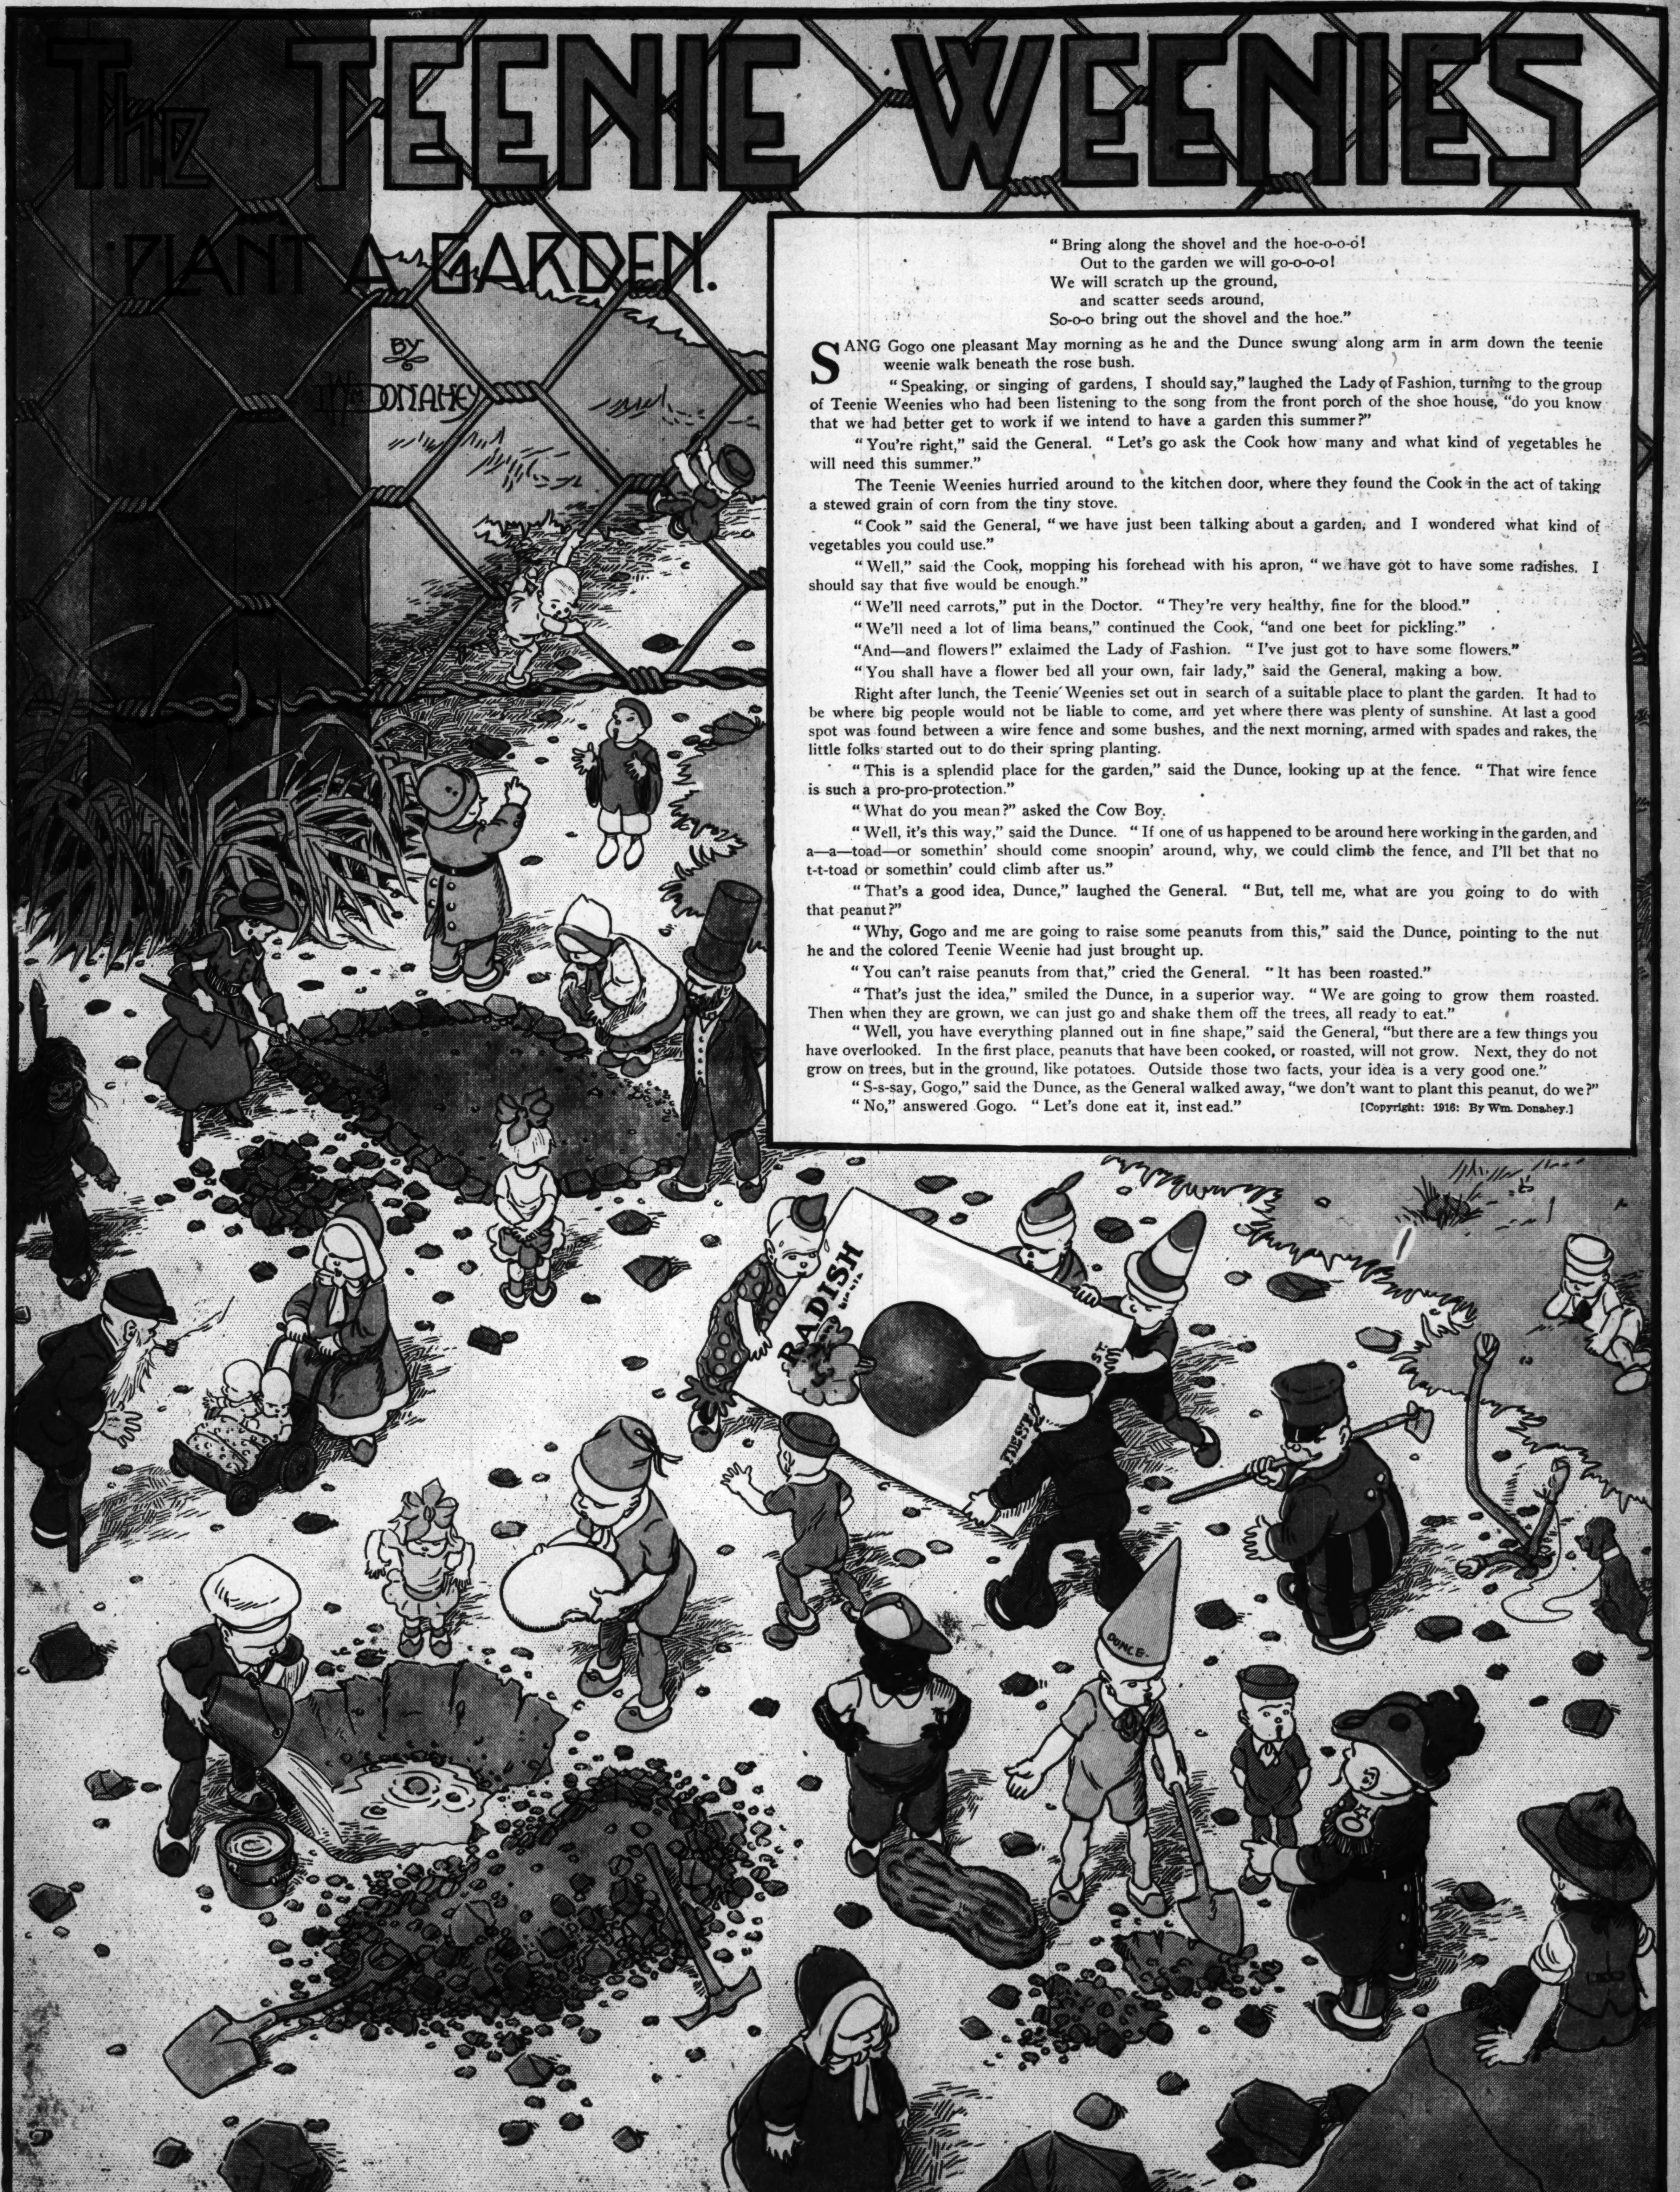
The TEENIE WEENIES PLANT A GARDEN.

BY W^m^ DONAHEY



"Bring along the shovel and the hoe-o-o-o!
Out to the garden we will go-o-o-o!
We will scratch up the ground,
and scatter seeds around,
So-o-o bring out the shovel and the hoe."

SANG Gogo one pleasant May morning as he and the Dunce swung along arm in arm down the teenie weenie walk beneath the rose bush.

"Speaking, or singing of gardens, I should say," laughed the Lady of Fashion, turning to the group of Teenie Weenies who had been listening to the song from the front porch of the shoe house, "do you know that we had better get to work if we intend to have a garden this summer?"

"You're right," said the General. "Let's go ask the Cook how many and what kind of vegetables he will need this summer."

The Teenie Weenies hurried around to the kitchen door, where they found the Cook in the act of taking a stewed grain of corn from the tiny stove.

"Cook" said the General, "we have just been talking about a garden, and I wondered what kind of vegetables you could use."

"Well," said the Cook, mopping his forehead with his apron, "we have got to have some radishes. I should say that five would be enough."

"We'll need carrots," put in the Doctor. "They're very healthy, fine for the blood."

"We'll need a lot of lima beans," continued the Cook, "and one beet for pickling."

"And—and flowers!" exlaimed the Lady of Fashion. "I've just got to have some flowers."

"You shall have a flower bed all your own, fair lady," said the General, making a bow.

Right after lunch, the Teenie Weenies set out in search of a suitable place to plant the garden. It had to be where big people would not be liable to come, and yet where there was plenty of sunshine. At last a good spot was found between a wire fence and some bushes, and the next morning, armed with spades and rakes, the little folks started out to do their spring planting.

"This is a splendid place for the garden," said the Dunce, looking up at the fence. "That wire fence is such a pro-pro-protection."

"What do you mean?" asked the Cow Boy.

"Well, it's this way," said the Dunce. "If one of us happened to be around here working in the garden, and a—a—toad—or somethin' should come snoopin' around, why, we could climb the fence, and I'll bet that no t-t-toad or somethin' could climb after us."

"That's a good idea, Dunce," laughed the General. "But, tell me, what are you going to do with that peanut?"

"Why, Gogo and me are going to raise some peanuts from this," said the Dunce, pointing to the nut he and the colored Teenie Weenie had just brought up.

"You can't raise peanuts from that," cried the General. "It has been roasted."

"That's just the idea," smiled the Dunce, in a superior way. "We are going to grow them roasted. Then when they are grown, we can just go and shake them off the trees, all ready to eat."

"Well, you have everything planned out in fine shape," said the General, "but there are a few things you have overlooked. In the first place, peanuts that have been cooked, or roasted, will not grow. Next, they do not grow on trees, but in the ground, like potatoes. Outside those two facts, your idea is a very good one."

"S-s-say, Gogo," said the Dunce, as the General walked away, "we don't want to plant this peanut, do we?"

"No," answered Gogo. "Let's done eat it, inst ead."

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

WHEN the long breakers roll in to the land and the restless waves deckled edge with foam reflect the blue of summer skies, one turns once more to the sea and the delights of the seashore.

Now it is many a season since the strictly utilitarian bathing suit was banished from the wardrobe of the well dressed woman, and in the newest modes great beauty is combined with every practical quality that the lover of aquatic sports demands. Several charming creations are pictured in the accompanying illustration. At the left is an attractive model, which is developed in two tones of blue taffeta. The upper part of this costume is cut in basque like style, while a touch of novelty is revealed in the skirt. This is fashioned in two sections and the silk is so arranged that the coin spot border makes an effective decoration. The headdress is evolved from a band of the plain silk, combined with the handsome spotted silk, and is quite chic.

Navy satin is the material chosen for the model that is depicted in the center of the group. This is designed with a full skirt, while the bodice with its oval shaped opening is trimmed with a series of light blue silk triangles. The tights simulating riding breeches are also adorned with contrasting patches of satin, and the cap with its eye protecting brim is decidedly suggestive of the jockey's cap.

Carelessly kneeling on a gaily striped wrap, the figure in the foreground reveals another interesting type of dress. This style will doubtless please the woman who delights in beautiful color, for two exquisite shades of old rose are cleverly combined in this model. Bands of soutache elaborate the hem and outline the quaintly fashioned apron front of this bathing costume. From fold upon fold of the lighter old rose silk a picturesque cap is evolved, while the slippers are tied with old rose ribbon in a shade somewhat darker than the rose.

The woman who prefers a rather loose fitting suit will doubtless select the model that completes the illustration. Gray and black satin are used in this delightful costume, whose only trimming consists of tucks of the gray satin. The slip-on cap, shirred at the top, harmonizes well with this simple but thoroughly modish bathing suit.

While dress for water sports reveals many interesting features, devotees of other outdoor exercise will surely be charmed with the modes that have been originated for them. Perhaps the most greatly favored of all materials for general outdoor wear is jersey cloth. This may be had in silk or wool in a variety of different weights admirably suited to the various needs of the fashionable woman, and as the season advances one finds that clothes readily come under two classifications—the sports frock and the evening gown. One reason doubtless for the great vogue of the sports dress is that it is extremely comfortable and yet it possesses the distinctive touch that is so much enjoyed by well dressed women.

In light weight jerseys many delectable styles are shown. Some of these for the younger generation are modeled along the lines of the middy. Frequently the skirts are designed with narrow box plaits that completely encircle the figure. New touches are seen in the trimmings, for buttons of contrasting shade are chosen to emphasize the individuality of the frock, or a collar closely plaited may extend almost to the waistline, while not infrequently trimmings of velvet give a characteristic touch to the simple outdoor frock.

Summer furs and marabout are also lavishly used, and, as the jersey frocks are shown in all the gay colors of midsummer, such adornments not infrequently introduce a pleasing dash of contrast.

MEN AND WOMEN

"CHASTITY has become an empty form," philosophizes Miss Jessie Taft, an instructor in the philosophy department at the University of Chicago, in a booklet she has just written on the suffrage movement.

Surely this is sex hysteria at its most hysterical!

Sex Hysteria.

The importance of chastity in women has been recognized from the earliest history. Today it is as excellent a virtue and desirable an asset in a maid as it has ever been.

It is deplorable that the "right to live her own life" and the "right to individual happiness" aroused through the popular and unwholesome erotic ethics of certain popular writers works such confusion in the brain as to interpret chastity as an unessential quality in the modern, independent woman.

It may be a congenial philosophy of life for a girl with a taste for flirtation, excitement, and sport, and whose imagination has been stimulated by stories of elective affinities in the sex novel and the problem play. But congenial for only a brief moment of her life.

The girl who looks upon chastity as an empty form plays the losing game. For with soulmates of the present day the "right to happiness" turns out to be a desire for fresh stimulation. The "right" to live one's own life" invariably results in a gratification of lustful desire and continued increase of coarseness of nature.

These modern courtesans may call their mode of life the new morality. Its real name is unchastity.

Occasionally a great theatrical star, a brilliant literary light, or a grand opera prima donna may, through the very bigness of her art, throw dust in the eyes of the world and make it believe her art justifies the "great passion." But the long string of misadventures in almost every such case is sufficient argument against the creed.

Sex as Parlor Conversation.

A disconcerting feature of the free and easy, unchaperoned companionship of our present day young men and women is the popularity of sex discussion. Commenting upon this as the chief topic of polite conversation, some man wittily remarked that "sex o'clock surely had been struck in America."

Whatever may be said in favor of drawing the head out of the sand of prudery, it must be admitted that this freedom of sex discussion contributes to a certain extent to a laxity in sex matters. There are young men and women of exceptional highmindedness and mature judgment between whom vice and prostitution may be discussed openly and frankly without imparting a breath of indelicacy. But, generally speaking, a girl who shows preference for this sort of conversation suffers a certain loss of delicacy and opens the way to advances.

There is a world of difference, of course, between absolute silence and prudery and a prudent discretion which refrains from handling the sex topic without discriminating sense. The danger lies in the fact that the pendulum with women swings more rapidly to extreme degrees because of their highly sensitized nervous organism, which fastens with almost hysterical tendency to anything which produces an emotional appeal.

Promiscuous sex discussion has a tendency to destroy the sense of shame which is the best natural protection of a girl's sweetness and purity.

It may be argued that the current sex plays and books, and wide publicity given divorce and vice scandals, leaves little else to talk about. This is not true, however. There are many wholesome plays to see and talk about; many clean, sweet, and uplifting books to read and discuss; many healthy and wholesome happenings in the average daily life. So why mess up the mind with topics of vice and sex?

Alimony in Divorce Cases.

The refusal of Miss Crystal Eastman to accept alimony from her divorced husband raises the question in many minds as to whether or not the doing away with alimony entirely would tend to a decrease in the number of divorces.

There is a general impression that divorce is a popular pastime for the rich and the well to do only. This no doubt is due to the publicity given these people. Statistics prove the contrary to be the case. Ninety per cent of the divorces granted are default cases in which little alimony or none at all is provided for in the decree. Of 98 per cent of the remaining 10 per cent it may be safely said, however, that alimony does influence women to file divorce bills.

However, to dispense with alimony entirely would prove a shameful injustice to the wives who are mothers and those who have helped build up the fortune that in many cases proves their undoing.

In a case like that of Miss Eastman, where there are no children and where the woman has capacity to earn her living, it is a creditable thing to refuse to be supported by one with whom she has broken the bonds.

HOW I REDUCED MRS. EVA LANE 36 POUNDS IN 6 WEEKS

by Antoinette Donnelly

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

TODAY I shall tell you of my fourth week's work with Mrs. Eva Lane, my model, whom I reduced from 204½ pounds to 168½ pounds in six weeks.

tics, I reduced from 204½ pounds to 168½ pounds in six weeks.

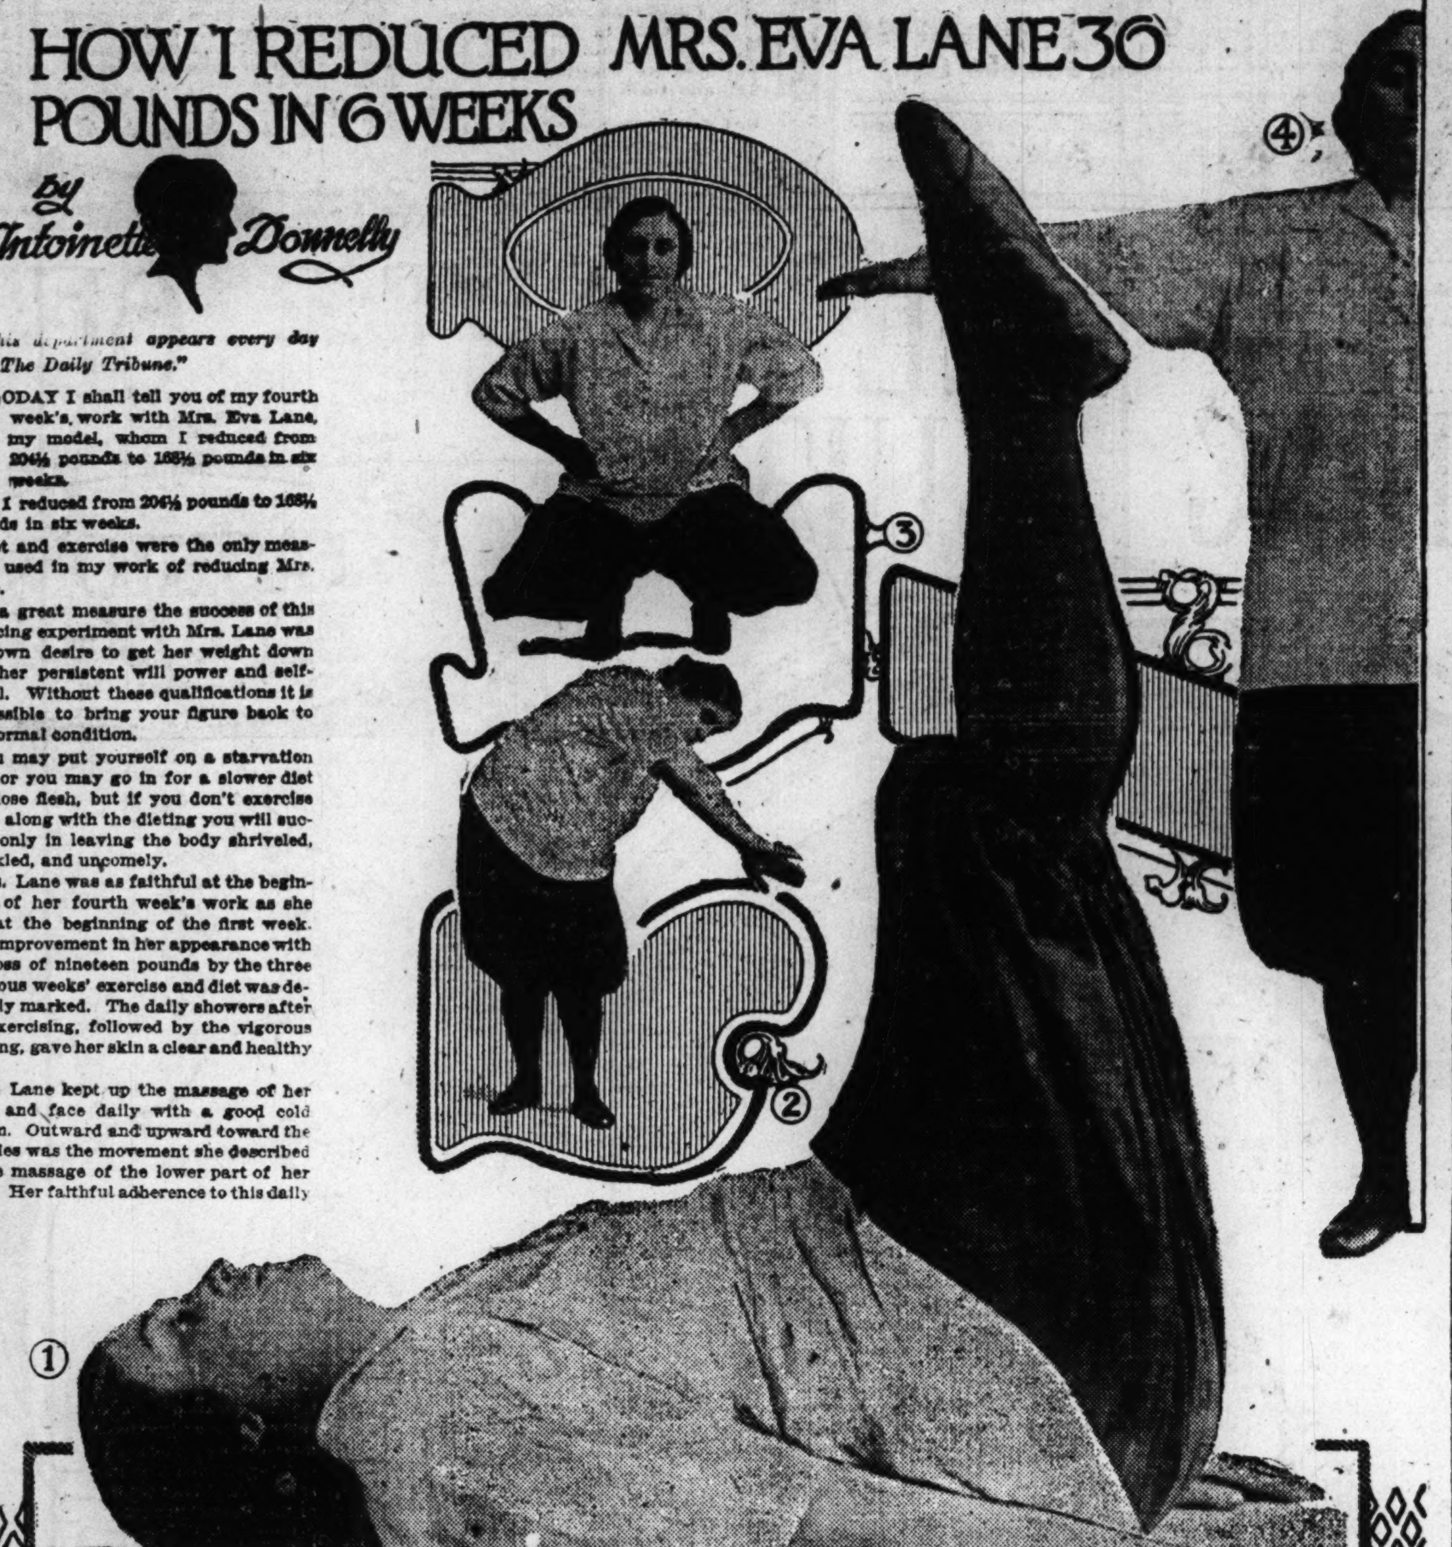
Diet and exercise were the only measures used in my work of reducing Mrs. Lane.

In a great measure the success of this reducing experiment with Mrs. Lane was her own desire to get her weight down and her persistent will power and self-denial. Without these qualifications it is impossible to bring your figure back to its normal condition.

You may put yourself on a starvation diet, or you may go in for a slower diet and lose flesh, but if you don't exercise daily along with the dieting you will succeed only in leaving the body shriveled, wrinkled, and uncomely.

Mrs. Lane was as faithful at the beginning of her fourth week's work as she was at the beginning of the first week. The improvement in her appearance with the loss of nineteen pounds by the three previous weeks' exercise and diet was decidedly marked. The daily showers after the exercising, followed by the vigorous rubbing, gave her skin a clear and healthy glow.

Mrs. Lane kept up the massage of her neck and face daily with a good cold cream. Outward and upward toward the temples was the movement she described in the massage of the lower part of her face. Her faithful adherence to this daily massaging kept the muscles of her face from sagging. And this is an important feature of reducing which you cannot afford to overlook. Mrs. Lane followed the massage of both face and neck with a rubbing over of either camphorated ice or plain ice to contract the pores, make firm the skin, and prevent the unsightly "wattles," which are almost sure to result under the chin if precaution is not taken to prevent them.



During the fourth week my model succeeded in working off five pounds, making a total of twenty-four pounds at the end of the fourth week.

But for a single lapse from her almost heroic capacity for self-denial, Mrs. Lane would have been able to show a loss of six pounds for this fourth week. Her love of chocolates was her undoing. On the third day of the week when I weighed her she showed a gain of a pound over the previous day's weight record. On cross examination I found she had succumbed to the lures and wiles of a box of chocolates and bonbons a friend had sent her "to tease her."

Face to face with this indisputable evidence of the close affinity between sweets and fat Mrs. Lane decided "it was all off between her and chocolates."

Beer, wine, or alcohol in any form whatever was strictly taboo in the period of reduction of Mrs. Lane. The natural effect of taking alcohol is to make the body obese. It robs the tissues of oxygen which they would otherwise use for combustion. Waste matters cannot be got rid of, consequently, and the body naturally takes on weight. On abstaining from alcohol the superfluous tissue is burned away and the weight of the body reduced and a look and a feeling of youth is recovered.

During the fourth week of Mrs. Lane's work the importance of exercises for the trunk were felt as keenly as in the beginning of my experiment with her. On account of the loss of weight on waist and hips and to keep the vital organs within in good working condition it was necessary to keep the muscles of that region constantly exercised to insure strength and firmness.

The four exercises illustrated on this page are the new exercises I gave Mrs. Lane at the beginning of her fourth week.

Exercise 1. This is a continuation really of the single leg raising movement I described last week; the difference is that both legs are raised together instead of singly. Stretched flat on the floor, with crown of head and heels resting on the floor, knees stiff and toes stretched to utmost point, slowly raise both legs as high as possible, as in illustration; then let them back to the floor slowly again while you count eight, always keeping knees stiff and toes stretched. Begin with five times. Rest a few minutes and do five times again. Then gradually increase the number of times daily. This reduces thighs, abdomen, ankles, and waist.

Exercise 2. This side body bending exercise reduces waist, side, bust, and the fat under the arms most effectively. Stand erect with knees stiffened and arms raised high over head. By bending the body at the waist only try to touch the tips of your fingers to the floor on the opposite side to the hand you use. Alternate with the other hand. Begin with five times each and increase to fifty or seventy-five.

Exercise 3. This squatting reduces abdomen, thighs, calves, and ankles. Stand erect with feel apart, hands resting on hips. Rise upon the toes, then sink the body to the floor, bending the knees sharply until the thighs and legs are doubled upon each other and the weight of the entire body is supported by the toes. The trunk must be maintained perfectly erect throughout the movement. Return to original position. Repeat five times to start with, gradually increasing to thirty or forty.

Exercise 4. This is a deep breathing exercise. With hands at sides and body erect, begin to inhale a long, deep breath, slowly raising both hands as you inhale. Raise hands as high as you can. Then lower them back to original position, slowly exhaling as you lower them. Repeat ten times at first, increasing gradually to 100 times.

Besides the above exercises, Mrs. Lane repeated every day the twelve exercises already given her and described in my three previous articles. The squatting exercise was a little difficult for her the first day, but before the end of the week by her persistent effort she could do it fifty times with ease. The side body bending exercise described above, too, she found a bit hard at first, but by sticking to it she could touch the tips of her fingers to the floor the fourth day of the week.

Mrs. Lane didn't slump on her walks either during the fourth week. They varied between three, four, and five miles a day.

Mrs. Lane's own words about the value of her reducing exercises carry an excellent conviction. 'I have to be grateful for one thing more than anything else," she said. "I have learned how to breathe properly. When I walk I breathe, and I believe that is why I feel so well." Her attention to breathing certainly had much to do with her healthy and happy condition, too.

As on previous weeks, I changed Mrs. Lane's diet during the fourth week. It follows:

7:30 a. m.—One-half grapefruit, without sugar; soft boiled egg, no butter; small dry roll or piece of toast; coffee, without cream or sugar.

10 a. m.—Glass of lemonade, without sugar.

1 p. m.—Small bowl clear broth, and all she wanted of lettuce or cucumbers, prepared without oil or cream dressing or celery.

7 p. m.—Three ounces of steak, or chicken, or roast beef, or fish; big helping of sprouts or onions, asparagus or string beans, prepared without butter or cream or oils; coffee, without sugar or cream.

Replies to Beauty Seekers.

EMORY: Annoying facial eruptions often come from indigestion and eating rich, spicy foods and pastry. Acne may be cause by carelessness in looking after the skin, lack of cleanliness, faults in exercise and diet, and blackheads. I have a treatment for pimples and blackheads which I shall be glad to send to you if you wish and will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

QUESTIONER: Pyorrhea, or "Rigg's disease" as it is most generally known, is often due to neglect of mouth hygiene. A weak solution of fluid extract of ipecac, two drops in a half glass of water, used as a mouth wash before retiring, will act as a preventive, and perhaps as a cure in the earliest stages of this trouble. I shall be glad to send you my instructions on mouth hygiene if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

BARBARA: A red nose is often caused from cold feet. Sometimes it is a sign of bad circulation or of impure blood. For both conditions regular exercise in the open air and attention to diet will be beneficial.

AMBITIOUS—These are the swimming movements for the breast stroke: Stand with your feet about eighteen inches apart, with the right foot advanced and the right leg straight; the weight is thrown on the left leg, and the arms bent at right angles, ready for the beginning of the stroke. Shoot the arms directly forward, incline the whole body forward, straighten the left leg, and throw the weight on the right, which should be bent. Ten sweep the hands and arms outward in a horizontal plane until the arms, trunk, and legs are brought into the original position. Then take the same exercises, reversing the positions of the right and left legs. In taking these exercises the arms, body, and legs must work simultaneously. Special stress must be placed on the alternate flexion and extension of the front and rear leg and the inclination of the body forward with each stroke.

MISS P. W.: When the pores are clogged with secretions of fat and dust they become enlarged and coarse. This is a simple lotion for correcting enlarged pores: Rose water, six ounces; elder flower water, two ounces; simple tincture of benzoin, one-half ounce; tannic acid, ten grains: First scrub your face in hot water and soap, rinse off with warm water, then apply cold cream. Apply the lotion daily with a piece of absorbent cotton.

* *

HELENE: The only permanent cure for a red and inflamed nose is to improve your general health. It may be caused from indigestion, poor circulation, or tight wearing apparel. The condition of the nose depends upon the digestive organs and the general health. Be careful of your diet, get lots of fresh air and exercise, and do not allow yourself to become constipated.

* *

MINNIE: Taking a long walk before retiring has a tendency to promote sleep. This is also a simple exercise you can practice after getting into bed: Lie flat on your back without a pillow, feet uncrossed and arms relaxed. Breathe in while you count six; exhale, counting six, and then rest, breathing naturally for the same length of time. Continue the exercise until you feel sleepy. The rhythmic, steady inhalation and exhalation have a quieting effect upon the nerves.

Real Love Stories

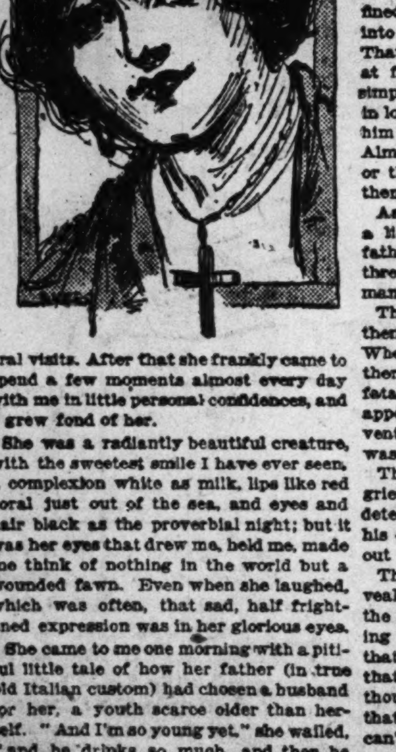
Disappeared.

BEFORE my marriage seven years ago I was employed in one of the art studios of Chicago. An Italian girl of 16 from the "giny" district eight or ten blocks away would frequently come into our little workshop. First it was a tiny gold frame she wanted for her first communion photograph, then it was an enlargement of the same picture, which necessitated several visits. After that she frankly came to spend a few moments almost every day with me in little personal confidences, and I grew fond of her.



She was a radiantly beautiful creature, with the sweetest smile I have ever seen, a complexion white as milk, lips like red coral just out of the sea, and eyes and hair black as the proverbial night; but it was her eyes that drew me, held me, made me think of nothing in the world but a wounded fawn. Even when she laughed, which was often, that sad, half frightened expression was in her glorious eyes.

She came to me one morning with a pitiful little tale of how her father (in true old Italian custom) had choseen a husband for her, a youth scarce older than herself. "And I'm so young yet," she wailed, "and he drinks so much, and then he abuses his mother awful, and he would do the same to me if I marry him; but he is rich, very rich, and pater says I must."

Now, this girl, although her parents were both foreign born, was fairly well educated and had acquired the American girl's standard. Naturally her whole nature revolted at the mere thought of such a union, and could any one blame her? The American girl is free to choose; the average Italian girl forced into her marriage, loveless, sometimes in poverty, and her big brood of children to care for, is old at 25. It seemed such a pity, such a useless, foolish custom, and this girl was so radiantly beautiful, so glorious, so fond of bright, happy things, so still a child.

"I think I'll go into a convent," she said to me for the hundredth time. She had often confided to me that she "wanted to be a sister."

To make complications worse, about this time a young business salesman, a refined, attractive young American, coming into our studio one day, saw her there. That was the most genuine case of love at first sight I have ever seen; he was simply infatuated with her beauty, steeped in love with her gentleness, and she loved him as whole-heartedly as he loved her. Almost every day they met in the studio or the little park. There was no keeping them apart until—

As she was only 16 they could not secure a license. The young man went to her father and was bodily kicked out with threats. Wasn't she engaged to a rich man of her own nationality and creed?

The lover persisted in seeing her. And then suddenly the girl disappeared. Whether she was spirited away, whether there was a forced marriage, whether her fatal beauty was the means of her disappearance, or whether she entered a convent to escape her father's persecution was never known.

The young salesman, heartbroken and grieving, searched everywhere for her; a detective was employed, the aid of friends, his own tireless search, everything without success.

This man's great unselfish love was revealed to me one day about a year after the girl's disappearance when, in speaking of her, he said: "It isn't so much that I have lost her, though heaven knows that is enough to bear; but it is the thought of what she may be enduring, that she needs me and I can't go to her, can't help her—that thought kills," and I, awed in the presence of such love, could only sympathize in silence.

Why is it that the few love stories we notice are always connected with great sorrow or tragedy? Is it that we are too busy to see the calm, deep love of a busy housewife or a man struggling for daily bread with competition on every side? Perhaps we are blind unless there is a tragedy connected, or else pass it by as too uninteresting. Which is it? R. G.

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

The Boss at His Worst.

ASK a group of business girls what they think of the employer, judging from the bosses they have known, and the consensus of opinion is almost sure to be that he's a pretty fine specimen of the species male. That is, taking him generally. Speaking individually we find an employer here and there who rises above the average, and to whom is applied only the superlatives of our complimentary adjectives. On the other hand, there is the grouch whom we meet up with every once in a while in our business ventures. He does his best to make life miserable for the working girl, but she can thank providence that chronic grouches are few and far between.

The subject of the letter quoted below may be somewhat exaggerated. If not, it is a sample of the grouchy employer at his worst:

"Dear Miss King: I have been forced to give up my position and am now going through the agony of looking for another.

"The man I have been working for up to a week ago is the worst old crank it has ever been my lot to meet. I worked for him just six months, and a long six months they seemed to me, for he certainly made my life miserable during that time.

"He insisted on keeping an electric fan going constantly. It was right at my back, and whenever I moved it away he would change it back to its original position. I tried moving my desk, but he said he wanted my desk to remain where he had placed it. For four days I was at home sick, and when I explained to the doctor about the fan he told me to tell my employer that my desk would have to be placed so the current would not strike me. I told him, but this had absolutely no effect, and when pay day came I was docked for the days I was out.

"This is only one of the many annoyances that I had to put up with. There was another girl in the office and his manner was as bad to her. I was his stenographer and he was always giving me unpleasant commissions to do for him personally. Why, he even had me take his clothes to the tailor's to be repaired! To perform errands like this was humiliating enough, but I think I wouldn't have minded doing them if he acted in a fairly decent manner to the other girl and myself. He was a born grouch. He snapped at us from morning until it was time for us to go home.

"I expect to start in another position in a few days, but I am really more worried about the unfortunate girl who takes my place than I am about my own venture. There may be other grouchy employers, but I hope I have the good luck to escape them.

"It has been a relief to write to you. I wanted to get this off my chest.

"A. R. M."

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING-HAND

by MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"I KNOW that people all over the state read your interesting Corner, so do you think that a few of them would be willing to exchange view postcards with me, a girl of 16? I could send them all the views of this vicinity they would care for. I have been gathering them for some time and think they make an interesting collection. Don't you think so?

"SWEET SIXTEEN."

The number of those interested in postcards seems to be unfailing and I have no doubt a prompt response will come to this offer of exchange. When writing for the address please inclose postage stamp for reply.

Small Boy Wants Violin.

"I come to ask if you know of some one with a violin to give away. I have a boy 5 years old who has a talent for music and has always wanted a violin. We have never felt as if we were able to buy one for him. I would love to have a Bible for myself with both the Old and the New Testament in it and if possible with the plain figures instead of the Roman letters, as I do not know all of the latter. If you will send me the address of M. H. I will gladly send her some quilt pieces, and also the name and address of S. H., as I have a few baby clothes I could spare her, having had two children myself. I would gladly pay express charges on the violin and the Bible. M. K."

The demand for violins is much larger than the supply and I cannot hold out many hopes to this correspondent of securing the instrument she wishes for her boy, although I hope the Bible she desires may be sent to her. I will gladly send her address to any one writing for it and inclosing stamp for reply. Mrs. M. H. and S. H.'s needs are already supplied. Does some one else wish the articles offered?

Would Do Something to Help.

"I am a little girl 11 years old and I read the Corner regularly. I wish I could do something to help. Will you pleased send me the name and address of some little girl of about my age to whom I could write? G. C."

I do not know of a little girl of the age requested who desires correspondents, but I am sure that the appearance of this note will call forth letters from other small girls or from the mothers of such would-be correspondents. I will send G. C.'s address on application.

Months of Helplessness Ahead.

"I was thrown out of a wagon last fall and hurt badly. I live on a farm. For three months I have not been able to walk, and I see many more months of helplessness ahead of me. But I am able to do many things with my hands, and one is to piece quilts. Therefore I wish you would send my address to B. A. B. for cotton and silk pieces. The time seems long to be shut in after living most of my life out of doors. I will gladly pay postage on the pieces. C. H. K."

I am sorry the pieces offered by B. A. B. have all been given away elsewhere. Has not some other Cornerite pieces to contribute to this shut-in? I shall be glad to send her address on receipt of request accompanied by stamp.

Will Read to an Invalid.

"I would like to offer my services to some invalid, shut-in, or person of defective eyesight. My own eyesight is perfect and I am fond of reading aloud, to say nothing of my having more time on my hands than I know what to do with. So if I can be of comfort and cheer to some one less fortunate than myself I would be glad to offer my services entirely gratis and at the convenience of the person who wishes them. MISS J. R."

This is a friendly offer and I hope there may be some one who would like to get the benefit of it. I have the address of J. R. and hope it may be applied for.

In Need of a Typewriter.

"I think the Helping Hand is a friendly hand indeed to persons like myself who are in need. I have wanted a typewriter for eight years, but I cannot afford to buy one, no matter how great my need of it. Do you suppose one of your kind readers has such a machine that is no longer in use? I could put a typewriter to good use in our little world and would try hard to return the favor in any way I could. I am also willing to pay express charges. I would like much to get the words of an old song called 'The Fellow That Looks Like Me.' BEATRICE B."

Like violins, typewriters are constantly in demand, and I fear there will not be a favorable reply to this request. The inquiry about the song is more likely to be answered, and I will give the name and address of the correspondent to any one writing for it.

Anything for a Flower Garden.

"Last fall I visited in the country and a woman gave me some flower seeds. I planted them and they are all coming up. I would like to make a garden for my mamma and I wish some one would be so very kind as to send me some more seeds or slips or plants, or anything that would help to make a nice flower garden. I would like them soon, so that I could start a garden. R. C."

Who will answer this plea and send the articles of gardening material requested?

ECZEMA ON BABY'S HEAD AND FACE

Started With Little Pimples, Spread All Over Her Face, Head and Neck and Got Real Sore.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My little daughter had a bad case of eczema on her head and face when she was five months old. She took it with just a few little red pimples, and it started from that and spread all over her face, head and neck. They got real sore and she would scratch as they would itch her so much. She was terribly cross and fretful.

"While it lasted, her face was disfigured. She could not sleep or rest until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I started with just a free sample and it relieved her so I purchased more and about two months after, she was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Alice Wilbarger, R. F. D. 4, Alliance, Ohio, July 26, 1915.

One of the many enthusiastic users writes: "I received the trial bottle of Absorbine, Jr., all right and at that time was unable to walk without a cane, just around the house. I used it freely and inside of two days could walk without limping, something I had not done in two months. I went to the drug store and procured a $1.00 bottle and today can walk as good as ever. I'll never be without it. I am recommending it to everyone I can, for I am a living witness."

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are, Emotional.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"NEVER say die" might be suggested as an appropriate motto for most of you Taurus people, for you are courageous even when you know things are going against you. While you may utter a prayer for help you keep right on fighting, and, thanks to your powers of endurance, you last well. Always ready in an emergency you are apt to overtax these great powers. Better go slower.

Your circle of friends will be small but choice. And this circle may change every now and then, for unfortunately your qualities do not always wear. Literary ability, combined with a bitterness of speech that verges on the sarcastic, makes your pen a force for good or evil, as you choose to direct it. Judiciously employed, it is a powerful battering ram for the demolition of injustice and a weapon against evil in high places. Marie Corelli, who was born on May 1, possesses this gift in a marked degree.

The "skeleton in your closet" is omnipresent, not that you tell what it is, but you just love to throw a veil of mystery about your life. At times your intuitive powers are almost uncanny, for it seems as if nothing can be hidden from you. You almost seem to feel the minds of other people and to know their thoughts. And along with this clairvoyant gift is an unusual imagination. Needless to say, this combination often brings remarkable tales to light, some of which do not savor of the truth.

Living as you do, in the realm of emotions, your treatment of a person depends upon your own mood. You are kind when your sympathies are aroused, but you are easily irritated by opposition, and under excitement are quite unmanageable. You try to carry everything through with a rush, with a sort of fiery determination. This makes you pugnacious, and as a result you are always getting into a fight.

You Taurus folk are all lovers of science, literary pursuits, and are in its various branches. Although you are a lover of the beautiful, yet you do not find it easy to get within reach of your ideals. Just so, you may love your home but not be perfectly happy in it. You don't always remember that what disturbs you may disturb others.

Besides the varied lines of interest just mentioned you may prove a success as a banker, broker, secretary, soldier, actor, or decorator.

Persistency, sometimes carried to the point of audacity, will get you there. For you have an eye to your own interests, which of course is true of any shrewd man. You are capable and precise, and you lay your plans well. Why shouldn't you have a good opinion of yourself?

You are fond of the theater and all sorts of outdoor sports and public gatherings. You know how not only to decorate yourself effectively but you can array others so as to bring out their good points and hide their defects.

Money with you is only a means to an end and you give of it freely as long as it lasts. But shabbiness is an eyesore to you, and so you will never skimp yourself in the matter of clothes. In just this one respect you are too apt to be guided by externalities and appearances.

A great deal of your success in life depends upon your education and your vigorous brain is capable of almost endless labors and concentration.

Being the head sign of the earth, you will be congenial with those born in Capricornus, Dec. 23-Jan. 20. Should you marry a Libra person, Sept. 24-Oct. 23, there will be congeniality on a more intellectual basis. Scorpio, Oct. 24-Nov. 22, being your exact opposite in the zodiac, would also make a happy union. But in any of these unions the chances of a Taurus person's happiness depend greatly upon himself.

Your most fortunate times in the year are the two weeks beginning Sept. 5 and Jan. 11; your colors, azure, red, and yellow; birthstones, agate and emerald.

What They All Say.

"Dear Miss Blake: I met a young man going to work almost every day. About a month ago he asked me to go out with him, and I did. I went to a show with him, and there he told me he was married.

"I was shocked to hear that, and had a quarrel with him and was going to leave the show, but he would not let me. He told me that he did not live happily with his wife, but I did not believe him, because that's what they all say.

"So I had nothing to do with him till this week. He came to the place I work and told me he did not live with his wife and was suing her for divorce. Now Miss Blake, do you think it will be right for me to go out with him after he is separated from his wife? I kind of like him. Thanking you in advance, B."

"That's what they all say," is right, Blue Eyes; be glad you are wise to this type. Make him show you the divorce papers before you have another thing to do with him.

A Rich Girl Took Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a poor working girl, 19 years old. I have been keeping company with a boy 20 years, off and on for four years. I always liked him and I know he has always loved me.

"But a rich girl stepped in and bested my time. She always has parties and a good time. Now how am I going to get S. J. back? I was so mad that when he spoke to me on the street I refused to speak to him, but now I am sorry.

"I don't suppose he would go with me anyhow, as long as the rich girl would have his company. Now what can I do to get him back? I am just crazy about him. There are plenty of other boys who would like to go with me, but I don't care for them. I skate, swim, and dance and I am good looking.

"I know this rich girl does not love him. I just can't drop him. At what age should a girl get married? All girls around here my age are married. B."

You just hold your head high and accept all the other invitations you receive from the right sort of fellows. Speak to the wavering one when you meet him; try not to let him know how you feel about his actions. I am quite sure you will win out if you use the right tactics, but they won't be a tearstained face, pale cheeks, heart breaking sighs; no, no. And as for marrying, don't you get the idea because your town's beauties are marrying so young, that you should follow suit. Don't think of doing so before you are of age.

More Points on Etiquette.

"Dear Miss Blake: In entering a theater with a man should a woman follow immediately behind the usher or allow the man to do so as in a restaurant? In ordering a light lunch where one has but one main article of food, a drink and a dessert, for instance, chicken a la king coffee, and ice cream or pastry, should they all be ordered at once or the dessert or dessert and coffee after finishing the other? I."

In any public place where there are ushers, the woman precedes her escort. As for the lunch, it all depends upon the memory of the waiter; if he seems mentally inclined to take the entire order at once, give it, but if he says, "I'll get the dessert later," better take him at his word and wait. There's no rule about this matter, so rest assured on that point.

He Has Competition.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man, 20 years of age, of good character, and fairly good looking. While on a recent trip in the west I became acquainted with a young lady of about the same age who has since become very dear to me.

"I know that this is genuine love, and have reason to believe that my love is returned. We have been corresponding since we parted. It will not be possible for me to see her again for several months, nor for me to marry for about two years. The young lady is aware of this. Here is the problem:

"Her father has a son-in-law picked out for himself whom the young lady doesn't approve of, and, needless to say, father isn't overly in love with me. Shall I declare my love to the young lady now, or wait? Is it necessary to give her an engagement ring?

"The reason I ask this is that the young lady is living at home and it might cause friction with her parents. I know that you will give me your best advice, and I thank you in advance. F. J. W."

If the father doesn't insist too strenuously upon the fair maiden marrying the other fellow I think you had better keep the engagement as quiet as possible until you are all ready to marry her. This takes it for granted that you will be able to obtain her consent, of which there seems to be no doubt.

She Gets So Lonesome.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am again coming to you for help. Although the pupils in my class give parties it seems as if there is very little, if any, place for the young people to go, and I get so lonesome sometimes.

"If I only knew some one else that is lonesome, too, perhaps I could occasionally write them a letter. I could write about my school work, as I am a girl going to high school, and perhaps I could exchange different things.

"I would prefer to write to some one about 16 or 18, and some one who is also lonesome. If any one thinks this worthy of attention please write to M. W."

Are you sure, M. W., that there isn't some lonesome body right around the corner from your house? One that you could see every once in a while, and could really know, one who would be more tangible than some far away, unknown correspondent. Personally, I don't approve of girls of your age getting the idea into their heads that to find sunshine one must look at a distance. It's all right to have correspondents, but don't you think it would be more satisfactory if they were known to you personally? I'm sorry for you, but I can't help feeling that you're not half so badly off as you think. With class parties and young people to know, you ought to be able to make your good times without places to go. Think it all over and write me again.

Religions Differ.

"Dear Miss Blake: A young lady and myself have kept company for about one year and love each other dearly. We were planning for our wedding. But there is one thing—our religions differ, to which both of our parents object.

"She tells me she cannot live without me. I, too, am sure that I could not live without her. She does not want to do anything against her mother's wishes, but said if we must part she would leave and never be heard from again.

"And now tell me, should she ruin both of our lives by leaving, or go against her mother's wishes, and marry me? "A. G. B."

As I have said many times before, I don't feel that matters of religion ought to be settled by an outsider. You must work out the solution to this difficult problem yourselves. Talk it over with the parents on both sides; try to come to some amicable decision. I'm sorry, but this is all I feel I can say on the matter.

Adored by Three.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are three young ladies, aged 20, 22, and 25, respectively. There is a young gentleman in the town where we spend our winters with whom we are all in love.

"He has been devoted to us, but has been showing some attention to a young, frivolous high school girl. We will soon leave for our summer home, and wish to know if it would be correct for us to ask him to correspond and visit with us.

"Please answer this as soon as convenient and oblige.

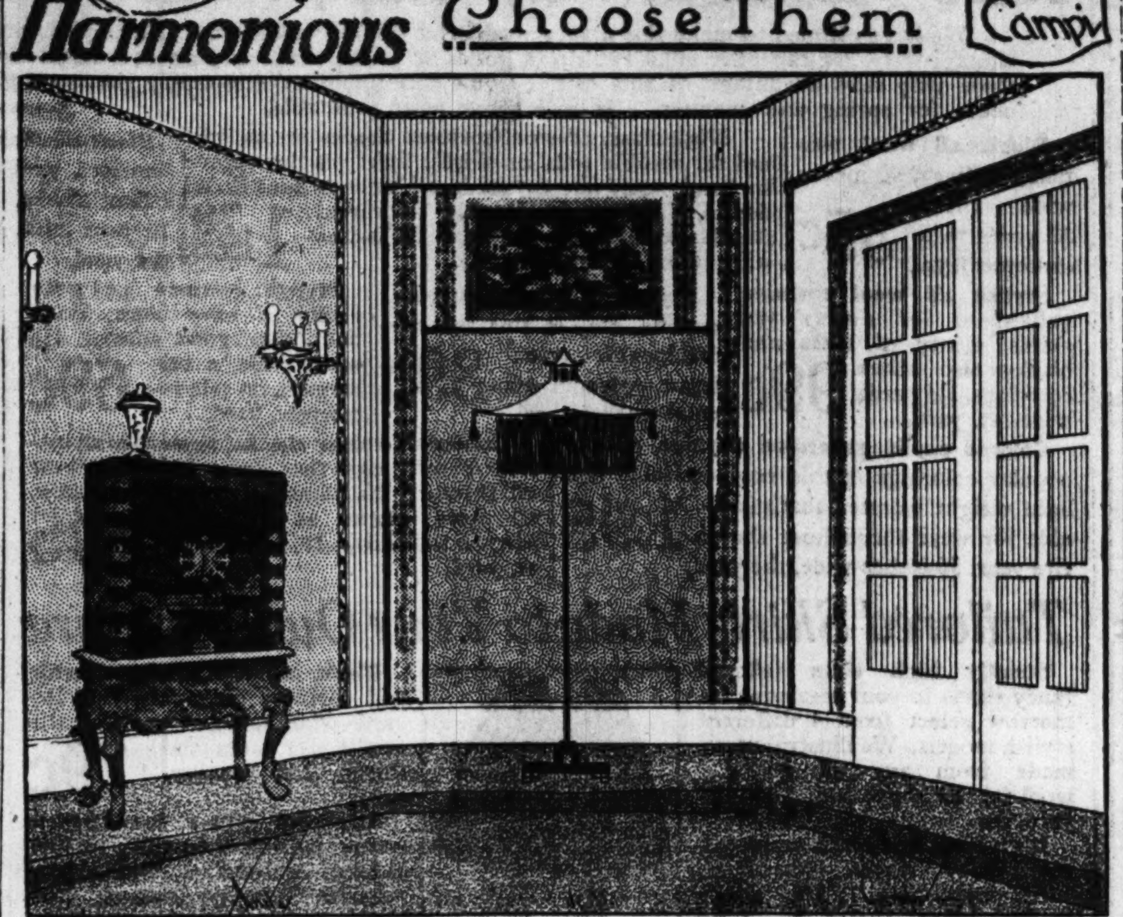
"THE THREE CHUMS."

In numbers there is strength, so why be so fearful of this 'young, frivolous high school girl?' Surely if the man in demand has enough time and tact to correspond with all three of you and keep peace he deserves a medal. He probably hesitates to ask any one of you to write, so that if you approach him and ask to do so in chorus I imagine it will be a great relief to him. Go ahead and let me know if the frivolous one succeeds in "cutting you all out."

The Home Harmonious

Domestic Rugs, and How to Choose Them

Anita de Campi



Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

THE preference shown by decorators lately for solid colored and two-tone floor coverings has given a wonderful impetus to our industry of domestic rug weaving, so that a decided improvement is noticeable in our products, in style, texture, color, and workmanship.

The best domestic rugs are those that do not attempt intricate design. Rugs of some good body color, with a border self-colored in a deeper shade, have been the best selling sort ever since the popularity of chintz and cretonne was assured. Nothing, of course, sets off figured draperies as well as plain side walls and rugs. When they are kept neutral much latitude is allowed in the choice of upholstery fabrics, which may also be figured.

Good oriental rugs, hand made as they are, with inimitable skill, are incomparable in beauty; but our plain machine made rugs are quite as suitable to the simple surroundings of the average home, and certainly more within the scope of the average pocketbook. Let us accept them for what they are—good, well wearing, practical floor coverings—and let us not ruin their dignified simplicity by making them masquerade as orientals. Imitation oriental rugs are a delusion and a snare.

It is a pretty good idea to acquire a little understanding of the various kinds of domestic rugs before going to the shops to select one. Among the rugs with wool pile are the Axminster body Brussels, Wilton, Smyrna, velvet, and tapestry Brussels, and the flat rugs are the ingrain, rag carpet, fiber, flax, grass, and Terry.

The flat rugs are all of the cheapest variety, though some of them are in excellent taste in their proper places. Some of the new flax rugs are really admirable and are surprisingly inexpensive. They come in various sizes, so that adjoining large and small rooms may have rugs to match. The gray grounds with streaky borders in broken Roman stripes are especially good.

It is conceded that one large rug makes a room look smaller than several small rugs, yet the large ones are distinctly in higher favor.

Of the domestic rugs with pile, the body Brussels represents the "best money's worth." It wears the longest, probably on account of the loops being uncut, and is the easiest to take care of. It is satisfactory if the buyer can content herself with its blatantly self-assertive machine made air.

Wiltons are nothing more nor less than heavy Brussels with the loops cut. This cutting of the loops gives them a velvety look. They catch the dust more than the Brussels do, and so require more care, but they are more pleasing to the eye. In regard to their selling, more people buy Wiltons than any other kind of domestic rugs.

Tapestry brussels is a clever cheap imitation of body Brussels; the printing that forms the pattern is done before weaving.

Chenille rugs are having a tremendous run. Chenille Axminsters are now made in pleasing and appropriate designs. They are on the market in abundance in solid colors and two-toned effects, and at little additional price over the regular shop terms they can be made to order in any desired pattern. There is no better domestic rug than the chenille Axminster.

In the illustration a chenille Axminster has been made to order conforming in shape to the form of the floor. It is of old gold with a self-colored deeper border. The walls of the room are of dull jade green. The lamp shade is of cloth of gold on an ebony standard. Touches of black, deep red, mulberry, and blue are found in the wall border. The furniture is lacquered, while a vase enameled in real coral color gives a fearless bid for praise from the cabinet top.

Chenille Axminsters are made without seams. They are to be had in almost any solid or two toned color, and in several thicknesses that influence the price. They range from three-eighths of an inch thick to seven-eighths of an inch and can be made in any size, with straight or curved edges, permitting perfect harmony between all parts of their environment.

While the Wilton rugs are woven in breadths and sewn together the joinings are hardly visible. For general use the Wilton deserves its popularity. It comes in an unlimited variety of patterns and prices to meet an unlimited variety of taste and means. The domestic French Wiltons are delicate in tone and fine in weave.

If the number of sales means the stamp of approval, oriental patterns in American French Wiltons are undeniably successful.

Art squares, though the name is detestable, are not as bad as they sound. They are flat cloth without pile and seamless and double faced. They are made of wool and a 9x12 sells at an absurdly low figure. They are light in weight and apt to rumple, but, on the other hand, they are easily taken out and beaten.

The fact of a rug being the same on both sides does not, as is often misrepresented, give it longer life, for the under part, being ground against the floor, wears out quite as fast as the face. It is true, however, that spots on one side frequently may not penetrate to the other, and a double faced rug that is stained, even indelibly, may be reversed to advantage, where a single faced rug in the same condition would be hopeless.

Smyrnas are also double faced and can be had at various prices, but they are like the little girl with the curl—those that are "good are very, very good, and those that are bad are"—well, horrid isn't a word for them.

Reversible rag rugs, unaffected and worthy of respect, are low priced. They are the best for children's rooms, and are good in colonial bedrooms.

Chicago can boast of a unique departure that has won recognition in the rug industry, one of those well balanced niceties of trade where the demand just equals the supply, and that is the rug weaving department of Hull house, where new rags are woven into rugs.

The most expert weaver in this department is a blind girl who chooses her colors through the exquisite sense of touch in her supersensitive fingers. When the whole product of the department is on display it is extraordinary how many times this unusual girl's work is given the preference by judges who are unbiased, being unacquainted with the remarkable circumstances.

In selecting domestic rugs a thing to be avoided is a great number of colors. The cheaper the American rug is, ordinarily, the more replete with colors it becomes. Frightful patterns and fierce color discords are too often the ugly masks of imperfect weave and material.

Regarding choice of color, a rug to be most effective should have its prevailing tints not match the walls but contrast with them. This can hardly be reiterated too often because so few men and women, even among professional decorators, realize the full value of contrast in a color scheme. It should also be deeper in tone than the wall.

As to the placing on the floor, the rules of symmetry and balance may not be ignored. The rugs should follow the structural lines of the rooms. They should not be thrown down haphazard in a manner familiarly known as "cat-a cornered," but the line boundaries of the rugs should be in parallel conformity to the lines of the floor.

Answers to Inquiries.

E. W.: You might cover your old fashioned wash stand with a piece of chintz or cretonne cut to fit, and have a piece of glass over this. It need not be plate glass, but ordinary window glass, which is inexpensive, and any glazier can cut it to measure. Bind the edges with a little passepartout. A long narrow box painted with enamel paint and having a fitted cushion strapped to its top makes an acceptable combination window seat and storing box. Either calico, gingham, or chambray can be used in children's rooms effectively in place of more expensive material. Seersucker is another suitable material; it is pretty for both casement curtains and bedspreads. Crochet one or two rugs made of new rags for the small boy's room.

E. M.: Oriental rugs certainly go well with solid walnut furniture, particularly those in which shades of gray and blue predominate. Sometimes walnut is oiled and left unpolished, but decorative panels of oystered walnut are usually finished with a fine polish. Why not try Wilton velvet carpeting in neutral tones in your bedroom? Keep to dull blue and old gold in your color scheme, and you cannot go far wrong.

* *

J. R.: Use dull blue for your dining room, pale mauve for your bedroom, blue green for your living room, white muslin for your bathroom curtains, and the same for the kitchen. I do not understand your question. "What kind of curtains for windows on back porch for child's room?" Is it an inclosed porch? For privacy and neatness you might use unbleached muslin and have two sets and change them weekly.

* *

M. S.: In the small rooms that you want to rent out as living and bed rooms for young working girls, why not use big folding bed chairs? These are the width of the average single bed, so that they are comfortable at night and more attractive and space saving in the daytime than the couches you speak of. The colors you have selected are good, but are they not rather delicate for the hard use they will probably get? Furniture enameled in dark colors, such as maroon, royal blue, van dyke brown, moss green, etc., is lovely when ornamented with small, pretty multicolored motifs, such as the Bavarian peasants love to use, and is fetching with chintz curtains.

L. E. F. N.: Why do you not have your rug that is now green "with sort of pinkish roses in bunches" dyed a deep gray? Finish your side walls in a pale gray. The gray of your stationery is just exactly right. There is on the market a beautiful chintz printed in gray and white in Adam design. That would be lovely with your great-grandmother's colonial furniture. The whole effect would be restrained and exquisite. Use in this room lamp shades of apricot pink and have on the wall an old fashioned sampler simple framed. This you can do yourself on canvas of cross stitch.

I. N.: A warm Italian red strongly tinged with tan would be a good choice for your dining room with the light oak. Have the other rooms of this floor done in grayish tan grass cloth. The dining room paper might be a good quality of flock paper.

* *

A. W.: I do not believe that it would cheapen your room to use a good quality of new sunfast fabrics in various weaves. Have your window seats and draperies alike, and I think it would be the most attractive thing you could find for curtains. On account of your stencil border I do not believe I would use figured draperies. I am so glad you tried the instructions I sent you in painting furniture and that it worked out well. Make regular fitted cushions for your seats and let them have square edges.

How to Clean Children's Teeth

THE vital importance of teaching the child how to properly clean his teeth is becoming appreciated more each day. Note carefully the following instructions: First, a small and very soft tooth brush should be used—a tooth powder is preferable to a tooth paste or cream because of its scouring action. Pastes, being twenty-five to fifty per cent soft soap, do not afford the proper base for scouring the teeth. No dentifrice containing drugs such as carbolic acid or chlorate of potash should be used by either children or grown-ups, except under the surveillance of the dentist. The effect of these strong drugs on the tender gum tissues is often the cause of tooth trouble.

The oxygen in CALOX whitens the teeth and destroys harmful bacteria. It is Nature's purifier.

Robert was sent out to look up his small brother, who had been gone nearly all day. When he found him he was dirty, his clothes all torn, but a happy smile shone on his face. Wilbur's birthday came on the 9th of November and he said he would like a little brother for a birthday gift, while his little sister Mabel said she hoped the gift would be a girl. Two days after Wilbur's birthday the father awakened them and told Wilbur his gift had arrived, but was two days late. Both the children ran to see the baby, and when Wilbur noticed the disappointed look on his sister's face because the baby was a boy he said, "Never mind, Mabel; you have a birthday coming in March." After a short time Betty returned to the lobby and her mother reprimanded her for not obeying her.

Fishin'.

Fred liked to go fishing. Mabel couldn't understand where the attraction was in pulling wriggly fish out of the water. However, she was determined to find out, so promised to go with him.

The next Sunday, 4 a. m., found them on their way. Fred was giving some advice he considered necessary to a beginner, and as they reached the place he said: "Above all things, when you think you have a catch, hang on and don't let go."

Everything ready, they started their watchful waiting. Presently there was a tug on Mabel's line. She "hung on" and pulled the line to her with all her strength. It came out of the water suddenly with a small perch on the end. The line, perch and all, flew through the air toward Fred and wound itself tightly around his neck and shoulders.

Mabel was in dismay as to what to do and said: "That's quite a catch. Shall I hang on?"

Fred answered quickly: "Yes, but not at the end of a fish line."

She saw her blunder and blushed, while he laughed. Six weeks later their wedding bells rang. Five years have passed since then, and he says [illegible] the [illegible] he initiated her into the mystery of fishing was the happiest day of his life.

There Wasn't Any Proposal.

My husband says that I proposed to him. I am obliged to admit that I have no recollections of his ever having proposed to me, so maybe I did. This is the way it was: I first met him at a ball. The programs for the evening were printed with the name of the dance and following that the name of the piece of music the orchestra would play.

When the young man whom I afterward married was introduced to me and asked for a dance the only one left on my program was a waltz, and the name of the music for that one was "The Girl I Am Going to Marry." I showed him my program and called his attention to this and asked him if that would be agreeable to him. He said, "Perfectly. I will speak to your father this evening." And he did, jokingly of course, and father, who was a joker and a tease, said it would be all right with him.

Now, while all this was said and done in a spirit of fun, it was really more than half earnest. Neither of us realized it then, but now we know that there were forces, quite unknown to us and, therefore, not taken into our reckoning, which drew and held us irresistably. From that evening the young man I had met at the ball looked upon me as his particular property, and I am sure he saw nothing strange in my giving up all my other escorts for him.

We were married soon after, and I presume we shall never know exactly when the formal proposal was made or by whom, but it doesn't matter. The fact remains that we met and were mutually attracted and by some hook or crook we managed to be married without a proposal sufficiently formal or regular that we can establish any facts concerning it. We are, if possible, more in love with each other after fifteen years of living together than we were when the proposal should have been made. Doesn't that prove that it doesn't matter who did the proposing?

Caught in the Act.

Harry and I had been friends for over a year, but we were not engaged. He called quite frequently, and always left his machine in front of the house.

One evening we were not going out so we sat in a swing at the further corner of the porch. The porch swing was large and Harry had no reason for sitting so close to me, and especialy with his arm about me.

Kate, my chum, lived just around the corner and when she came over she always ran across the lot and walked past this particular corner of the porch. Her friend Joe was over that evening, and both noticed Harry's machine, so they decided to come over for the evening. They came across the yard as usual and when they neared the porch they could hear our voices. Both stood and watched us, but we heard them mutter something.

As Joe came up on the porch he said, "Well, we saw, and you might just as well confess."

I became angry and said, "We did nothing of the sort, and anyway we have a perfect right to do as we like."

Of course, Kate wanted to see the ring, and before I had time to think Harry said, "You can't see that yet, because Mildred can't decide just which one she wants.

No Time to Grow One.

I decided not to shave for a week to see if I really could grow a mustache. When Saturday came around I found I had raised what I thought was quite a growth.

Later, Grace and I were sitting together on the davenport. She finally noticed that I had not shaved my lip and didn't hesitate to let me know she did not like a mustache.

With this I said, "If I ever get married I'll wear a mustache."

"You will have to keep it cut very short," she replied.

I decided to go half way, but was married clean shaven, for I didn't have time to grow a real mustache.

News of "Nemo Week"

THE six days beginning tomorrow will be known as "Nemo Week." During this period we shall demonstrate the various good qualities of a corset well-known for its "self-reducing" help. Third Floor

Every Nemo corset is, in reality, a special value, because the hygienic features, which are priceless, cost you nothing extra.

The great popularity of Nemo corsets is based on two important facts.

First—Nemo corsets represent durability. The workmanship, the material and the conservative lines of fashion, to say nothing of the patented hygienic inventions which are prominent in Nemo corsets, have helped to gain a well deserved popularity.

321 319 318

Second—The hygienic features of Nemo corsets are appreciated by millions of women who consider these inventions indispensable to their health and comfort. These innovations are exclusive features in Nemo corset specialties, and they are really worth more than the price asked for the corsets.

During Nemo Week, our expert corsetieres will gladly give you any advice regarding the Nemo Hygienic corset specialties, advising you just which Nemo corset is best suited to your figure. This fitting service is, of course, absolutely free.

Bought to Read

Not only is The Tribune able to boast a record-breaking circulation; but it is able to prove that The Tribune is bought to read.

Not one cent is paid out by The Tribune to subscription solicitors.

Not one cent is paid out by The Tribune for coupon clipping contests nor for premiums.

The Tribune is not bought because it is throw nin "to boot" with a wall clock or an arm chair or a camera.

The Tribune is not bought in lots of 100 to 10,000 so that coupons may be obtained to swell the "votes" of contestants for prizes.

The Tribune Is Bought To Read

And the character of the reading matter in The Tribune shows that it is bought by people who think as well as read — people who are not satisfied with "boiler plate" nor with a few funny pictures.

The Tribune is bought to read not only the news, but also the advertising. It is bought by people who not only read the advertising, but who are able to respond to it and who do respond to it.

These are some of the reasons why The Tribune is carrying more advertising than the other Chicago morning papers combined.

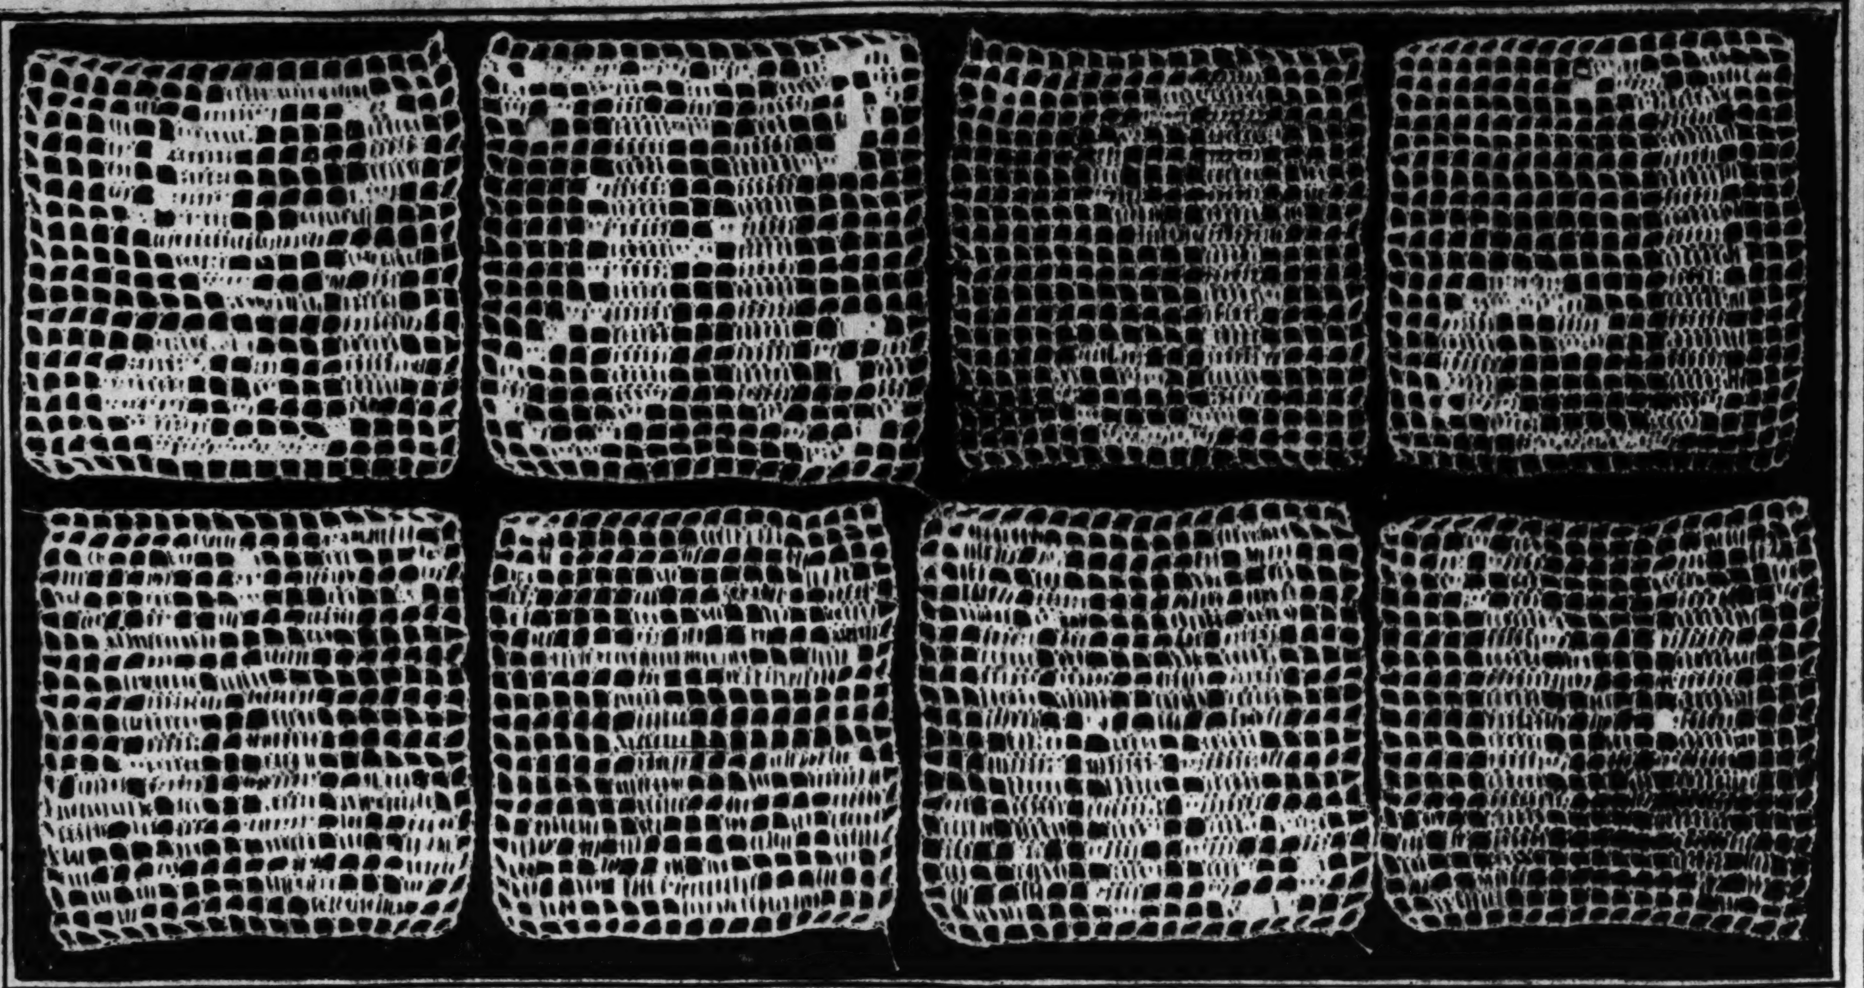
The Second Group of Initials in Filet Stitch.



These initials in filet are easily made and suggest many uses. The gift of a dresser scarf with C. E. H. inserted neatly and a pretty crocheted edge added certainly has a touch of individuality coming direct from giver to receiver.

The size of letter depends upon the number of thread used. No. 30 is always a good number, neither too coarse nor too fine for ordinary uses. The smallest possible square for the letters is a square 19x19 meshes, and it is best to begin and finish with a row of plain meshes. All the letters shown are made 19x21. If desired larger, crocet around the finished letter, adding any finish desired. A few rows of open meshes show the letter distinctly. By following the outline of the letter with a little practice a good initial is sure to follow. Care is necessary to keep the letter well balanced, with an equal number of meshes on each side.

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

Her First Impression.

We had moved to a new town. My husband was a physician, and as he wished to establish a practice, and as we expected to make the place our home, I of course was more than anxious to meet the ladies of the town and make a good impression.

One rainy afternoon I was reading in my favorite armchair when my small daughter came in and begged me to let her comb my hair. Sometimes I let her do this—it pleased her immensely and always soothed me to sleep.

I was awakened after a while by a knock on the door; hastily smoothing my dress, I greeted my first caller in the mayor's wife. I was not much impressed with her. I thought she had rather a strange way of staring at one.

After she had been gone a short while I had occasion to glance in my mirror, and to my sick amazement and horror I saw tucked in one side of my hair an immense, red, artificial rose, and on the other side my daughter had stuck a dilapidated bird from an ancient hat, and to make it all the more ridiculous, the bird was on a tiny wire spring which caused it to nod about most coquettishly with every movement of my head.

What Can One Say?

Mine was when I tried to explain to an officer of the law what I was doing going through the window of a building at 5 o'clock in the morning when I had forgotten my keys. H. A. F.

A Rising Young Nose.

In an amateur performance of "Julius Cæsar" I acted in the rôle of Anthony. In my speech over the body of Julius Cæsar, instead of impressing the Romans I noticed suppressed smiles in their faces. The audience became restless; I heard giggling, then laughing. I felt there was something wrong with my nose. Nature had bestowed me with an unturned sunken nose, which through makeup had to be transformed into a Roman one. My friends, wishing to play a joke on me, had the makeup made of flour paste into which they mixed some yeast. Heat and perspiration did the rest. O. L. M.

Through Bottom of Hack.

It was my first party, and I was all excited and more or less self-conscious. I wondered what he'd say about my dress and all that. Finally he came. We started. It was three miles to the dance, so he hired a cab.

The driver was a sleepy looking fellow, but the horse moved right along. About one mile from the place of the party there came a splintering of timbers. The bottom of the cab had fallen through! There was I, waist high with the cab floor! There, too, was he! And the driver? Did he wake? No! And the horse—did he stop? No! He jogged right on. And we, waist deep, walked with him, until we roused the driver. Then he stopped and let us get out. Embarrassed—well, my dear, it was simply terrible! X. Z.

He Was Sleepwalker.

Since I was a child I have been a somnambulist, and many times it has caused me much embarrassment. One evening about a year ago a club of girls to which my sister belonged held a meeting at our home. Exhausted from a hard day's work, I retired early and fell asleep at once. I awoke a few hours later, the center of attention in a crowd of laughing girls. My mortification as I stood before them in a rather short nightgown can easily be imagined. Since that time my bedroom door is always locked when I am asleep. J. E. D.

Buttoned to a Policeman.

One evening I was coming home from town during the rush hour. I was forced to stand on the back platform of the surface car and I carried a bulky package. As I attempted to alight from the car the cord on my package caught upon the back button of a policeman's coat. I worked frantically to disengage it, but the heavy cord became more tangled than ever. Finally the conductor said:

"Well, madam, I can't wait any longer. You'll have to take him with you."

Amid roars of laughter from the passengers, we two alighted and under the light from the friendly street lamp I released my catch. MRS. E. J. S.

At the Party, Too!

My most embarrassing moment came when I was giving a little party. I had put my little 5½ year old son to bed upstairs. One of the guests started to play the piano and made an awful discord, when my boy came climbing sleepily down the steps, calling, "Mamma, what's the matter with the piano?" I could not convince him that the piano was all right and he kept insisting that the piano must be broken to make such an awful noise. MRS. G. W.

That Cute Grocery Boy.

The grocery fellow at our grocery store is awfully cute, and I like him very much. One day I was getting supper ready and he came running in with the groceries. Well, I never felt so embarrassed in all my life, because I had my face covered with cold cream and I looked like a ghost. He looked at me and then ran. That was the last time I ever saw him. C. M. ETIQUETTE

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

Sending Holiday Cards.

THE sending of Eastern cards is getting to be as widespread a custom as that of sending Christmas and New Year's cards. It is a friendly and graceful custom.

I am often asked as to the etiquette in this custom. I think that if you have sent an Easter card to a friend who at the same time sent you one you can, without discourtesy, await your opportunity to acknowledge your friend's card. If, however, you did not send an Easter greeting, then acknowledge your friend's thought of you promptly.

This is easily and simply done by writing a few words on your calling card, like "Thank you so much for your kind Easter greeting," and mailing it to your thoughtful friend.

DOROTHY: Give a linen shower for your friend, the June bride. Suggest to your guests that each embroider the bride's initial on a piece of household linen and write or select verse to go with the gift. These verses can be read out and the company can guess the author or selector of each one. The one guessing most often correctly can receive a prize—a bunch of violets. If you ask your friends to come in the afternoon have a spring "tea" for them. Spring flowers in the center of the tea table and glasses of ice tea, if the day is warm. Serve lettuce and water cress sandwiches and have little cakes covered with green and pink frosting. If you have in your company any one who can sing or play have some music—spring songs, if possible.

X. X. X.: Those who send flowers to a house of mourning usually do so to show both sympathy for the family and affection and admiration for the dead. If it is announced that a funeral is private then only those especially asked by the family should attend it.

E.: It was not good manners of your friend to boast of her possessions and of the esteem in which she was held by mutual friends, but I assure you that the only way to meet such an attitude is not by rebuke, but by a perfectly amiable silence and indifference. Change the subject gently and don't let her think for a moment that you are either envious or scornful.

JESSIE N.: I should think a young woman who visited long in the family of a young man to whom she was not engaged when he was her only connection with the family laid herself open to well merited criticism. It is never proper for a woman to receive from a man gifts of any intrinsic value. Flowers, books, candy, and possibly music are the suitable choice of the man.

* *

L. B.: The bride, if she have no father or brother to escort her to the altar, can either walk alone or with her one bridesmaid. The bridegroom and his best man await her there. The bride stands at the bridegroom's left during the ceremony. When they turn after the service this brings her on the bridegroom's right. In the receiving line first come the parents of the bridal couple. A little apart in another corner of the room the newly married pair and their attendants should stand. You can certainly limit the invitations to the wedding breakfast to your nearest relatives.

Before and After Marriage.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on marriage disillusions. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." Write on only one side of the paper.

She Was Speechless.

I always was fond of most anything I made a pet of. I had a parrot, a pretty Angora cat, and a small white, curly haired dog. Before we were married my fiancé would often hold one of the three pets while calling on me. A few weeks after we were married he came home, and finding the cat in his favorite rocking chair and the dog in the other rocker, he blurted out angrily: "I wish to goodness you would get rid of some of these animals so we could live like humans." I was too astonished to say anything. J. S.

Hard to Please.

A friend of mine possessed the ability to prepare a very appetizing meal in a remarkably short time. Before her marriage her husband often praised this gift of hers, saying that a man didn't have to wait all day for something to eat when Nettie was around.

Some time after they were married he came into the dining room to find dinner waiting. Nettie had, as usual, been watching at the window, and as soon as he had appeared at the corner had hastened into the kitchen to give the last touches to the waiting dinner. Giving a scornful glance at the table, her husband said, as he sat down, "Humph, another of these five minute meals." M. E. L.

Not Sympathetic Any More.

Before we were married he always petted and made a great fuss over me. If I ever hurt myself in any way he always kissed me and said all sorts of lover's nonsense.

The other day as I was reaching up to a high shelf to get a box of shoe blacking for him my head suddenly struck against the open cupboard door with a thump that made me see stars. Husband said not a word and as I reeled over to the table to steady myself I somewhat peevishly remarked: "My, but you're sympathetic!"

"O, gee!" he ejaculated, "you women make me weary. You expect sympathy every time you get a little scratch."

E. C. B.

Has Ceased to Obey.

Before I was married I ruled my fiancé with a rod of iron. I refused to let him play pool, visit the bowling alleys, or smoke, and he would forego any pleasure rather than displease me. Since we are married he is so afraid of being henpecked that he will do nothing I tell him. He plays pool, smokes, and can be found in the bowling alley several nights a week. And the funny part of it is, I rather admire him for it. P. D. J.

Too Old to Fight.

It seems almost impossible that one should be deceived in her husband's age after being married five years—my husband, who is young looking, told me when we were married he was 35 years old and I like a good wife believed him—until a few days ago at a meeting of my sewing club my friends were discussing the possibility of a war and I was the only one congratulated on having a husband beyond the age for battle. I looked aghast but was convinced and was glad when I could hurry home and see my husband—he did not shirk the truth and now I find I have a husband seven years older than I thought he was. F. T.

The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

THE larger the family to be fed the more urgent are the requests coming to me from mothers asking that I tell them how to feed their children. This is because no two human beings have exactly the same requirements. Children differ in temperament, size, activity, in digestive and nervous power, and in other ways besides age.

These mothers are quite right in saying there are no books which treat this subject adequately. There are a number which give menus without any decision as to quantity, a great factor in feeding, but which seems to be precise, because they mention what meat to use and whether roasted or stewed or broiled, and are thus seemingly specific about other foods.

It is more or less useless to tell people when to eat bread and meat and fish. Monotony should be avoided at almost any cost. Ready made menus for all sorts of conditions of people are as bad as ready made medicines, and we call some of the latter quacks. I think this is a term that may be sometimes applied to the menu makers who lay down the law in the way some do. Unfortunately some of the books giving these while seeming to be popular, are as full of unscientific statements as of positive directions to "use."

Suppose we have five children at a table. Their likes and dislikes, of course, will be somewhat influenced by this close association, though one may be by nature a nervous temperament and another a sluggish. One may be active and us up more food in one hour than his slower brother does in two, or what he has made from the food eaten, energy. These and many other matters constitute temperament of great importance in determining diet.

Indulgent and not well disciplined mothers look on helplessly while their children early develop finicky notions about food, which upset any and all plans to feed them normally and complicate right eating for life. What shall we do? Discipline the mother if we can, to be sure. I have seen mothers firmly refuse to allow a child to follow an instinct which was normal and right and insist on his following some notion of hers for which she had no ground. The happy medium is to regard children's tastes and gently lead them unconsciously away from them, if these are bad, or educate them out of them, whereas opposition, if containing any element of unreason, may make them stubborn about certain foods for life.

If I would lay down any rules they would be of the following nature:

1. Avoid pap or too many porridges. To develop and bring up the teeth lying in the jaws a great amount of jaw-exercise is needed. It is shameful that the hardest bones in our bodies so soon decay, mainly through early wrong eating, to give lifelong trouble. Chewing is likewise of invaluable aid to digestion

2. Do not allow the children to rush away from the tabe for play or any other reason. To this end make eating as entertaining as possible and as happy. Do not let children play with food, but eating may be made a game.

3. Remember that eating is for endurance, and that if endurance and resistance is high there will be no illness. Notice daily any signs of imperfect feeding, such as sleeplessness, restlessness, constipation, ill temper, and think out the reason from the eating standpoint.

4. The safest and blandest diets for all human beings are of milk and vegetables. The drinking of milk is not as good as the sipping of it in cream soups, etc. The mineral matter obtained from vegetables is absolutely necessary to stable blood, a stable digestive system, and a stable nervous system. Do not think it is necessary, as one mother told me, that a child should suddenly be upset as to stomach. This is usually proof of an acid condition and it does not come on so suddenly as it seems. The poor little body has been leading up till the last straw of too acid secretion nauseates.

5. Notice that children are more likely to get enough food than enough right discipline in connection with it. One child shows he has had too much by his sluggishness, another by his restlessness, another in some other way A remarkably active child is hardly likely to get too much, but gets what she gets in too irregular a way.

6. Foods for children should be as simply and perfectly cooked as possible. Vegetables baked or steamed are best. All starchy things should be well cooked to prevent fermentation. I would never give a child bread and jelly or any other acid and starchy combination. It is generally agreed that they are far better off if they do not eat sugar with their cereal and milk. Do not let them get the habit.

7. Ten per cent of protein, which I should prefer to get from peas, beans, milk, wheat, and eggs, is sufficient for a day's rations, although there are conditions where more is required. The dietitian or doctor dietitian must decide. Sixty per cent of carbohydrate for an active child is probably as good for a child as man. The per cent of fat may be 20, or up and down from that, depending on the personal idiosyncrasy. Fat is splendid fuel. The provision for mineral matter must be positive. The total quantity should be from one-half to an amount equal to what a small woman requires daily.

Children from the sixth grade up through high school are learning to keep close track of what they eat, and to know what per cent of protein, fat, and carbohydrate they are getting, whether their food is well balanced as to acids and bases, etc. It is something that must be learned. It is not a mere matter of being told. It becomes a part of the equipment for life as much as being able to count.

If a mother tried she could as easily have her children keep books on what they eat as to hang up their hats and coats. It might become a part of the orderliness of life. There would be in black and white information of the best sort for the doctor if he needed to be called, but the careful keeping of such accounts would make his calls but few and far between.

Junket.

When a child gets two or three cups of milk and an egg or two daily, he is almost sure to get enough building or growing material, since he will have some beside from wheat, oatmeal, and especially from peas and beans. Milk also gives him a considerable proportion of water, so much needed, since it is 87 per cent water. This water, in the shape of whey, contains the valuable minerals which make of milk one of the foods with an excess of base. Junkets are one of the good forms of milk and easily made by following directions on packages of tablets now mostly used. These may be variously flavored and also made with an egg.

Beet Souffle.

Another way of making a vegetable souffle which may be more easy to make but is not quite so wholesome perhaps is this: Put one ounce of butter and half a cup of cold water on the stove. When the water boils work into the mixture with a wooden spoon two or three tablespoons of sifted flour and cook for two or three minutes, working all the time. Take from stove, add a little salt and pepper, and work into it the unbeaten yolk of an egg and then another. Add four tablespoons of finely chopped beets, or other vegetables may be used, and finally the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs to which may have been added a teaspoon of sugar or not to taste. Bake in buttered earthen dish in rather hot oven for ten to fifteen minutes. It must be served immediately and should be creamy, as it will not be if baked too long.

Rice and Corn Muffins.

If made with dry cooked rice and baked in thin muffins which seem more like round cakes rice corn muffins have good chewing qualities. One cup of cornmeal, one cup of dry boiled rice, one-half teaspoon of salt, two teaspoons of baking powder, from one-fourth to three-fourths of a cup of milk, according as the rice is dry or wet (if dry like Japanese smothered rice it will take three-fourths of a cup), two eggs, two large tablespoons of slightly melted butter. Mix cornmeal, salt, and baking powder and sift, using a bit of sugar if you like; add rice, beat together well; add eggs well beaten and then the milk and butter; beat well, pour into buttered and floured gem pans, and bake one-half hour. Notice, the batter must pour, but it must not be so wet or so poorly mixed that the liquid will gather in puddles if it stands a moment.

Indian Pudding.

Children quite universally like puddings. Rice and cornmeal cooked for a long time slowly with milk are palatable and wholesome. It takes but one tablespoon of rice and about the same of sugar to each cup of milk, baked for three hours with occasional stirring in, to make a delicious pudding of custard top, which if baked in a sheet may be used as cake.

The government recipe for Indian pudding, to be found in farmers' bulletin 565, which every mother should possess, is as follows: Five cups of milk, one-third cup of cornmeal, one-half cup of molasses, one teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon of ginger. Cook milk and meal over the fire for five minutes, stirring all the time, or in double boiler twenty minutes after starting over the fire with cold materials; add molasses, salt, ginger; pour into buttered pudding dish and bake two hours in slow oven. I have used it and know it is good.

Corn Bread.

Hominy, whole wheat as a cereal, and the coarse breads encourage chewing and do not mat into a lump. The more crust there is on a corn bread the more palatable it is, and the more likely it is to be chewed enough. The following may have an egg added to it, but if baked in a thin sheet is palatable: One cup of cornmeal, one-half cup of flour, and a tablespoon or two of sugar sieved together with one-half teaspoon of salt. Add to this one cup of sour milk into which has been stirred one even teaspoon of soda and finally a tablespoon of just melted butter. Bake quickly in thin sheet.

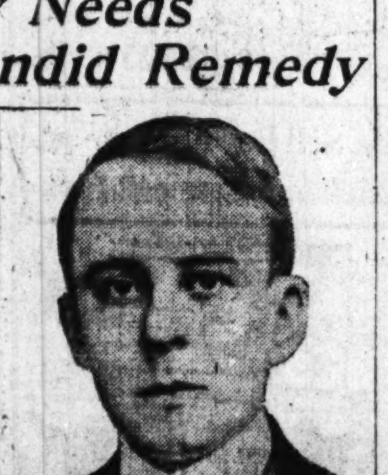
Every Family Needs this Splendid Remedy

Compound of Simple Laxative Herbs Recommended for Constipation.

When a remedy has stood the test of critical analysis and strong competition for over a quarter of a century and establishes itself as the indispensable household remedy in thousands of homes, it is pretty good evidence of its efficacy.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has been on the market since 1889, its use being gradually extended until now it is generally regarded by druggists as the staple family laxative. It is a combination of simple laxative herbs, free from opiates or narcotic drugs, gentle in its action and positive in effect. It costs only fifty cents a bottle and can be purchased in drug stores everywhere.

Mr. Frank Klima, of 2309 Ashland Ave., Baltimore, Md., wrote Dr. Caldwell recently that he had tried about everything without being helped until he got a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which he considers the greatest known remedy for indigestion, constipation and stomach troubles.



MR. FRANK KLIMA.

Get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin from your druggist and keep it in the house. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 454 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., for whom this advertisement is published.

UNUSUAL CORSET EVENT of VITAL IMPORTANCE to ALL WOMEN

THIS Nemo Week demonstrates the benefit, to the public, of standardized prices for Nemo Corsets as a guarantee of high quality at established prices, which now, and for months, have been maintained under very trying conditions.

Rapidly advancing cost of all staples, including corset-materials, indicates a substantial advance in retail prices in the near future.

In the face of this condition, we shall emphasize our policy and make this Nemo Week a great event by featuring, in addition to our full regular line at regular prices, three beautiful Summer models at much less than their real value to-day:

No. 330—The new Body-Training Nemo Military-Belt Corset, made of Steeltex batiste. For slender and medium figures. A health corset with splendid up-to-date style. Sizes 20 to 30 $3.00

No. 323—A new Self-Reducing model, for medium to tall full figures. Also made of Steeltex batiste. Bust rather low. An excellent model for summer wear. Sizes 22 to 36 $3.00

No. 525—A Self-Reducing Corset de luxe, made of a lustrous brocaded sateen—soft and strong. For all average full figures. Same model as our very popular Self-Reducing Corset No. 322 $5.00

Nemo Steeltex batiste is the fine light but durable material we used last year in our better grades of corsets for summer wear. Its cost price is now too high for that purpose, and we have used the stock remaining from last year to make two of these specials, giving the public the benefit of last year's lower cost.

No such values can be offered again for some time to come.

The AMATEUR GARDENER

The Sweet Pea.

Of all the annuals the sweet pea seems to be the universal favorite with flower lovers. And its popularity is well deserved. It is a constant bloomer from July to the coming of cold weather, provided it is given the right kind of treatment.

It produces large crops of flowers, it is beautiful in color, and in fragrance it excels all other annuals except mignonette. For cutting it is unsurpassed.

It requires a treatment unlike that of any other annual. It likes to have its roots deep in the soil, where there is always likely to be moisture, and where the sun does not penetrate. It likes to get a start early in the season, before not weather sets in. In order to comply with its various requirements we plant it as soon as the frost is out of the ground, and we plant it deeply.

The first thing to do is to make a trench for the reception of the seed. This should be about six inches deep. Scatter the seed thickly—about an inch apart—then cover with perhaps an inch of soil, tramping it down with the foot to make it firm and compact.

When the young plants have grown to a height of about three inches draw in a little more of the soil that was thrown out of the trench, and continue to do this from time to time, as the plants increase in height, until all the soil has been returned to it. In this way we get the roots of the plants deep enough to benefit by the moisture and coolness which is only found at some distance beneath the surface.

Proper support is an item that should receive early attention. Most amateur growers make use of woven wire netting, stretched along the row on stout stakes. This will answer if nothing better can be obtained, but it is generally necessary to train the young plants through the meshes of the netting before they will talke hold of it. A much better support is furnished by brush.

The sweet pea prefers it to all other supports. And vines trained over it always present a much more pleasing appearance than those on netting, as the brush allows them to grow more naturally and spread out on each side of the row, while a support of netting obliges them to go up, up, up, in a most prim and formal way.

Sometimes the plants are attacked by aphis early in the season. It is well to be prepared for this pest. Buy a can of nicotide early in the season, and use it as soon as the first aphis puts in an appearance. Spray the entire plant with it, and repeat the operation until the enemy is routed.

Sometimes, during the hot weather of midsummer, in a dry season, the red spider will attack the vines. You will know about this by the appearance of the leaves near the ground. If they turn white you may be quite sure that the spider is sucking their juices.

The remedy is water—clear water—used so often and so liberally, in the form of a spray, that the moisture resulting from the application makes it so unpleasant for the spider—who delights in hot, dry weather—that he will be glad to seek other quarters.

In order to obtain a constant supply of flowers it will be necessary to cut off all blossoms as soon as they begin to fade. If you do not do this the plants will throw all their energies into the development of seed, and if this is allowed there will be but few flowers during the remainder of the season.

By removing the embryo seed pods promptly we force the plant to make another effort toward the perpetuation of itself, and as the first step in the process is the production of flowers we oblige it to go on with its efforts in that direction all through the season.

Most persons who purchase seed get that which comes in "mixed" packages, because it is cheaper and because they would like as great a variety as possible. This is where they make a mistake. If the selection of varieties is confined to those of the pinks, the whites, the lavenders, and the pale, primrose yellows the effect will be much more pleasing in every way than when there is a jumble of colors, such as results from the use of mixed seed.

All the colors mentioned above harmonize most delightfully. Try them this season, and I am quite sure you will not miss the darker colors. If, however, you have a preference for the dark colors, by all means give them a place in your garden, but I would advise you to buy packages of seed in which each color is kept by itself if you want entire satisfaction.

When the crimsons, the scarlets, the purples, and the blues get on too intimate terms with each other, as they will when planted in the same row, there is sure to be a discord in the color scheme before the end of the esason. Such will not be the case if selection of color is confined to those spoken of above.

As a cut flower, the sweet pea ranks high. If the water in which it is placed is changed daily the blossoms will remain fresh for a week.

How I Won My Mate.

How did you win the love of your mate? What measures, if any, did you adopt? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Won My Mate." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

He Loved to See Plants Grow.

In the early spring I had my little garden cultivated so as to have early vegetables. A young man who passed several times, seeing me at work, concluded to step one evening and tell me how much he admired my garden. He loved to see the plants grow, he said, and this made me happy, of course. He turned his favors toward me because I could work so well in a garden. This is how I won my mate.

Tried to Be His Pal.

I met and fell head over heels in love with the handsomest man in Michigan and decided if I didn't marry this man I would be a bachelor girl. But as he was sought after by every girl who met him I decided I would try to be a pal to him.

He was a sportsman and loved the outdoor life. So I hunted and fished and rode with him and really wanted to do things he liked to do.

Then all at once I planned to evaporate for a time, so I packed up and went away for many months. When I returned the "apple of my eye" was soon edging around on Sundays with fishing rods or gun. I was always ready and both enjoyed the open to the utmost. We were supremely happy.

Then he became serious and said he had always promised himself that if he could find a girl who liked to do the things he enjoyed, one that he could make a pal of, he would like to make a home that would mean "home."

We have been married two years and are still the same old pals, only more so.

On a Camping Trip.

A number of young fellows and girls decided to go on a camping trip. The weather being warm, we had not been there long before the fellows had all exhausted their supply of clean shirts. The only thing left for the boys to do was to take the next train to the city for a supply, which none of them seemed inclined to want to do. The girls all stood around offering no suggestions whatsoever, until at last I ventured one, whereupon was immediately taken up, and the boys started hauling pail after pail of water from the lake, dumping it into a huge tub. The better part of the morning had passed before all of the shrts were out drying in the bright July sun. Soon after I was married to one of the boys in the crowd and when I asked him when he first fell in love with me he answered: "I fell in love with you when I found you could do something else besides sit around and giggle."

Pies and Doughnuts.

The way to a man's heart is through his stomach. John boarded at my mother's house. I did most of the cooking. He insists that it was love at first sight, but I know it was the good old fashioned pies and doughnuts that first won his admiration.

"Look a' There, If You Don't Think It's Just Wonderful for Corns!"

"Bless my stars, look at it! Land of the livin'! Why, just look at it! That corn came right off—just like peeling bananas. Put your finger on my toe, right there—don't be afraid—that's it—feel how smooth the skin is? Well, that's where the corn was. Well, that beats all!" That's the way "Gets-It" works on all corns, every corn, every time. It's the new, simple way of curing corns. You'll say good-bye to all foolish contraptions like bundling bandages, sticky tape, plasters, toe-eating salves, and grave-diggers, such as knives, razors and scissors. "Gets-It" stops pain. Applied in 2 seconds. Never fails. Nothing to stick to, hurt, or press on the corn.

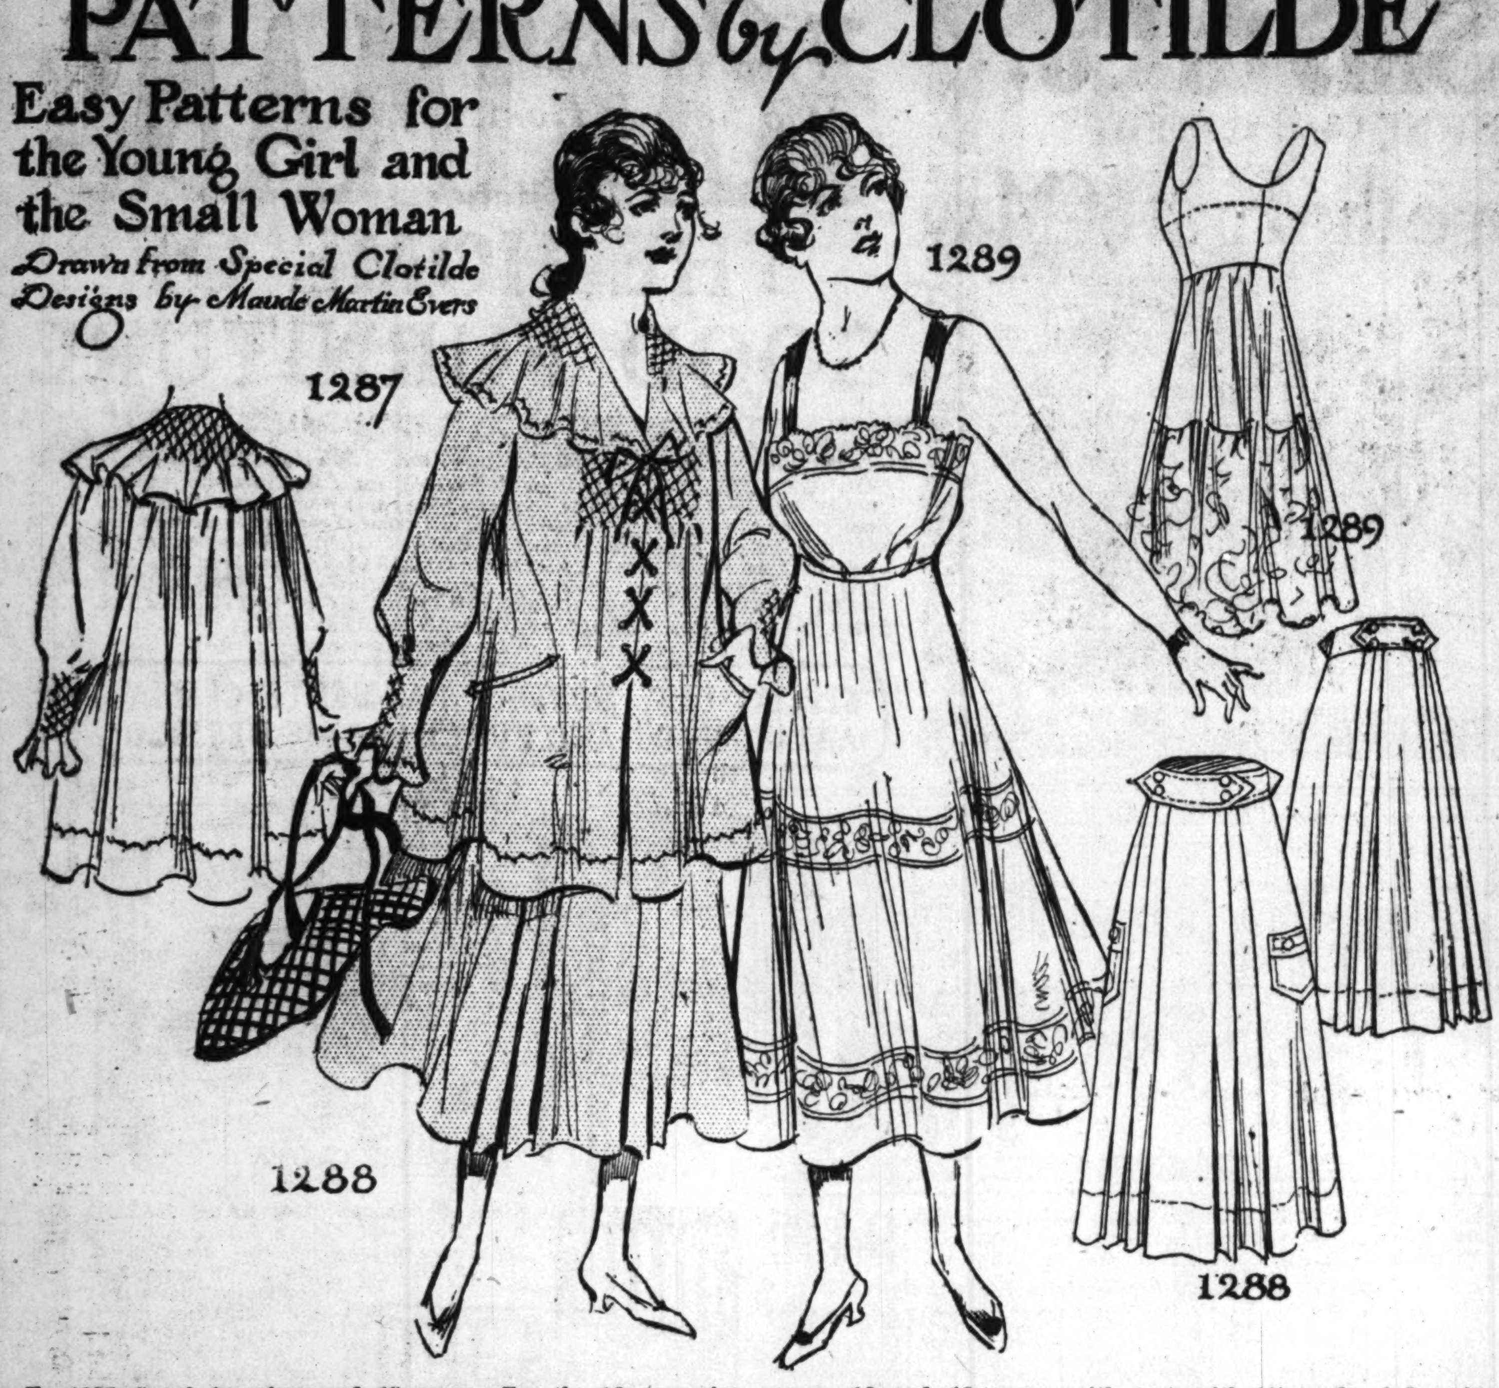
PATTERNS by CLOTILDE

Easy Patterns for the Young Girl and the Small Woman

Drawn from Special Clotilde Designs by Maude Martin Evers



No. 1287—Smock for misses and small women, 16 and 18 years. For the 16 year size will be needed 4⅝ yards of material 36 inches wide or 2⅞ yards 44 inches wide.

No. 1288—Skirt with plaits for misses and small women, 16 and 18 years. For the 16 year size will be needed 4½ yards of material 36 or 44 inches wide; the skirt is 3 yards and 20 inches in width at the lower edge.

No. 1289—Combination undergarment for misses and small women, 16 and 18 years, with petticoat that can be made with circular or gathered flounce, corset cover with round neck or straight upper edge. For the 16 year size will be needed 3¾ yards of material 36 inches wide or 3⅛ yards 44 inches wide for the petticoat, with 1¼ yards of flouncing 11 inches wide for the corset cover. To make as shown in the back view will be needed 4 yards of flouncing 25 inches wide, with 1½ yards of plain material 36 inches wide or 1¼ yards 44 inches wide.

SINCE sports clothes are becoming so overweeningly popular, I have designed two garments today for sports patterns. One is a unique smock intended for the young girl or the small woman. The brighter the color it is made up in the more in style it will be. The young girl planning an outdoor vacation, the young bride planning a trousseau, the young married woman who is intending to indulge in all sorts of sports, will all be equally interested in this garment.

The skirt pattern which I am showing may also be worn with this smock, and will make up a most attractive combination.

The combination undergarment is of a type which will prove essentially serviceable and at the same time fit prettily under the new summer frocks and skirts. No woman can have too many of these effective summer combinations, and they may be made up in muslin, linen, crêpe de chine, or the new Neptune satin, which is washable.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

Showing Off Bad for Baby.

THIS indictment of "showing off the baby" does not refer to the time when the new arrival, clad in yards of muslin and lace, lies in the new mother's arms. Then its very "newness" disarms all criticism, and, as all babies are much alike, nobody expects much from it.

The real showing off comes along later, when the child begins to acquire those little individualities that are so dear to the heart of the fond, proud, young parents. "He is so wonderfully intelligent, and takes notice of everything and everybody," is the burden of their song.

Poor baby is excited, and talked to, and made to show off, and all sorts of things are dangled in front of him to show how he "notices" at an earlier age than other babies.

Now, no parents want their baby to be backward or stolid, but it is one thing to encourage natural bodily and mental growth and quite another to force it. It is far better to be satisfied with a healthy, normal baby than to pride yourself on one which will most likely grow up bad tempered or neurotic, or bowlegged or round shouldered, don't you think?

Varied Activities of Women.

Eight hundred high school girls in Baltimore have taken a pledge never again to wear feathers in their hats.

Mrs. John H. Ash of Oliver, Ga., has a collection of stuffed birds which it is claimed is not equaled in the United States.

Miss Nora Norton has the distinction of being the only woman frame maker in the country who has taught herself the business and converts her own moldings into frames.

Women are in a majority in nine occupations—musicians or teachers of music, school teachers, boarding house keepers, housekeepers, laundresses, nurses, servants, stenographers, and typists.

Over 250 California women, all of them members of the women's section of the Navy league, will go into camp on June 1, at Presido, Cal., where they will be under strict military rule to learn the ways of war.

Alexandra Kollontay, the Russian authority on feminism, is of the opinion that motherhood is not only a private privilege but a social duty which the state should insure, and the time will come she thinks when it will be regarded so in all civilized countries.

Have You Met a Nervy Flirt?

Who was the nerviest flirt you ever met? What did he say? And what did you say? Was the incident funny or otherwise? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of page only. No manuscripts returned. Address Nervy Flirt Editor, "The Chicago Sunday Tribune."

This Is Hard to Beat.

The nerviest flirt I have ever known happened to be my husband. I helped him at his office during the busy seasons, and one day I answered the telephone and a woman's voice asked for him. He talked to her a few minutes, then said to me: "Emma, this chicken wants to ask you if you're my stenographer or my wife. I told her I am not married, but she has heard differently. I'm having a barrel of fun flirting with her and trying to make her think she is the dearest little darling in the world. You talk to her and fix it up for me."

I did some rapid thinking, and, I guess I fixed things all right, for this is what I said: "Miss Smith, my husband says you want to ask me if it's true that I'm not his stenographer but am his wife; I mean he says he is having a barrel of fun flirting with such a simple chicken as you are, and, O dear, he says I have told you that I'm his wife and that I'm making him appear to be as big a chump as you are, and——" but here the receiver of the fair damsel clicked up, and my husband was saying things not found in any Sunday school magazine, so I happened to think of some shopping I just simply had to attend to immediately, and taking my hat I left the office.

If he has flirted since then he hasn't called on me to help him out, anyhow.

MRS. D.

Nerve? Nothing Like It.

Have I ever known a nervy one? Well, I should remark! I am 17 and considered rather pretty by my friends. One night, coming out on the elevated, I stood on the platform, it being decidedly stuffy in the car. As I first went out and turned around to shut the car door after me a masculine hand reached out and closed over mine, pushing the door shut at the same time. I tried to pull my hand away, but that other hand was like a vise.

"Little girl," said the man to whom the hand belonged, "don't you remember me? I'd never forget you—those same blue eyes, that same black hair, and—"

Here I interrupted with, "Enough—let me pass through into the car."

I tried to make myself as dignified and haughty as possible, but as I am only 5 feet 2 I failed miserably, for he said, as he gripped my hand still tighter, "Helen, don't tell me that you don't remember me! Don't you remember last summer on the beach? Ah, Helen!"

"As it happens, my name is Virginia, not Helen," I said coldly, and immediately saw my foolish mistake, for he said, "Ah, yes, to be sure, Virginia, meeting so many girls, you see (yes, I saw!), gets me all confused; though, of course, no girl with hair and eyes like yours could be named anything but Virginia."

And with that my tormentor took out a pair of tiny scissors from his vest pocket and, quick as a flash, clipped off and end of one of my curls. He then released my hand and smilingly remarked, "Thanks; I'll keep this to remember you by next time."

I was so angry that I could not even ask the conductor to have the man put off, but marched into the car and sat down, my mind in a state of perfect chaos.

M. W.

Then Fireman Took Her Home.

One night when I was riding home from college the conductor got extremely "fresh." He came in and sat down beside me while the car was going through the tunnel. As it was 9:30, the car took its time. He asked me what business I had out that hour of the night and added that he had seen me on his car before. Then he wanted to know if I didn't want him to take me home. He said he didn't like the idea of my being out nights, such a sweet little girl.

A city fireman who had overheard him talk stepped up and told him if he did not stop molesting me he would call an officer. Just then a policeman got on the car, and you ought to have seen the flirt. He said to me: "I beg your pardon, miss," and went on the platform.

The fireman escorted me home. R. B.

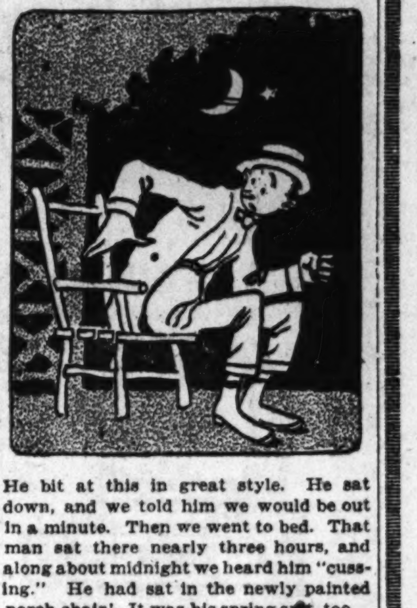
His Sping Suit, Too.

He was a nicely dressed young chap. I have to admit that. But he had all the nerve in the world. He started following us seven blocks from home, and every fifteen feet he would talk to us. My girl chum and I saw that it was useless to try and shoo him off, so we started talking to him and ended by asking him to come up on the porch of my house and sit down.



He bit at this in great style. He sat down, and we told him we would be out in a minute. Then we went to bed. That man sat there nearly three hours, and along about midnight we heard him "cussing." He had sat in the newly painted porch chair! It was his spring s[illegible]t, too.

What is the 7th Point?

From Maine to California, from Texas to Hudson Bay, millions of people have been asking "What is the 7th Point in Sterling Gum?"

In practically every town, city and village in the United States and Canada, the published six points of superiority have brought Sterling Gum fast-growing popularity.

But the seventh point still remains a riddle.

Point ⑦ What?

Now, we are offering liberal prizes to those who send us the best suggestions for the Sterling Gum Point 7.

Before you make your suggestion for the 7th Point, read the following:

The Following Story Unfolds the Secret of the Famous Point 7

To most people chewing gum is a mystery. They may know that different chewing gums are made from different ingredients. But that is about all. Here are facts which we believe you will be glad to know about Sterling Gum:

Your Sterling Gum is made from the following materials:

The basis is the pure sap of the tropical Sapota Tree—a natural gum.

This natural Sapota Tree sap is boiled, sweetened and flavored. The sweetening is simply pure cane sugar and pure corn syrup.

The flavoring is of two kinds—Peppermint (in red wrappers), Cinnamon (in blue wrappers).

There are some twenty varieties of the mint plant. The Sterling Peppermint is a product of the choicest, smoothest-flavored of these many mint varieties.

The spicy Cinnamon flavor is extracted from the Cassia bush which grows in the tropics.

The sap of the Sapota Tree, the cane sugar, the corn syrup, the Peppermint and Cinnamon flavors all come from the sap of some plant or tree. Nature herself supplies these delicious materials from which your Sterling Gum is made.

Requirements for Winning Phrase

When you read the above facts on the materials that Sterling Gum is made of, you will know all that it is necessary for you to know in entering this contest.

The first prize will go to the one whose suggestion, based on the above story, most impressively pre[illegible]nts the natural purity of Sterling [illegible]m—in the opinion of the judges.

[illegible]emember that your suggestion [illegible] be in six words or less.

[illegible]he next best suggestion will win [illegible]second prize—and so on down.

It is understood that the Sterling Gum Company will have the right to use the 7 Point suggestions sent in by the prize winners.

The contest is easy to enter. Just think out your way of expressing the 7th Point. Then write it out in six words or less and send it in as directed in the conditions printed below. Even if you don't win the first prize of $1,000, you stand a chance to win one of the 7,777 smaller prizes.

THE NIGHT BEFORE MAY FIRST

Gloomy, uncouth and utterly disordered is the home of the mover on the eve of May first. All rooms are stuffed with luggage and packed up furniture awaiting the morrow for the moving vans. Were it not for the occupants the entire quarters would sure serve as an ideal habitation for owls, foxes and spooks. Mother is sitting on the kitchen range. Dad is perched on the sewing machine, the boys are seated on the wash tub and the girls on rolled up rugs; all thinking and wondering what it is going to be like in their new domicile. Time and again thoughts revolve in their minds as how their old articles of furniture and furnishings will appear in the new abode. Their general discussion on this matter expresses much concern, suggesting both sorrow and alarm. Dad now becomes acutely interested and in a rather positive tone of voice exhorts them to remember that SMYTH'S, THE LARGEST HOUSE FURNISHING STORE IN THE WORLD, is here for the very purpose of alleviating both mentally and physically all people undergoing similar distressment as their own and "if new things are needed, make a list when we arrive at the new quarters and go to Smyth's at your convenience, if not by day, on any Monday, Wednesday or Saturday evening." "Now all regain your composure. I am surprised at all of you, especially at your mother; she should well remember the tantrums her mother—your grandmother—cut up when the family moved on the first day of May away back in 1868 or 1869, I cannot just remember which. However, I do recollect that they were moving into a larger house and needed many additional things, none more than others, and being somewhat concerned about ready cash they went over to Smyth's, who soon had the house with its new furniture, carpets and draperies looking like a peach orchard in blossom or a beautiful flower garden in the month of June. Truly, I used to become tired of hearing their daily and incessant exclamations of delight for many days after. Although it was a more pleasant contrast than seeing them half hysterical from uncertainty before moving.

"Considering that moving expenses absorb so much ready cash and so many new and additional articles of house furnishings are needed, I have often thought what a boon of assistance and general benefit the BIG FURNITURE STORE has been to May movers for nearly fifty years.

"If I remember correctly, JOHN M. SMYTH was the original extender of credit in the house furnishing business.

The Store of Dependability

"Mother has been doing the buying there without me for many years. The last time we went together was when Evelyn was a baby and we bought a nice white enamel crib, the first one I had ever seen. That was some eighteen years ago. I must see those four rooms furnished complete from kitchen to living room for $265.00 with good furniture, I know, for they handle nothing else. And those wonderfully furnished apartments mother has been talking about as the showplace of Chicago. She says there are about twelve of them, and that new household miracle, The Adams Chair or Sofa, makes a bed in two seconds. What next?—how things have changed! It would be a treat for me to go with you all. There is much to see and learn and so much can be bought with so little money. That's settled, we will all go together, name the evening, Monday, Wednesday or Saturday, as the store is open until 10 o'clock. The night will be interesting and well spent."

Afternoon Tea and Stroll Not Chicago Fashion.

By Mme. X.

WERE the Lake Shore drive in New York, London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Rome, or any other great city at least a part of its four miles of driveway and esplanade would be, at certain hours of the day, thronged with people on foot or awheel, bent on health or pleasure, and among the throng would be many notabilities, local or international.

Take Fifth avenue, Hyde Park, the Bois, Unter den Linden, the Ring, the Pincio, and other celebrated open air rendezvous, what arenas they are for much of the human drama that goes on in those world famous places. Michigan avenue might be compared to Fifth avenue except that no one walks in Michigan avenue for pleasure. Every one on that broad thoroughfare is hurrying somewhere with an air of profound preoccupation and paying scant attention to any one else. No one seems to stroll there for pleasure.

The natural place for people seeking open air relaxation and recreation is on our beautiful Lake Shore drive. But is it ever the setting for leisurely, well dressed, gregarious, and chatty crowds? Yes, once a week, on Sundays, between noon and half past 1 o'clock. The rest of the seven days it is practically deserted except for nursemaids and their charges; a scattering of shabby looking men sitting in sheltered corners scanning the help wanted columns of some daily paper; a few animated feminine pedestrians—all well known socially—and the solitary ancient mariner in baggy white suit, who spikes up scraps of paper and deposits the same in his basket.

Killed by Modern Hygiene.

What is our so-called leisure class doing between 5 and half past 6 o'clock in the afternoon? Afternoon tea is almost discarded as a home institution, having joined the fatal cocktail, the morning cup of coffee, and various other harmful but pleasant habits in the limbo created by modern hygiene. We know too much to be happy nowadays.

Afternoon tea parties are almost unknown as a social function after the season devoted to launching debutantes is over. Even the most passionate women card devotees are usually over their afternoon games by 5 or half past. Calling is an ancient and discarded practice. So again we query, what are women doing in the late afternoons that is half so pleasant, so health giving, so altogether desirable and sociable as a stroll on foot or a turn in a motor on the Lake Shore drive?

Three years ago Mrs. Harold McCormick gave a temporary fillip to this anemic custom by instituting a series of teas at the Lincoln park refectory, providing therefore a band of music. The habit then was to ride up to the refectory and, after tea and talk, walk home across the park's broad green lawns and down the drive as the setting sun threw its lengthening shadows over the land. Must we wait for Mrs. McCormick's long delayed return to resuscitate this pleasant practice?

Shafts from a Social Rebel.

Society is not often so sane in its efforts at companionship and display as the above sporadic effort. Mrs. Herbert Parsons took a tilt at its vanities and foibles with a sharp lance last Wednesday evening in an address she made at the City club on "Ideals in Society." She pierced it through and through and left it a collapsed and putrid thing at the feet of the appreciative members of the City club. She was witty, relentless, and bitter about what she called "the gynocracy," the woman run society which prevails in this country.

Among other of her pithy aphorisms was the statement that the custom of coming out parties for debutantes would soon be as obsolete as the fashion of sitting up at night with the corpse. She also seemed to think there were easier and pleasanter ways of earning a dinner than being agreeable at it or for it.

She herself is a most attractive example of a rapidly increasing species, the social rebel. She could only have been born and developed well within the ranks which she now so valiantly assails. She is remarkably good looking, regular of feature, lovely of coloring, with straight eyebrows, a remote air, perfect poise, and a low, even voice. The slow, evanescent smile which punctuated her ironical sallies was like flickering sunshine on a secluded tarn.

Mother a Society Leader.

She is a daughter of Henry Clews, the well known New York banker. Her mother is a sister of the late Edward S. Worthington of Chicago, and is one of the leaders in New York's most intrenched and fashionable society.

Her brother, Henry Clews Jr., is in his way as much of a nonconformist as Mrs. Parsons herself. He is a sculptor of quite extraordinary originality. He and "Bob" Chanler belong to the same ultra modern school or art. He has had also some matrimonial experience. His first wife was divorced from the once famous, now departed, Freddie Gebhardt (of Lily Langtry fame) before she married Mr. Clews. This marriage resulting also in a divorce, Mr. Clews married Mrs. Elsie Whelan Goelet, also a divorcee. Do such much married people confine their talk to the weather and crops, or do they ever compare notes on past experiences?

Among the society folk who came to Wednesday's symposium at the City club I fancy especially to hear Mrs. Parsons were Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, Mrs. Medill McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hamill, whose guest Mrs. Parsons was during her stay here; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, Mr. and Mrs. Roy McWilliams, Mr. and Mrs. William G. Hibbard Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William Hale, Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Follansbee, Mrs. E. S. Worthington, Mrs. James Keeley, Frank Hamlin, and Alfred Baker.

Next week there will be a similar function at the City club, when ideals in education, law, and government will be discussed before and after dinner by Ernest G. Moore, Judge John Bradley Winslow, and Charles E. Merriam. Wives and other women relatives of the club members seem as much interested in this symposium as the men. Fully half of Wednesday's audience was composed of women.

Home for the Arts Club.

The much discussed Arts club is finally taking form and shape. At a meeting of the directors last Wednesday it was decided to lease the top floor of the Thurber building as quarters for the club. Under the same roof is the somewhat unrecognized parent of the new organization, the Artists' guild, which, in spite of its parental relation, still remains a distinct enterprise.

The present intention is to have the club quarters a meeting place for those interested in art and artists. Already over 400 have signified their interest in both by asking to be enrolled as members. This membership is divided into professional and lay members. There is not to be a cuisine attached to the club, but afternoon tea will be served.

The idea is to provide a backing for such exhibits as do not properly fall within the province of the more conventional and academic Art institute. It is not a legitimate function of the latter to sanction revolutionists or unaccepted pioneers, explorers, and experimenters in art. The Arts club steps in to offer all such free lances a chance for recognition. It also aims to provide a meeting ground for Chicago artists and art lovers, with the hope of eventually making this our city such an attractive art center that our best artists will not be tempted to drift to other more congenial climes, as they have done for the last thirty or forty years.

Among the well known painters we have lost in this way were the late Lawrence C. Earle, the late George Hitchcock, Louis Betts, and now Frederic C. Bartlett. I say this last advisedly, for the Bartletts have rented their charming Prairie avenue house to an optical institute, and, having sold to David Adler their piece of land in the Ryerson-Porter subdivision, overlooking Lincoln park, are moving their furniture to New York. Mr. Bartlett's interesting Prairie avenue studio is to be a dormitory. Glass eyes will gaze at those lovely Italian beams and lintels in that whilom drawing room. Alas, poor Yorick!

Officers of the Club.

Frederic Bartlett will be much missed in the new Arts club. Left to steer it, however, are Mrs. Robert McGann, president; Lawton Parker, first vice; F. J. Reichmann, second vice, and Charles B. Pike, third vice presidents; Edward M. Ericson, secretary, and R. R. Jarvie, treasurer.

Among those on a numerous list of directors are Mesdames John Carpenter, Chauncey Blair, C. M. Ely, Cecil Clark Davis, Pauline Palmer, William J. Calhoun, Samuel Insull, Miss Katherine Dudley, Roy McWilliams, Abram Poole, Julian Mason, David Adler, F. A. Werner, Charles Dewey, and Charles Francis Browne.

Mrs. Chauncey Blair has taken great interest in the formation of this club and is chairman of the committee on out of town exhibits. C. F. Browne is chairman of the committee on local exhibits and F. J. Reichmann is at the head of the program committee.

The president, Mrs. McGann, is a peculiarly suitable representative of the two elements the club seeks to unite. She is an artist of unusual talent, her paintings now being accorded a prominent place in Art institute exhibits. She is also a member of one of Chicago's oldest and most prominent families and is among the best known social leaders here. She is deeply interested in the success of the Arts club, which promises to be a distinct feature in that kaleidoscopic affair, our civic life.

Spring Festival Opens Busy Week.

The coming week will be a busy one socially. Tomorrow evening the promoters of the spring festival at Orchestra hall for the benefit of the American fund for French wounded are turning out a large detachment of society folk to see the "Return of Persephone," as depicted by the students of the Hinman studio [a charmingly trained young troupe of terpsichoreans], and to hear an address by Miss Irene Manby on her experiences as a nurse in a French war hospital. She is said to be "a winner" among the men, having recently at White Sulphur Springs been so eloquent and persuasive as to inspire generous contributions even from ardent pro-Germans.

Mrs. Henry Robbins, Mrs. Russell Tyson, Mrs. Watson Blair, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, and others are working to make this entertainment a success.

Tuesday evening society promises again to turn out en masse for the spring assembly ball at the Blackstone hotel, where more scenes for the Casino film play will be staged.

The latter end of the week will be further occupied by these movies, when cohorts of the big cast will fill the landscape at Lake Forest and Winnetka.

War Song Concert Sold Out.

Mrs. William J. Chalmers has sold all of the Auditorium's fifty-seven boxes and twelve additional ones for her war song festival on May 9. Also practically all of the main floor seats are taken and much of the balcony has been sold out. The second balcony is to be devoted to the public school children, and generous citizens have bought blocks of fifty or 100 seats to present to the public schools. Among these donors are Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, Mrs. Charles Swift, Mrs. Ogden Armour, Mrs. J. S. Doane, and Mrs. Chalmers herself.

There will be two machine guns in the foyer. Let us hope no foe will attack us on May 9, as these constitute our sole defense in this line.

The Paulist choir is going to sing, "America" being its piece of resistance. The Commonwealth Edison company orchestra, the best amateur orchestra in the city, gives its services that evening. Mrs. James W. Thorne is getting up some charming dances of the 1860-'65 period in costume of that time, hoopskirts, etc.

The Marshall Field chorus of 130 voices will also contribute to the program, while patriotic songs will be sung by Clarence Whitehill and James Goddard.

The occasion is to be a grand patriotic symposium, in which the defense of the nation problem will be emphasized.

Here's a Free Ad.

Flattery takes many subtle forms. The following is an instance. Said a fair Winnetkaite to the author of this column: "Won't you write up the north shore white elephant rummage sale which is to be held on May 3 at the Winnetka Community house for the benefit of three quite different things, the fund for French wounded, Grove house, and the camp equipment of Community?"

Reading the unspoken thought that perhaps the incident might interest only a small percentage of our readers, she hastily added: "We don't expect Chicago society people to come out to it, but we do want all the old clothes dealers in town to come, and they'll be more likely to read about it in your column than anywhere else."

So today the mind's eye is filled with a vision of all the old clothes dealers in town gloating over this item and setting aside May 3 for an excursion to Winnetka. Mrs. William McIlvaine, Mrs. Thomas Taylor Jr., Mrs. Lyman T. Walker, Mrs. Edward Burling, and Mrs. C. T. M. Mordock are among those instrumental in providing this feast for o. c. d's.

Glencoe Men Balk at Parade.

Among the varied activities of Chicago women is that of converting husbands to an acquiescence, as joyful as maybe, to their wives' taking part in the suffrage parade on June 7.

Mrs. Medill McCormick and Mrs. James W. Morrisson recently addressed a woman's meeting at Glencoe and got the enthusiastic consent of every woman present to march in the parade. A few days later the two orators received an earnest appeal from the Glencoe women to come out and talk to the Glencoe husbands, who, to a man, were agin the parade. So out went our two spellbinders and talked to those recalcitrant commuters, with the result that the Glencoe men are divided today into three factions—those who, to a man, were "agin" the parade, those who will stand aside and let their wives do as they please, and those who on June 7, will lock their gentle spouses up in third story back rooms and mount guard over them with loaded rifles.

Mrs. McCormick and Mrs. Morrisson had a rousing meeting last Tuesday at Winnetka, where they evoked such enthusiasm that the most prominent, conservative, conventional, timorous women signed the pledge to march. Should I record their names here they would, disregarding pledges, shrink into a permanent obscurity. So we'll keep that till later.

A coterie of the world that amuses itself is ransacking dressmaking and millinery shops to secure the smartest kind of outing apparel for the Frank Hibbards' party on the steamship Commodore on the evening of May 12. The invitations read that the gangplank will be lowered at 2 bells and raised at 3 bells, which—to enlighten landlubbers—means 9 and 9:30 o'clock, respectively.

The announcement that the Commodore will be docked at the foot of Randolph street recalls the old days of the Argo, when the gay set of the World's Fair year held high carnival in that historic craft, moored in the same spot. The Arthur Eatons, Augustus Eddys, Charles Macdonalds, John M. Clarks, Charles Deerings, Edwards Worthingtons, Frederick S. Eameses, George Willetts, and a lot of others made life gay for themselves and a host of visitors, American and foreign.

The wheel of time has turned since those days and now new names and new faces will troop across that long viaduct in the smoke laden night.

A New Era in Corsetry Since Gossards Came

Gossard Corsets

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO you had no choice, you accepted your corset, attempted to adapt your figure to it, and rarely, if ever, succeeded in doing so. Today over 100 different Gossard models are yours to select from.

Fifteen years ago front lacing, discovered by us, was unknown. You strained and lamely did your best to locate your lacing. Today you stand in front of your mirror and see the adjustment. You mould your figure lines each day, retain your youth and safeguard your health. Fifteen years ago trained corset fitters were unknown. Men sold corsets over the counter like lace, silk or calico. Today thousands of Gossard Trained Corsetieres serve millions of Gossard wearers. They fit each corset.

Our responsibility grows each season, and we welcome it. This season every demand of famous couturieres, both here and abroad and social leaders of every country, is being satisfied with Gossards.

In exclusive style, comfort, long wearing service and price, they are alone, as they always have been. Your Gossard—a perfect corset of this new era of corsetry—is ready for you at your price, $2.00, $2.50, $3.50, $5.00, $6.50 and up to $60.00. Be fitted tomorrow.

To save you disappointment and to insure your having a genuine Gossard, always look for the name Gossard sewn on the inside of your corset. Any corset without the name Gossard sewn inside will fall short in style, fit, wearing service and comfort. Insist on a genuine Gossard always.

Among the hostesses for the May luncheon of the Chicago Woman's Musical club on Thurday, May 11, in the Congress hotel, are Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns, Mrs. Ella O'Neal Corrigan, and Mrs. Eleanore Capps-Hostler.

Shakespeare Is Lecture Subject at Musical Club.

By Hazel Whitaker.

BELIEVING with Shakespeare that "The man who hath no music in himself is fit for treason, stratagems, and spoils," the Chicago Woman's Musical club is devoting the last of a series of seven lectures to a talk on "Shakespeare in Music," to be given by Mrs. David Campbell on Friday at 10:30 in the English room of the Congress hotel.

Wagner's "Nibelungen Ring," "Parsifal," and a group of song stories, all with musical illustrations, have been covered in these educational lectures, which have been open to any one who wished to pay the small price of admission.

This newest of Chicago musical clubs has been doing really worth while things since its organization less than two years ago, and the fact that it now numbers over 500 artist members speaks volumes. A wonderfully creditable performance was recently given by the chorus, which was made up entirely of trained voices, with Hayden Owens as director, Mrs. Mary D. Warner, soprano; Stanley Deacon, baritone; Mrs. Theodora Sturkow Ryder, and Mrs. Ernan D. Akley, pianists.

Artists of note appear on the regular monthly programs and several concerts are given during the year by the student members, who number about fifty. The talents of the latter are thus brought to the attention of those who are in a position to give helpful suggestion, and the dues for these younger members are but nominal. The club is especially interested in bettering the music in the public schools and has had during the last year several instructive talks on this subject, one of which was by Harold Maryott of the Chicago Medical college.

Arrangements are about complete for the final meeting of the year, to be held on Thursday, May 11, at the Congress hotel. Mrs. Joseph R. Blair is chairman of arrangements, and Mrs. Marie Hoover Ellis and Mrs. Thomas P. Casey are vice chairmen. A wild flower breakfast at 1 o'clock will precede the musical program, at which will appear the following artists: Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns, Thomas McGranahan, Miss Irene Stolofsky, Miss Mary Anderson, and Mrs. Effa Ellis Perfield.

To become an active member one must have acquired a degree of success in a musical line and, after indorsement, receive a majority vote of the trial committee after a performance before that body.

The officers and directors for 1915-1916 are: Mrs. Eleanore Capps-Hostler, president; Mrs. Harrison G. Wells, vice president; Mrs. Albert J. Ochsner, second vice president; Mrs. Charles D. Waterbury, recording secretary; Mrs. Edmund Joseph Tyler, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Grace Cooke De Camp, treasurer. Mrs. Edythe Pruyn Hall, librarian.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY by MME. Z.

Army and Navy League Ball Is Season's Success.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.]—One might have thought, from the zest with which Washingtonians danced through this week, that dancing really had been taboo during Lent and this was the feast after a long fast.

There were two tea dances and two charity balls on Monday. On Tuesday the Army Dancing class, which has been meeting at the Playhouse biweekly during the winter, wound up in a blaze of glory with a fancy dress leap year dance. On Thursday Admiral and Mrs. Clover gave a dance for their two daughters at Grasslands, the Chevy Chase Country club. On Friday Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Delano gave one at the Playhouse for their two daughters. And there were others of lesser importance. Of course there was the usual array of Easter week weddings and dinners, luncheons, and teas galore.

The Army and Navy league's ball on Monday night was one of the most successful in the history of the organization. The president and Mrs. Wilson were among the earliest arrivals, reaching the navy yard when few but the reception and floor committee had assembled. They were conducted in the primitive lift which does duty as a passenger elevator on festive occasions up to the top floor of the gunshop, which still bears its old time designation, "the sail loft," and installed in their box, where they could watch the gay scene at their ease.

They had with them purely a White House party—Mrs. Bolling, Miss Bolling, Miss Benham (who succeeded Miss Hagner as the White House social secretary), and Col. Harts, chief of the president's aids. For once Dr. Grayson was not in attendance. He is in New York for a few days, and it is confidently expected that when he returns the date of his marriage with Miss Gordon will be announced.

Mexican Crisis Annoying.

Mrs. Wilson looked particularly well in a gown of black velvet, with iridescent sequins, and a single splendid orchid in her corsage. She and the president both seemed greatly interested in the gay, colorful scene, and remained looking on for about an hour and a half, while admirals and ensigns, dowagers and debutantes danced in the flag decked sail loft to music furnished alternately by the Marine band and the band from the Mayflower.

The flags of all nations floated from the beams over the heads of the dancers, the colors of the central powers mingling amicably with those of the entente powers, to give official Washington a background as neutral in form as it was brilliant in tone.

A navy yard ball with men in uniform in the minority is something of an anomaly in Washington, where the uniforms of a floor committee composed of officers of the army, navy, and marine corps are usually regarded as an asset that makes largely for the success of any charity ball. But it is an anomaly to which the capital has been accustoming itself of late, inasmuch as no one has been able to reckon with any degree of certainty on the presence of the beaux of any branch of the service, and prospective best men at weddings have dropped out of reach almost overnight. Wedding dates have been advanced to make sure of the presence of the bridegroom.

The constant development of new angles to the perennial crisis and the ever imminent blowing off of the lid in Mexico not only interfere seriously with society's functions but are horribly inconsistent of society's sports. Thus a brilliant polo season had been promised, with the army men meeting all comers from the various country clubs and hunts. It had even been inaugurated down at Aiken, when Villa created a diversion down at Columbus, and the Fort Myer polo players were called back from their southern playground and shipped off to "somewhere in Mexico."

Polo and the army team are inseparable in the Washington mind. And yet Potomac park is so lovely now that Washington, smart and otherwise, has been turning out in force to watch the Washington team play.

The cherry trees, which are in full bloom now, are a constant memorial to Mrs. Taft, who got them there. Every one knows how the first shipment of cherry trees from the flowery kingdom had to be deported—or burned—because some undesirable aliens had taken their quarters in them, and the agricultural department would not admit them. And every one remembers both Mrs. Taft's disappointment and her satisfaction when the second shipment arrived, and its planting was made something of a ceremony.

Now one can't help hoping that the former mistress of the White House manages to get here some time when they are in bloom, for they are a sight to be remembered.

These, with the stretches of green turf at their feet, the river peacocking blue and green and bronze near by, the budding willows, and the golden forsythia, the pink and white pungency of the magnolias, the blue sky, with its scudding April clouds, make the background, across which tear the rangy little ponies and the men in their sporty toggery and their bright shirts, a picture, even if one knows no polo, worth going miles to see.

The other day, when the Aiken Tigers and the Washington team were playing a particularly lively game one didn't know whether Mrs. Preston Gibson, formerly Grace MacMillan, granddaughter of old Senator MacMillan of Michigan, or Mrs. Joe Leiter was the more distracted. Mrs Gibson had with her a small powder puff of a dog, Flip, who proved much elusive and caused his mistress much anxiety. Mrs. Leiter tried to keep her two small sons, Joe Jr. and Tommy, and little Billy Merriam, whom they had annexed, from under the flying feet of the ponies. The youngsters made a most attractive trio, the two sturdy little Leiters in blue serge and white collars and lines of small white buttons down their little tummies, and Billy Merriam a picture book child in green linen.

Kitty Kelly

There are still at large, so it is said, a few most lonely, solitary souls who have not yet learned the benefits to be secured from motion picture shows.

There are still a very, very few whose brain cells function queerly, who speak with cold disdain of the "movie" drama.

But for every one of these sad misanthropes there are a million others glad they are alive and who never let an opportunity go by to view the wonderful attractions that the motion picture screens are showing.

And because the motion picture art has grown so great, because it fills so high a place in modern life, you find high up within the galaxy of famous Tribune writers the motion picture critic, Kitty Kelly.

Every day throughout the week, excepting Sunday, Kitty Kelly's "Flickerings from Filmland" attract, inform and entertain Tribune readers by the scores of thousands.

She tells you all about the newest plays and how they're played.

She gives an added zest to every film you see because you know beforehand what it's all about, wherein its special virtue lies and how your favorite star fits in the part that he or she is playing.

MISS KITTY KELLY
The Tribune's Motion Picture Critic

She doesn't use as many ponderous polysyllabic parts of speech as Percy Hammond nor is she as cuttingly sarcastic as "B. L. T.," but every paragraph beams forth a cheerful brightness all its own, reflects the radiance of a brilliant mind that knows all filmdom and all filmdom's stars from A to Z.

of Fine Undergarments

ORIGINATIONS in undergarments have been many and varied during the last few years. It was not so long ago that muslin was considered the only possible material which could be used successfully.

Ever on the alert for new ideas, we were the first to realize that it was possible to develop the most attractive and practical undergarments in crepe de chine. Other innovations followed quickly, with the result that we now show wonderful assortments in Batiste, Charvet Satin, Regimental Silk, Georgette Crepe and Chiffon Cloth. French hand made and Philippine hand embroidered garments are also features of our department.

In the actual construction of all our garments an unswervingly watchful policy is carried out. The styles chosen are distinctive, and only the finest and most durable materials and trimmings are used.

Our garments are cut to fit perfectly and we give the same careful attention to detail, whether garments be priced $25 or $1.

LLOYD'S ENTIRE STOCK IN OUR BASEMENT ~ TUESDAY

For over forty years the Evan Lloyd Store has served Chicago faithfully and well, and so whenever one went there the aisles were crowded with throngs of shoppers—but for once they were not as alert as they should have been, and their building was leased by another concern. Try as they would, they could find no other building on State street large enough to house them, and so after forty years of successful merchandising they were forced to retire from business. Next Tuesday their entire stock, coats, suits, waists, millinery, clothing, shoes, dry goods of every sort, curtains, rugs, etc., etc., will be placed on sale in Our Basement at prices that will astonish all Chicago, for we must dispose of this huge stock just as quickly as possible. An announcement that will bring all Chicago down here next Tuesday to share in the matchless economies. "See Monday Evening's Papers for the Bargain News.

The Boston Store's Wagon at Your Neighbor's Door Means That the Package Being Delivered is Paid For.

Most everyone in Chicago knows that ours is the only large establishment in America that buys and sells strictly for cash—and that means values such as no other store can equal. Why don't you shop here just once and see for yourself?

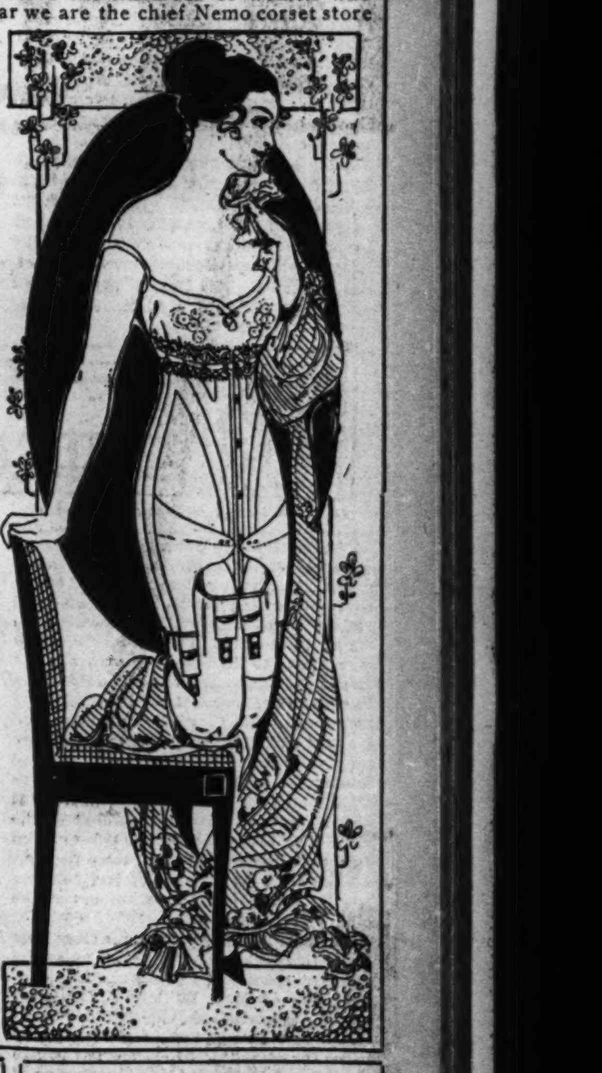
Nemo Week at Our Corset Store

—Third Floor—Center—

Year after year, for the past thirteen years, Nemo Week has found this great corset store best prepared of any in America to properly serve the hundreds of women who then decide to try Nemo corsets—and again this year we are the chief Nemo corset store in Chicago. Nemo corsets are designed not alone to bring the fashionable lines which every woman looks for first of all, but also health and comfort.



Nemo corsets must be properly fitted to give the benefit of their great superiority. No where else in all America can you find a fitting service to equal ours.

Each of our corsetieres is a graduate of the Nemo Hygienic Fashion Institute, and can explain scientifically why she selects a certain model for your particular figure. Not alone are Nemo corsets made in enough models to fit and help every figure, from the very slender to the very stout, but in Chicago all the models can be found here only, so that there is no need for us to substitute, as so many corsetieres do. For this peerless fitting service no extra charge is made.

Come Nemo Week and learn "self help." Physicians and surgeons agree that women require the support of a good corset. The muscles of the abdomen in most cases are not strong enough alone to support the organs in their proper position. A woman who is badly corseted is apt to acquire weight and a prominent abdomen. The abdominal organs are likely to drop out of place and serious discomfort and ill health may ensue.

Nemo corsets give the chest and lungs absolute freedom, for they do not compress the diaphragm. Nemo corsets support the abdomen and the back. During the topless corset period women fell into bad habits of sitting and standing, and their figure slumped. They developed round shoulders and pads of fat under their shoulder blades. Nemo corsets correct this condition.

Churches Plan Daily Vacation Bible Schools.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

PLANNING for daily vacation Bible schools is one of the first of the after Easter activities in the Chicago churches. While the Bible vacation schools will not begin their sessions until after the summer vacation of the public schools begins, active preparation for the schools has already begun. The churches in which the schools will be held must be definitely fixed and the teachers selected and trained.

Emerson O. Bradshaw, 5829 Maryland avenue, is superintendent of the interdenominational work for Chicago. Among those on the board of directors who are assisting Mr. Bradshaw are the Rev. John Timothy Stone, Fourth Presbyterian church; Dean Shailer Mathews of the University of Chicago; L. Wilbur Messer, general secretary of the Young Men's Christian association; John R. Leonard, the Bridge and Leonard commission; and Edwin C. Larned of the Gramm Commercial Car company.

"Last year," said Mr. Bradshaw, "there were 10,000 Chicago children helped by the daily vacation Bible schools. This year we expect the number to be increased to a total of 15,000.

"One of the new features which will be carried out this year, if the money comes in, will be the giving of country outings. The boys and girls will be taken in relays for a week into the country.

"There are to be swimming parties formed and the beaches on Lake Michigan and the swimming pools in the parks will be utilized.

"While the schools give good drill in Bible study and in the making of useful articles, such as hammocks, baskets, wagons, and toys, yet there is such careful attention to the recreational life that most children welcome the sessions of the schools as a happy period of outings, picnics, games, sports, swimming parties, kite flying, cross city hikes, while they look upon the manual training as almost equally pleasurable. They regard getting out of the dusty alleys and hot homes into the large, cool churches as a relief, and they enjoy the companionship of the children they meet there as a pleasant change."

Marengo, Ill., Presbyterian church has, in its membership, an elder who has held office continuously for fifty-nine years and who has been recently reëlected. He is 81 years old and leads the singing in the Sunday school. He is chairman of young people's work in the Freeport presbytery. He is Dr. C. C. Miller, a national authority on bee culture, being departmental editor of the Standard dictionary and writer for leading journals on this subject.

The Rev. E. O. Guerrant of Kentucky, well known in Chicago, died on Wednesday night at the home of his daughter in Douglas, Ga. Dr. Guerrant was widely known, especially in the south, on account of his activities in mission work among the highlanders of Kentucky, Virginia, Tennessee, and the Carolinas. Born at Mount Sterling, Ky., he was educated at Center college before the civil war, served through the war in Morgan's command, and was then educated as a physician at Bellevue Medical college, New York.

After practicing medicine a few years he studied theology and entered the Presbyterian ministry. He organized about twenty years ago, and up to the time of his death was the moving spirit in the American Inland Mission, or Society of Soul Winners. The funeral services will be held at Wilmore, Ky., the old homestead.

The Rev. David Nyvall

The Rev. D. Nyvall is president of the North Park college, located at 3417 Foster avenue, which will dedicate today a gymnasium and music school. The college is also celebrating its silver jubilee, for it was established in 1891 in Minneapolis and was soon after brought to Chicago, where it now occupies a campus of eight and a half acres. Dr. Nyvall was the founder of the college, although for a period of years he was engaged in educational work in other institutions. He was for two years professor of Scandinavian languages in the Chicago Theological seminary (Congregational).

The dedication began last evening with a concert under the direction of Frank Earnest. Gustaf Holmquist was soloist and the Rev. C. J. Andrews the speaker. Today at 3 o'clock the festival chorus, with C. E. Lutton as soloist, will sing. The speakers will be the Rev. E. J. Hjerpe, the Rev. F. M. Johnston, and President A. Andreen. In the evening the Rev. J. A. Hultman will sing, Mrs. Cedargreen-Jernberg will play the violin and H. L. Condy the cornet. The speakers will be Supt. Hjerpe and the Rev. A. Bergstedt. Tomorrow afternoon there will be an athletic exhibition with singing by Lyran. In the evening Dr. Theodore Roberg, J. V. King, physical director Dr. Sandahl, and Dr. Werelius will speak, and there will be music by Lyran and the North Park concert band.

The new building cost about $35,000 and was furnished by the Swedish Evangelical Mission Covenant. It is 52x121 feet. There is a swimming tank and all needed athletic equipment. The main floor, where the dedicatory exercises will be held, will accommodate about 1,000. The music school occupies several rooms in the building. David Edstrom, the Swedish sculptor, will be one of the distinguished guests at the dedication.

Services in the new building of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, will be held today at 10:45 a. m., 3:30 and 7:45 p. m. Sunday school at 12:10. The church is located at Oak Park avenue and Ontario street. A testimony meeting will be held next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Meetings will be held hereafter on Sundays at 10:45 and 7:45.

"The Challenge of the Unfinished Task" will be the subject of the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick at the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall tonight. He recently resigned his influential pastorate in the First Baptist church of Montclair, N. J., to accept a professorship in Union Theological seminary. Since 1908 he had been an instructor in homiletics at the seminary, of which he is himself a graduate.

Dr. Fosdick is one of the most successful among the younger preachers of the country. He has been especially popular at the universities, such as Yale, Princeton, Cornell, and elsewhere. While here he will serve as preacher at the University of Chicago for two Sundays. In addition to his pulpit ability Dr. Fosdick has written a number of books on religious themes. He has a brother equally well known, Raymond B. Fosdick, former city official in New York and the man who made the recent investigation of the Rockefeller Foundation among the police systems of Europe.

Norman Williams of Chalmers & Williams, trustee of the club, will serve as scripture reader. Under the direction of O. Gordon Erickson the Sunday Evening club choir will sing three anthems. There will also be an organ recital by Mrs. Katherine Howard Ward.

The three district conferences of the Chicago Congregational churches will unite Tuesday in their annual conference at the Warren Avenue Congregational church, Warren avenue and Robey street, of which the Rev. J. A. Jenkins is pastor. Among the speakers will be the Rev. Harry E. Fosdick of the First Baptist church, Montclair, N. J., and George W. J. Coleman of Boston, former president of the World's Advertising clubs.

Some of the Chicago delegates who are attending the missionary congress in Washington, D. C., which closes tonight, are: F. J. Michel, Edward P. Bailey, E. M. Bowman, Andrew McLeish, E. H. Pitkin, W. F. Hypes, E. T. Harris, Sampson Rogers, Dean Shailer Mathews, Prof. F. C. Eiselen, the Rev. Charles Bayard Mitchell, the Rev. J. Y. Aitchison, the Rev. A. S. C. Clarke, C. F. Congleton, A. B. Mead, Gelmer Kniper, George U. Brown, F. K. Vial, Wade Fetzer.

Tomorrow night the "new church" campaign of the Unity Evangelical Lutheran church will close. An effort is being made to complete a fund of $25,000 with which to begin the construction of a new church to replace the one located at Balmoral and Magnolia avenues. About $22,000 has been subscribed and it is expected the balance will be raised by tomorrow night. A Victory army has been organized, composed of a boys' and girls' brigade, minute men's corps, ladies' aid regiment, and a young people's phalanx.

A William Spooner memorial fund is being gathered by the woman's class of the First Congregational church of Oak Park in recognition of the late Mr. Spooner's service as a teacher of the class for thirty-seven years. The fund will become a part of the endowment fund of the Chicago City Missionary society, in which he was deeply interested.

The national Bahai congress and annual convention which opened at the Auditorium hotel last evening, will continue until Tuesday evening. Today at 3 o'clock in the banquet hall of the hotel will be held a universal peace meeting, when the principles proclaimed by Baha'o'llah and Abdul-Baha, the practice of which is intended to insure world peace, will be explained by delegates. On tomorrow and Tuesday evenings the constructive social, economic, and religious principles for which the Bahai movement stands will be emphasized. The theme of the annual convention is the Mashrak-el-Askar, the universal house of worship, which Bahais propose to build in Wilmette for the purpose of affording a place where representatives of all of the religions of the world may meet in harmony and fellowship to worship one God.

The Rev. H. Nelson Hall succeeds the Rev. W. E. Danforth in the Union church, Elmhurst. The Rev. Mr. Hall is a Presbyterian minister and is the fifth Presbyterian minister to become pastor of a union church. The Rev. Albert Joseph McCartney, pastor of the Kenwood Evangelical church, Greenwood avenue and Forty-sixth street, is another one of the Presbyterian ministers serving a union church.

The Pilgrim Temple Baptist church received a gift of $250 on condition that the church would raise $250 more for the purpose of erecting an infirmary and guest house at Jorhat, Assam. Four hundred dollars of the amount has been paid and the other $100 will be paid in the near future. The church will have a roll call of its membership and a fellowship dinner at the church the evening of May 31. The Rev. Joseph C. Dent is pastor.

The Rev. Frank Anderson, superintendent of the Baptist executive council, will speak this evening at the Park Manor and Brookline Sunday Evening club.

The Rev. Charles W. Gilkey, pastor of the Hyde Park Baptist church, Chicago, will be the university preacher at Cornell university Ithaca, N. Y., today.

The Lord's Day alliance has designated this week as Lord's day week and has invited the pastors to recognize either today or next Sunday the subject of the proper observance of the Sabbath. The request was sent out by the general offices at 203 Broadway, New York.

The Rev. Johnston Myers of the Immanuel Baptist church will speak at the opening services of the remodeled Baptist church, Toulon, Ill., next Thursday. The rededicatory services will continue each night, including next Sunday.

Next Friday has been appointed by Pope Benedict XV. a day of prayer in behalf of peace. The petition, it is said, originated among a number of distinguished Spanish women. Pope Benedict has granted a plenary indulgence for a general communion throughout the world accompanied by a prayer for the holy father's intention.

Weather Puts Crimp in Gay Easter Parade.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Spring is in bad repute with the fashionable world of New York this week. It must be admitted she failed to come to the scratch, for Easter skies were overcast, as if the uncertainty of international affairs had in some subtle way communicated itself to the weather.

In consequence the Easter parade was something of a disappointment and was largely an affair of taxicabs and raincoats. There was an absence of bright colors, attributed by experts to the threatening weather in some degree, but it nevertheless was evidence that striking shades do not predominate in the attire decreed for smart womankind this spring.

Despite the cold of the day many women braved pneumonia and were seen in Fifth avenue in the new one piece "coat dresses," wearing only a cross or silver fox boa about the neck. These dresses are an effective style novelty because they are almost fitted to the figure, but those who wore them looked shivery last Sunday. The only gay coloring seen in woman's garb was an occasional poppy or rose covered turban or a violent straw hat. The only real spring note was the corsage bouquets, the prettiest of which were composed of a big sheaf of lilies of the valley with small pink roses pinned just below.

Few members of fashionable New York society were seen in the Easter parade, but then it is said that it is no longer fashionable to be seen in it, since the public began to take such an interest. Probably the lure of the golf courses and country clubs was too much for Fifth avenue. In any event most of the younger set were conspicuous by their absense.

Mr. and Mrs. Finley J. Shepard (the latter of whom was Miss Helen Gould) were out and were actually seen holding hands while walking home from church. Mrs. W. Goadby Loew, named one season as the best dressed woman at Newport, and her daughter, Barbara, were among those who displayed Easter finery of somber hue. Mrs. Loew wore a tailored hat of blue and a dark suit. Miss Barbara's coat was of blue and her hat was trimmed with checkerboard ribbons. Mrs. James A. Roosevelt wore a loose short coat of black, the collar and cuffs of which matched her skirt. This was made of a checked material of black and white, sprinkled with tiny spots of orange.

"Little Season" Begins.

However, the drabness of Easter Sunday is already a thing of the past and all thoughts are directed to the brilliance of the week's social happenings, for the "little season" is in full swing once more. Quite the most important event of the week was the entertainment given in the residence of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, 660 Fifth avenue, last Tuesday night, in aid of the destitute in Venice. While I did not attend the entertainment itself I did see the dress rehearsal and had the privilege of seeing Miss Barbara Rutherford, the daughter of Mrs. Vanderbilt, whose engagement to Mr. Cyril Hatch has just been announced, take part in one of the tableaux. As I mentioned in this column a week ago, the tableaux represented famous paintings of the Venetian school. Miss Rutherford posed in Giorgione's "Madonna Enthroned." Her fiancé assisted in the tableaux as a rather unconvincing monk, who, with an armored soldier, stands guard in the Italian painter's famous masterpiece at the base of the pedestal on which sits the Madonna.

The entire receipts of the entertainment will be sent to Venice, as the expense of the costly costuming has been met by the participants themselves.

Easter brings its annual sheaf of engagements and weddings. If the most important of the former was that of Miss Rutherford, the most interesting of the latter is the wedding which took place on Thursday evening last of Miss Irene Langhorne Gibson to Mr. George B. Post Jr. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson.

More Spring Romances.

The war still continues to bring additional romances. Last week it was announced that Miss Sylvia Wilder of New York, daughter of Col. Wilbur Elliott Wilder, U. S. A., now with the Fifth U. S. cavalry in Mexico, is to become the bride of Lieut. Alvary F. Gascoigne of the Coldstream guards, now with the British forces in France and a son of Col. Frederick Richard Thomas Trench Gascoigne, D. S. O., Lotherton hall, Yorkshire, and Craignish castle, Argyleshire, and a veteran of several wars.

Another young New York society girl has decided to ally herself to an Austrian family of noble lineage. On May 29 the marriage will take place of Miss Maud Coster, daughter of Mrs. Charles Henry Coster, to Count Otto Salm-Hoogstraeten, a member of the Austrian nobility. Count Salm has lived in New York for some time and is well known in society. Two of his brothers are with the Austrian troops.

We count that week lost entirely which does not bring some new foreigners of distinction to look in on us. This really is getting to be a department in itself. The newest arrival is the Earl of Limerick. Naturally the earl is a bit of a poet. Here is the chorus of a marching song which the earl admits having written for the London Irish:

Cheer, boys, cheer; we're London Irish,
  Shout out this message across the sea.
We will come to teach the Hun
How to show his heels and run,
  And go with the boys to Berlin on the spree.

The third verse is equally inspiriting. The earl's name is William Henry Esmond de Veer Sheaffe Pery. This is his first visit to America, the object of which is to see his granddaughter, who is only nine months old. The earl's daughter, Lady Victoria Pery, is Mrs. James Cox Brady.

Distinguished Dogs Arrive.

Lieut. Theodore Marburg Jr., the young Baltimore aviator, who suffered the loss of his right leg as the result of an accident while flying in the service of the British army, was another arrival. He brought with him his bride, who was the Belgian Baroness Giselle de Bivario. Young Marburg was in the hospital for several weeks after his accident and was married on April 10 to the baroness, in historic Netley, England, in the Church of Edward the Confessor. His father, Theodore Marburg, was former minister to Belgium.

Among the distinguished dogs recently arriving from England were six pedigreed Pomeranians, all veterans of Zeppelin raids in London. They belong to the Misses Charlotte and Luella Navratil. The young women have lived in London since 1901 and are ardent Pom fanciers. In Huntingdonshire, England, they have a place with a little cemtery for those of their dogs that pass into the higher dog life. It seems these blue blooded dogs do not take the Zeppelin raids as unconcernedly as the English are said to do and after repeated visits from the aircraft the doggies communicated to their mistresses their urgent demand that they be taken to some neutral and less nerve wracking nation.

Mr. Reginald C. Vanderbilt will divide his time between Newport and Southampton, L. I., this season, having leased a cottage at the latter place.

New Discovery Makes Superfluous Hairs Vanish

The fashions of today have made the removal of hairs from arms, under arms and ankles an absolute necessity. Women who are afflicted with these unsightly growths will find it one of the easiest things to do to remove these superfluous hairs. It is no longer a problem or a danger. The newly discovered removes these hairs by dissolving them. It does not burn the hairs off like pastes and powders do. It is easy to use, will remove the coarsest hairs and soft "down" or "fuzz" in a few minutes, and it will not harm the most delicate skin. It is the most scientific hair remover ever discovered. Sulfo Solution is sold by all drug and department stores at $1.00 per bottle, or direct by mail from the Cooper Pharmacal Co., 330 Thompson Building, Chicago, Ill.

POWDER IN SHOES AS WELL AS GUNS

Foot=Ease to Be Added to Equipment of Hospital Corps at Fort Wayne.

Under the above heading the Detroit Free Press, among other things says: "The theory is that soldiers whose feet are in good condition can walk further and faster than soldiers who have corns and bunions incased in rawhide.

The Government's foot powder order is regarded as the last word in the scientific outfitting of the defenders of the flag."

The English, French and Allied Troops constantly make use of Allen's Foot—Ease. It takes the friction from the shoe and rests the feet. Foot Powder, shaken into the shoes of soldiers, has long been in use in the German army, and Uncle Sam's adoption of this form of treating and easing the feet, emphasizes the testimony of the millions of people the world over, who are shaking Allen's Foot—Ease, the antiseptic powder, into their shoes, and using it in the foot bath, as the only practical and lasting treatment to ease and prevent sore feet. Sold by Drug and Department stores everywhere, 25c. Sample sent FREE. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y., U. S. A.

The New Home Sale

ABOUT Three Hundred Thousand people in the city of Chicago will begin adapting themselves and their furniture to new homes now. About One Million more are trying now to make their old homes look more beautiful.

All of this means the immediate expenditure of a great deal of cash—if you pay cash.

And if you pay cash at a time like this you will certainly be short of cash at a later time.

That is the purpose of Credit—to extend obligation over a period of time in order that the immediate demand for cash may not be too great.

People who put up twenty story buildings extend their obligation by the sale of bonds. Companies issue stocks. The Government borrows money and gives its notes. The whole 20th Century fabric of business is interwoven with Credit. No great progress could be possible without it.

SO it is with Personal Needs. No great comfort or luxury or quick improvement in adding to the pleasure of one's life would be possible without it.

The great Spiegel Buying Power, controlling as it does the purposes of thirty-two of the largest furniture stores in twenty-eight of the largest American cities, actually brings its credit prices lower than what you ordinarily have to pay in cash stores.

Therefore, it is not only a convenience to use the Buying Power of the Spiegel Institution, but it is actually a saving to do so.

The Spiegel Personal Credit is extended to all. Hundreds of thousands of customers have been on our books, and our business is larger than it ever has been, which proves that the Service we rendered them must have been good.

We want you to know that your Personal Credit is good at Spiegel's, and that you are welcome to all these excellent values upon the payment of a few dollars in cash.

FASHION'S GUIDE POSTS

A charming new embroidered batiste collar, is made in jabot effect, and clasps at the throat with a crocheted button.

Distinctly original is a blouse of figured crepe, with the pattern brought out in vivid color. There is a square georgette crepe yoke and a collar and deep cuffs.

To carry with one's mesh bag, there is a tiny mesh change purse, gold finished, with a plain bar top which opens in the form of a square and has a jeweled clasp.

A most attractive adjunct to the boudoir dressing table, is a combination bottle and atomizer for perfume. The bottle is hand painted in a floral design and wound with fancy gold cord. The rubber tube and bulb can be adjusted when desired.

Sport togs derive their inspirations from the most unexpected sources. A new set—hat and parasol—that is gay, "circusy" but most captivating, is in white, with big, vividly colored polka dots, outlined in black, and placed irregularly. The Panama hat is faced with black velvet.

Softly becoming new feather boas are made in two toned effects, and have long silk tassels.

Georgette crepe, with a vestee, collar and lower puffed sleeve of net—the whole trimmed with bands of batiste embroidered in colors. A most enticing spring blouse.

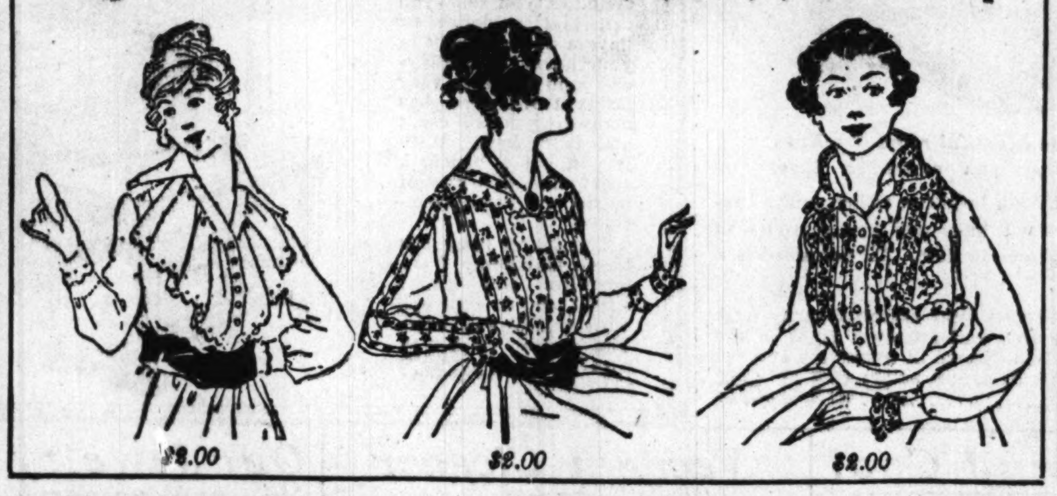
For the kiddies, there are Mother Goose dresses with various rhymes printed on cretonne in bright colors. A guimpe to wear with each, is in a white novelty material.

Of course the wee folks always have a pocket—and of course they must also have a "hankey" to put in it. Cunning little white ones have pictures outlined or seed embroidered in one corner.

A Great May Sale of Blouses

An Event for Which We Have Been Planning for Many Weeks

Lingerie Blouses at $2.00, $2.50, $2.95, $3.50 and Up



Summer Furs

The wonderful vogue of Furs for summer which was so surprising and so attractive last season, bids fair to be exceeded this year.

To date, there has been but little demand for them outside of New York and Atlantic City, but there the demand amounts to a craze.

The Furs which are most favored are Kolinsky, Mole and Ermine, while the Fox Skins of last year, although not new, are also worn.

The long, flat Stole is the most popular type, but newer are the various sorts of small Shoulder Capes, which are really fascinating.

There are old-fashioned Collarettes, which differ only in the collar from those of years ago. Then there is a Triangle of Fur either in Mole or Ermine, perfectly flat—the idea is that you catch hold of two ends of it and fasten them in front at the waistline, and let the other ends hang down in a point in back. Being absolutely flat as it is, it stands away from the neck in the fashion of the season.

Musings on Shakespeare and the Motion Pictures.

By Percy Hammond.

BY way of emphasizing the frequently expressed belief that our theatrical managers lack the commercial spirit, being inexpert in the tricks of salesmanship, the two notable press agent achievements of the year may be cited. Miss May Irwin, a comedienne of considerable prestige, filled the newspapers of America with herself some time ago by advocating in a letter to the President the enlargement of his cabinet to include a portfolio of laughter. She volunteered to serve in that capacity without wage and submitted some of the lines of the comedy which at that time engaged her, as evidence of her qualifications. Whereupon a week later the play whose name is forgotten, ceased to exist because nobody went to see it.

Col. Selig, the polyscope man, planning a series of Shakespearean photoplays, sought recently to acquaint the public with the existence of those dramas through the customary legerdemain of the movie maker. He caused our judiciary to perform strange, chattering antics upon its bench and solemnly to give judgment in a matter that was brazenly and openly an ingenious jest. Reams were printed in newspapers about Shakespeare and about Bacon, who wrote his plays, about the lives and the works of both, with pictures, interviews, and quotations. Within two days every one knew of Shakespeare; and that the frigid wisdom of the Circuit court had decreed him to have been that most popular figure in the American theater, a successful fakir. Therefore, at the Fine Arts last week, when motion pictures of this fascinating charlatan were exhibited under the auspices of the Drama league, there was no attendance.

Col. Selig, when his Shakespearean season begins, will find, perhaps, that he has spilled the beans. Unless he dilutes the Shakespearean titles with alluring subcaptions as in the case of "Carmen, or Throwing the Bull," he may find that there is something that will keep people away from the movies. Merchants in other lines of business, it seems, advertise differently; at least they do not boast of the weaknesses of their product. One fears that Shakespeare in the movies will be about as popular as Mr. Chaplin would be in the Memorial theater at Stratford.

Mr. Taylor in "The Line o' Type" expresses a soaring contempt for this neighborhood's taste in plays, and he wonders why anything "worth while" like "Major Barbara" ever comes to such a benighted backwater. There are two occasions where I can jostle Mr. Taylor on his pedestal of scorn—one of them as he kills his engine at State and Madison, the other as he utters sneers at our attitude toward the theater. Mr. Taylor should know, being one of those "worth while" fellows, that Mr. Shaw is not neglected hereabouts. We go to see his plays in numbers profitable to him, and we talk about him more than about all the other playwrights combined. McClurg's, Morris', and other bookshops tell me that they sell more of the plays of Shaw than they do those of Percy Mackaye, George Cohan, Pinero, Granville Barker, Joseph Medill Patterson, Edward Sheldon, and David Belasco put together.

"Androcles and the Lion" is the only Shaw comedy that has failed to pay its way in Chicago, when presented under normal auspices, and the reason for the public defection in that case was that it was too funny and obvious for the "worth while" set, and too subtle and baffling for the others. I was one of thirty at a performance of Shaw's "Messaliance" at the Haymarket in London several years ago. "Mrs. Warren's Profession" was jeered at in Paris, and "Widower's House" was much more of a fiasco everywhere than Mr. Taylor thinks "Major Barbara" will be here. Mr. Taylor has heard of no crowds ever attending "The Philanderer" or "Emperor and Gallilean" even in culturous centers. "Arms and the Man" was the apotheosis of inertia until it was set to music by a waltz king. Speculators elsewhere were never enriched by "You Never Can Tell," and "Candida" was more popular in Chicago than it was in London. "The Devil's Disciple" was patronized when Mr. Mansfield played it at the Grand Opera house by crowds double those which attended it in Boston, Philadelphia, or New York.

Besides, Mr. Taylor has the native easterner's impatience with a civilization that is in the throes of formation. He ought to realize that we are busy in the acquisition of an Aquarium, and that our thrifty philanthropists are pondering whether they should bestow upon that institution a fish or a quart of water. He should know that we are building (academically) great channels for underground transportation, and a great boulevard link; that we are (more or less) evolving as a substitute for the glories of a wonderful lake shore, such improvements as may be made by the Illinois Central in an already perfect combination of beauty and utility. He should regard our bridges and our river front as material for our esthetic energy, and he should feel that we have done much when we put upon the four corners of the city hall the star spangled banner in electric lights. We have been making our streets clean and smooth, our surface cars comfortable, numerous, and convenient; our atmosphere clear and sweet smelling, and our Grant park in summer a sort of sticky flypaper for indigent hobos itinerant from less hospitable points. Yet we find the time, the inclination, and the money to patronize the plays of Mr. Shaw, which debate the vague problems of the earth.

I wish that Carl Sandberg or Mrs. Aldis or William Anthony McGuire would write a drama about the Rush street bridge, or about the Clark street cars at 3 a. m. or at 3 p. m., or about the general aspect of material life as it is lived in this vicinity by the supine and patient inhabitants thereof. Then I should adopt the attitude of the local cognoscenti toward "The Weavers," and give it three hearty cheers. The trouble with B. L. T. is that he doesn't often go to the theater. He doesn't know that Mr. Sutro's play cited by him as an example of our neglect was one of the season's big successes here, and that "Rio Grande" and "A Pair of Silk Stockings" were much better than it was, even if he didn't see them.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter.

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—On the outer walls of the Rialto theater, our newest "temple of the motion picture," they have hung an electric banner that, after the approved fashion of such things, does tricks.

From a revolving circle of colored lights this banner shoots a succession of skyrockets toward the roof. The first one ends in a burst of color and the letter "R," the second "I," and so on until the full name of the theater is spelled out. After which it hiccoughs brightly for a moment and is gone.

The sign is intended, of course, to attract attention to the temple, but as one observant young person has discovered, it may also serve another purpose—it may help direct the course of befuddled mariners tossing aimlessly about the Atlantic ocean. Of such is the white way made up.

Inside its generous doors, however, the temple is truly modest and rather attractive. We were forced to succumb to that common but always interesting journalistic practice of marveling at the style of the opening performance. Here were gathered 2,000 persons, mostly dressed to the limit of the ordinary income to help welcome the newest movie, where two or three years ago you could not have hired so many of them to so much as look at one.

Here was a string of motor cars that baffled the gentlemen of the traffic squad employed in keeping things moving around Times Square, and the list of those present submitted for publication contained the names of hundreds of our most prominent citizens. There have been many nights at the opera with fewer notables present and fewer "gleaming shoulders" exposed, and never have we seen more jewelry on parade.

If the movie has achieved this distinction in three years, or five at the most, what will it do in ten? If it is a profitable investment to erect a "temple" to the motion picture on one of the most expensive corners in New York (the Rialto stands on the site of the old Hammerstein Victoria at Forty-second street and Seventh avenue) and in the heart of the theater district, what of the future? For, understand, this is not a convertible theater. It is not a theater at all save in the sense of being 2,000 seats surrounded by four walls. It has no stage and no scenery. It is built exclusively for the display of motion pictures. Where the stage would have been there is nothing but the orchestra pit and a back wall, divided by Ionic pillars into three sections. There is a painted scene of hills and the sea when the three sets of red plush curtains are drawn. Above these curtained views is a dome, ivory tinted and glass set so that the changing lights may play some part in directing the moods of the audience.

These lights range from the brightness of the sun to the deep greens of the sea, thus heightening certain of the picture effects—as when the handsome hero pushes his way through the Los Angeles wildwood and meets "HER" at the edge of a shimmering pond the blue moonlight invades the full auditorium. And when the dastardly savages set fire to the thatched village the accompanying glow of red is not only on the screen but on the bald heads of the orchestra circle as well.

Red, incidentally, is the dominating color scheme of the new house. The seats are upholstered in it, the carpets and draperies reflect it, and the members of the orchestra, forty-odd in number, wear red velvet studio coats. There are turbaned orientals from Second avenue to direct the ladies to the powder boxes and a corps of first aid ushers who carry swagger sticks and are able to revive fainting patrons at any time of the day or night. Service, in fact, is the watchword of the temple, and in this particular most of the older theaters have much to learn from the newer rivals.

The honor of being the first star exhibited fell to Mr. Douglas Fairbanks, our favorite screen hero. The comedy was provided by Mr. "Fatty" Arbuckle of the custard pie school. Mr. Fairbanks was the hard riding, straight shooting protagonist of an imaginative western drama, "The Good Bad Man."

This Easter week, there was but one new attraction and three revivals. Margaret Anglin, pleased with the success of "Lady Windermere's Fan" last spring, is to try another Wilde play, "A Woman of No Importance," this year, with Holbrook Blinn her featured partner. Arnold Daly, flying with characteristic nonchalance into the face of a more or less fixed prejudice, dares to revive "Beau Brummel" and challenge comparison with a still strong memory of Richard Mansfield.

E. H. Sothern, preparing to sail for England, has promised to stay over a fortnight and give benefit performances of "If I Were King," devoting his share of the proceeds to the Actors' Fund.

The newcomer is a musical play called "Come to Bohemia," which has been financed by thirty angels at a cost per angel of $1,000. These gentlemen include many of those who are subscribers to the opera and the Russian ballet fund, and who were interested in the New theater. They are a willing crew of financiers sincerely interested in the stage and willing to venture a thousand or two now and again whenever their representatives, closer to the inner circle of showmen than they are, report favorably upon a venture.

They, or a part of the same crowd, advanced $15,000 to guarantee Granville Barker's season with "Androcles and the Lion," and they have also guaranteed Sir Herbert Tree against loss during a reasonable run for his Shakespearean season at the New Amsterdam. With both these English ventures, however, they have been quite lucky. Barker made money, and Tree is making it almost as fast.

These gentlemen are also interested in a current revival of "The Tempest," which has brought back to the Century most of the art staff that ruled that playhouse when it tried to become a national theater.

John Corbin, erstwhile literary director, and Louis Calvert, director of classical productions, have staged the comedy fantasy in a sort of practical Elizabethan manner. The stage, with the apron slightly extended over the orchestra pit, is divided into the familiar three sections. The ship scene is played in a half light, with rope ladders leading from the stage proper to the balcony above it to give a suggestion of the wreck. The storm is as fierce as thunder sheets can make it, and the panic of the crew and the conspirators does the rest in supplying the illusion. The scenes on the island are played before plain curtains, and Prospero's cave is suggested by a painted rock or two at the juncture of the inner stage and a fringe of trees outside.

To the honor of all settlement houses be it recorded that the first performance on any stage of a particularly strong and vivid drama written by Lord Dunsany has just been presented by the players of the Neighborhood house here at their theater in Grand street. "Night at an Inn" is the title.

Earlier in the season these same experienced amateurs gave Dunsany's "Glittering Gate," and sent the young Irish author, who had gone to Belgium to fight for England, flashlight views of the production. So pleased was he that he recently forwarded them the script of his newest play that they might be the first to present it.

"Night at an Inn" is a colorful dramatic bit, during which three sailors and a down-at-the-heels English gentleman, hounded around the world after having stolen a great ruby from the headpiece of an Indian god, find themselves in an English inn trying to outwit three priests who have followed them.

The Englishman, the brains of the gang, sits as a bait and the sailors pretend to leave the room. One by one the priests sneak up on their victim and are promptly murdered by the hidden sailors. When the third is killed there is great rejoicing, interrupted by the ominous tramp of the horrendous god himself.

While they stand petrified he recovers the jewel, resets it in his forehead, and then, one by one, the robbers are drawn out through the door to an unknown doom. Very creepy and powerfully effective. It was the Hull house settlement players in Chicago who gave the first performance of Galsworthy's "Justice" in America. BURNS MANTLE.

Wherein the Movie Musician Resuscitates a Lovely Art.

By Eric De Lamarter.

WHICH contingent started it may not be told. But about the time Easter church music was a day old there was pilgrimage to a nickel movie theater on Madison street. It may have been one agency or it may have been the other, but the result was not at all in doubt. There was great discomfort and violent reaction against the whole art of organ playing.

If you glanced over the one and a half pages of Easter programs published in THE TRIBUNE one week ago today you may have been struck by the prevalence of "arrangements." If at the theater you thought about the matter at all during the classic antics of one Charles Chaplin, who seems to be the John Sebastian Bach of the "movies," you must have wondered at the eerie noises induced by the man who milked the organ keys. It may be a coincidence, but there comes to hand at this moment the program of an organ dedicatory recital at the New Regent theater on South Halsted street. Richard Wagner's works, "The Rosary," and an opera overture by Rossini comprise the schedule. According to the latest information neither Rossini, Wagner, nor Nevin ever wrote anything for the instrument. But it is possible always to learn.

These matters are not exactly pertinent, however. They are the preamble. What is pertinent is the art of improvisation. This is the very touchstone of the movie organist's trade. Does the heroine weep? Ah, the Vox Humana, otherwise known to the profession as the "choir of bleating sheep!" Do transports of convulsive shoulders and spasmodic grins seize the hero and the lady of his choice? Squirts of chromatic runs, and epileptic chords, fortissimo, and, maybe, the bells jangle "Hear dem bells?" or a phrase from "Lohengrin." No theater orchestra ever got more shudders out of Eliza's crossing the ice than that organist got out of me when the escaped convict gloated over his unconscious prey. It was indescribable. It is not known to the profession. If it were this town would "go dry" on suspicion next Monday morning.

But let us deal with this topic as a serious business proposition. The movie theaters felt the need of supplementary music. An orchestra of sufficient size is preposterous on the count of the usual admission tariff. The modern organ, thanks to the skill of the men who build these intricate mechanisms, is a very fair substitute. Therefore the crux of the matter is the capability of the manipulator. His test, further, is his facility at improvisation.

What does this mean? It means a quick judgment of effects of various timbres; the ability to catch a mood "on the wing," so to speak; the most diabolical skill in changing from that mood to another; and inexhaustible fantasy, and an equally inexhaustible technique of extempore playing—which includes a knowledge of "form" so thoroughly comprehended that it is instinctive.

When you think that the masters of improvization, the men who have left traditions of virtuosity as ex tempore players may be counted on the fingers you will realize the hope recently expressed by a writer in an erudite magazine that the "movies" would raise up a race of giants in a singularly inept generation. There was once an organist in this town who could improvise, but he moved to New York. He was trained in the only accredited "school" of extempore playing, after the Paris Conservatoire method.

For improvization is not the art of being a willing victim for extraneous "inspiration." It is scientific spontaneity. The extemporization of six-part fugues is accredited to Bach; Mozart, Beethoven, Liszt were among the masters of this art; Saint-Saëns, to come down to our own day, the late Alexandre Guilmant, Eugene Gigout, and Charles Marie Widor are probably the best known among French musicians; Anton Bruckner was an inveterate; Straube possibly ranks among the Germans.

To hear such men, sure, logical, rich in imagination, as they branch out from tentative suggestions into full blown melodies; who putter over, and study, and draw into strange shapes their chosen theme as a sculptor his clay; who run themselves into strange mazes, only to be saved by ready wit and a coldly cerebral daring; who happen upon the chance of a sudden and strange effect, and are mentally so well poised that they can grasp it—this is the art whose stepbrother is the "movie" organist.

Freakish things interrupt this spontaneity sometimes; our extempore interpreter runs himself into a tangle of trails, knowing not which way of a half dozen to turn; one path may lead to Cathay or to Goose island; another promises quick salvation, but it promises to become a bog or to end in another township; hesitation means failure, and then come in handy the little trills, and diminished seventh chords, and free cadenzas which fool the ear at all attempts at orientation. Very funny these catastrophes are sometimes! About one such fiasco with knowing ears in attendance discourages the gentle art of improvization—except the "movie" organist! He's accustomed to stepping off into voids, and landing without a jolt in another world.

The causes for this decline in a remarkable art are fascinating speculation. In becoming more efficient modern teaching methods lay more stress on formulas and less on the inventive element. The art itself has become so complicated in its whole scheme of theory that a labyrinth is a map of the "loop" in comparison. The repertory for both piano and organ is so great that no necessity for improvisation need be felt.

Wherefore are we fallen upon evil days, and our outpourings hint that "The Lost Chord" has it about correctly—"weary and ill at ease, and fingers wandered idly over the noisy keys!"

Maybe the erudite magazine writer saw the dimpled loveliness of truth in a diaphanous vestment, and distantly; maybe the movie organist, who perforce must think in reel lengths, whose audience cares not whether he "vamps" "Parsifal" or "Hello, Broadway!" is the Moses to lead us out of the wilderness of unresolved sevenths and frustrated cadences. He surely has the chance. Miss Kitty Kelly never annoys him with caustic comment. He may browse among the immortals to his heart's content, for there's no copyright on anything when you extemporize.

His brethren of the church have let slip their chance of immortality. Relating the Doxology to the first hymn is about enough strain on their invention. So let us hope that the jiggy drama will repay its debt to musical art by developing some flaming genius. But will some one pass the word along when it happens? The sprouting process is not painful enough to be truly funny, even though it's a strain on the credulity.

In and About the Theaters.

Miss Barrymore will play "Our Mrs. McChesney" tonight at Powers' for the last time in Chicago, and will proceed to Boston, where a brief engagement will close her season.

Augustus Pitou has resigned as business manager of the Illinois theater. He has been in the position since November, 1914, and had previously held like office in the Blackstone.

The executive of the Charles Frohman corporation, formed after Mr. Frohman's death to carry on his extensive theatrical business, denies categorically a categorical rumor that the concern would be dissolved at the end of the season. An added denial has to do with that part of the rumor which had it that Augustus Thomas would give up his position as art director of the corporation. The Frohman stars include Miss Barrymore, Miss Maude Adams, John Drew, Otis Skinner, Miss Anne Murdock, William Gillette, and, for musical plays, Miss Julia Sanderson, Joseph Cawthorne, and Donald Brian.

Miss Maude Adams' engagement in the Blackstone will be confined to "The Little Minister."

The Misses Dolly, the dancers from Hungary, will tomorrow evening become stars in a play which Miss Margaret Mayo has written for them.

Among the players who will help Mr. Sothern act "If I Were King" in New York are Miss Virginia Hammond, Miss Alexandra Carlisle, and George Wilson.

James T. Powers is soon to reappear after a long absence in "Somebody's Luggage," a musical comedy enterprise of the Messrs. Shubert.

Vernon Castle has been made a second lieutenant of the British aviation corps. Another dancer known to the Chicago restaurants, Wallace McCutcheon, has been promoted to the rank of a major of infantry in the British army. He has been in the fighting about Verdun. He is recalled as the partner of the blonde Miss Vera Maxwell in an engagement in the Blackstone hotel. Ernest Lambart, who played fops, and was last here with Lew Fields in "The High Cost of Living," is fighting for England.

Lew Fields is preparing a revival of "The Girl Behind the Counter," in which he had a good run in 1908 in the Garrick. It is recalled that the late Lotta Faust was among his associates in the entertainment.

Lyn Harding is to be the Antonio of Sir Herbert Tree's revival in New York of "The Merchant of Venice." The Bassanio will be Julian l'Estrange. The revival will be affected May 6.

The fraternal Macdonalds:

Chicago, April 29.—[To the Dramatic Editor.]—I shall consider it an obligation, for various reasons, if you will find space to say that I am not the Donald MacDonald who produced the Junior league entertainment.

DONALD MACDONALD of "Molly O."

Miss Marian Doyle, who will play one of the title roles in "A Pair of Queens" tonight is the daughter of Austen T. Doyle, a former chief of police of Chicago.

Miss Virginia Brooks, daughter of Joseph Brooks, did not get on amiably with Leo Ditrichstein in "The Great Lover," and she has withdrawn from the cast. "My daughter simply found her work in 'The Great Lover' unpleasant," says Mr. Brooks. "She complained to me and I told her, 'Goodness, child, you don't have to do it if you don't want to.' So she resigned. That's all there is to it. Why, I have a play waiting for her, and she has had two other offers. There is no reason why she should stay where she is unhappy."

Blackstone—The Boston Grand Opera company and the Pavlowa Ballet Russe will this afternoon end their brief but active engagement with a revival of "I Pagliacci," not yet sung here by this company, and a presentation of Delibes' famous ballet called "Coppelia." Mr. Zenatello and Miss Felice Lyne, the coloratura, will sing in the Leoncavallo opera, and Mme. Pavlowa and her entire troupe will be required for the two acts of "Coppelia," which affords the great dancer, in Swanilda, one of the best rôles she has yet had. The theater will not be reopened for professional purposes until May 15, when Miss Maude Adams will enter on a fortnight's engagement in Barrie plays.

Garrick—"Major Barbara," Shaw's brilliant satirical comedy, will be acted by Miss Grace George and what is already celebrated even thus far west as "her playhouse company." The comedy is one of the five the actress has staged with the season in the New York City theater of that name. Bruce McRae, Herbert Druce, Louis Edgard, and Miss Mary Worth are among Miss George's associates. First time tomorrow evening.

Powers'—"Daddy Longlegs," with Miss Ruth Chatterton and Henry Miller. The play had a long run in this theater two years ago. Mr Miller has not yet been seen in the title part. First time tomorrow evening. Miss Barrymore will this evening act in "Our Mrs. McChesney" for the last time.

Cort—"A Pair of Queens," a farce, with Miss Kathleen Clifford Miss Maude Eburne, and Joseph Santley. First time this evening.

What I Learned
by Going Through the Dorris Plant

I WANT to tell you what I saw, or rather what I sensed, when I went through the Dorris plant. Before I went through there I knew the beauty of the lines and finish of the car—I knew its mechanical perfection in detail. But there was something about the car when I looked at it that gave it a beauty that could not be described in words. The only way I can express it is to say that there is a beauty of "spirit" to the car best compared to the beauty of soul one sees in fine eyes.

It puzzled me—it was elusive—I knew there was something back of it all that could not be expressed in terms of machinery, manufacture or even a commercial attention to detail.

So I went through the plant to see if I could discover it. I found it.

The man who took me through was one of the original men in the organization of the company "years ago." He is the embodiment, as it were, of the ideals of the Dorris Motor Car Company. As we walked through the plant, stopping at every machine in the place, I watched him while I listened to him. I kept my eyes on his face and kept my ears attuned to the inflections of his voice.

He explained every detail of the process of building the Dorris car—even to the making of every bolt and nut in it, and as he talked I discovered the very soul of that institution and of the car itself. It lies in a downright honest love of thoroughness. In an earnest pride in making every part of that car the very highest expression of mechanical skill. A pride whose goal is not merely in making a salable car, but for the real joy to be gotten from producing a finely honest piece of workmanship.

I gathered none of this from any boasts on his part, but just from the loving way he handled each detail. These Dorris men love their car and everything in it. I could see why they could put nothing unworthy in it, either in materials or workmanship—any more than a loving mother could neglect her child.

That is what I had seen expressed in the car and could not describe—the real soul and beauty of the car. It shows in every line—in every detail—the supreme elegance of thoroughness.

I have told you about this beauty—now let me show it to you in the car itself.

The Car of the Hour

UNDER the hood of the National Highway "Twelve" is the best twelve-cylinder motor manufactured.

Less in weight than a six-cylinder motor of equal piston displacement. Accessible to a degree you would not believe possible; with high tension magneto ignition—the sure, dependable form of ignition—and power that will eat up any roadway with a ferocity to suit any man, coupled with smoothness and swiftness of acceleration that is only possible in a twelve-cylinder motor of this perfected type.

12 $1990 National HIGHWAY $1690 6

Filled with oil, gas, water, and carrying spare tire, blown up, on the rim—with all tools and accessory equipment—ready for the road and touring, the National Highway Twelve weighs only 3,585 pounds. The gasoline consumption is unusually low, and less oil is used than in most Sixes, so perfect is the lubrication system of this car.

If you want a car to dominate the roads and command the admiration of the boulevards, the National Highway Twelve is that car.

ASTRONOMY

by CLIFFORD RAYMOND

COMETS.

WHEN a comet passes between us and a star or star cluster, there is no diminution in the light of the faintest telescope object. The indication is a lack of density in the mysterious eccentrics of the universe.

The objects in the solar system, such as the planets, can be weighed by means of the law of gravitation. The sun, Jupiter, the moon, etc., can be placed upon the scale of this law. Comets cannot. The law—the scales—will not register. The object is too light.

A comet may be taken to be a swarm of particles surrounded by gas. The particles, as they appear in the tail of a comet, are susceptible to the propulsive power of light. Hence, when a comet is rounding its focal point, the sun, its tail always points away. The particles which compose the tail are driven away by the propelling power of the light radiated by the sun.

Comets may travel in closed orbits or they may not. Halley was convinced that a comet, which now bears his name, had rounded the sun before and that it would do so again. He left a prediction for another generation to verify, and it was verified.

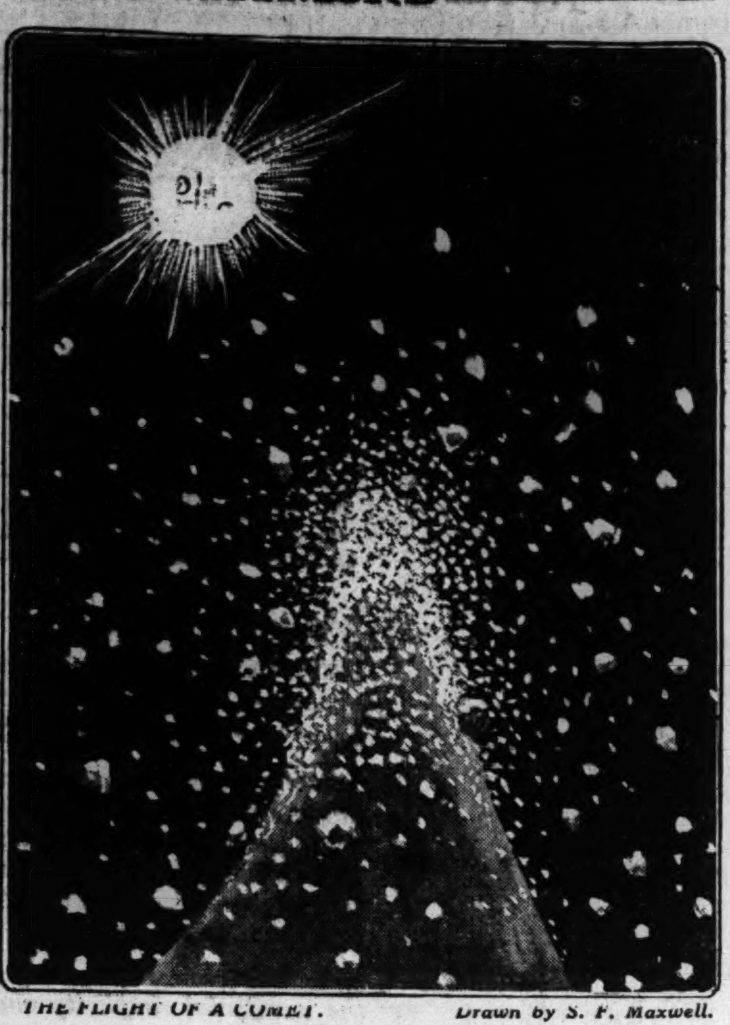
Comets with closed orbits have been discovered. Others come into our system once and then disappear. Some come several times and disappear. They, evidently, have been captured by one of the other celestial bodies, probably by one of the great planets of the sun's system.

They are affected by the gravitional pull of the bodies near which they pass. They slightly affect these bodies. If they were of great density and able to affect the ordered bodies powerfully we should have a disordered condition in the universe, one which might be reduced to chaos.

If by the entrance of a wanderer shooting into the system of suns and satellites, governed by gravity and thus kept in order, the scheme could be powerfully disturbed we should have a disruption of regular processes every time a comet came within the sphere of influence which controls the system.

It would be impossible for a system to contain itself against such unexpected and adverse influences and life here would become precarious, if not impossible. Life demands order and precision, and order and precision are maintained by the law of gravitation.

A comet might pass near the moon and pull it out of its course. It would affect tides and commerce. It might pass near the earth and pull it out of its relation to the sun, affecting days and seasons. Order could not be maintained if comets had the power more than slightly to affect the members of the sun's family.



THE FLIGHT OF A COMET. Drawn by S. F. Maxwell.

SPAGHETTI FOR RUSSELL.

WILLIAM F. RUSSELL had forgotten that April 12 was his birthday. Others in Santa Barbara, however, had not, and the result was a surprise party which greeted him when he arrived at his ranch from the studio. A spaghetti feast had been prepared. Music and dancing furnished the entertainment. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Ritchie, Helen Rosson, Anna Little, Charlotte Burton, Mr. and Mrs. Art Acord, Frank Borzage, etc.

Ruth Stonehouse, so long affiliated with Essanay, has been chosen to take the place of Grace Cunard in the Universal serial circus production, "Peg o' the Ring."

The new Clara Kimball Young film formation will make a specialty of adapting pictures from novels. Among the authors represented will be R. W. Chambers, David Graham Phillips, Rex Beach, Gouverneur Morris, Hall Caine, Maurice Maeterlinck, and Edgar Allan Poe.

Fannie Ward is working with Lasky in a new play called "The Gutter Magdalene." I hate that word "gutter."

When D. W. Griffith's play, "The Birth of a Nation," was shown at the Drury Lane theater, London, not long ago at a special matinée for the benefit of the women war workers' fund, royalty attended. Queen Mary with Queen Alexandra and Princesses Victoria and Mary and the Princes Henry and George were there.

Thomas Santschi, who is at present in Chicago working in "The Crisis," recently purchased a haunch of elk meat and invited all his friends an an elk steak dinner. Yum!

Blanche Sweet of Lasky believes in preparedness for women and shows her military tendencies in the black broadcloth suit she is wearing. The tailored skirt hangs in straight lines from the waistline and is longer than skirts are generally being worn this season. The jacket is straight and short. It boasts no collar and its only visible means of support are two bands of the material about two inches in width which cross over a dainty lingerie blouse and fasten on opposite sides half way down the front. The narrow sleeves are softened by their length, which shows just a glimpse of white cuff. A martial hat and a pair of white kid gloves and an English walking stick put the finishing touches to this costume.

The latest effort toward talking pictures was inaugurated recently at the national theater, Friedrichstrasse, in the form of a film opera. Wagner's "Lohengrin" was the opera taken for picturization by the Deutsch Lichtspier Opera company. At the performance well known singers hidden in the darkened theater were substituted for the originals in the picture.

Mabel Normand has signed a contract with the New York Motion Picture corporation, one of the incorporate factors of the Triangle Film corporation. She will continue as a member of the Keystone company for a time at least.

Thomas Commerford, "the dear old man" of the Essanay company, is adored by the children in his neighborhood. He never fails to have his pockets full of candy for them and spends his odd moments relating stories to his little admirers.

Wallace Reid will play the principal masculine rôle in Geraldine Farrar's next photoplay, "Maria Rosa."

Louise Lester the other day renewed her wardrobe insurance policy of $10,000.

King Baggot and the Imp-Universal company are in Savannah doing a number of scenes for a five reel production, "Half a Rogue," based on the novel by Harold McGrath.

Marguerite Clayton of Essanay is eagerly awaiting the opening of the Chicago bathing beaches. She's some swimmer.

Marc MacDermott has left his old love, the Edison company, and gone to the Vitagraph.

Helen Holmes is mourning the death of her father, who for a number of years was traffic manager of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad.

Joseph Kaufman, the handsome husband of Miss Ethel Clayton, has gone to Famous Players. He will both act and direct. His first work for Famous will be in the adaptation of E. Phillip Oppenheim's story, "The Great Gamble," in which Pauline Frederick is to be starred.

The Paramount Pictures corporation has made arrangements with a musical house to show the interested public just how music is made.

Feature Films of the Week.

"The Broken Genius."—Three act Flying A drama, featuring Edward Coxen. Some live models come between husband and wife. Evidently vurr' vurr' much alive! A deceitful man is also responsible for much of the trouble depicted.

"At Piney Ridge."—Five reel Selig drama with Fritzi Brunette and Vivian Reed featured. The plot is laid in the mountains of Tennessee.

"David Garrick."—Pallas picturization of the play of the same name. Dustin Farnum takes the lead. It is a story of an actor. Mr. Farnum should play the part extremely well.

"Dorian's Divorce."—Metro feature with Lionel Barrymore and Grace Valentine taking the leads. This is a story of mystery and love. The press agent doth depose that there is a new twist to it. Praise be!

"Lonesome House."—Big U drama featuring little Zoe Bech and Joseph Jefferson. Guaranteed to have a strong heart punch. If you like to be punched in the heart——?

"Lying Lips."—American drama featuring Winifred Greenwood and Franklin Ritchie. One of those regular ones.

"Playthings of the Gods."—Three reel Lubin drama featuring Allan Forrest and Ruth Saville. Some playthings!

"Sunshine Dad."—Fine Arts-Triangle production with De Wolf Hopper and Fay Tincher and a couple of lions.

"The Broken Promise."—Knickerbocker Star Feature drama with Ann Drew. A pleasing conventional society drama.

"The Carriage of Death."—Thanhouser drama. Marion Swayne and Bert Delaney play the leads.

"The Danger Line."—Three act Essanay drama featuring Elizabeth Burbridge and Edward Arnold. The heroine quickly gallops from poverty to wealth, fame, and stage, and, mentions the publicity manager last, love.

"The Gilded Spider."—Five reel Bluebird drama. Louise Lovely and Lou Chaney are featured. The story revolves around the adventures of an American tourist in Paris. He falls in love with a singer who is, alas! already married.

"The Man Hunt."—Three reel Vitagraph drama with James Morrison in the lead.

"The Man Within."—Three reel Selig drama with Tom Mix and Virginia Forde.

"The Moment Before."—Famous Players picturization of the play by Israel Zangwill, with Pauline Frederick in the lead. Miss Frederick takes the part of the gypsy girl.

"The Quality of Faith."—Gaumont-Mutual production starring Gertrude Robinson and Alexander Gaden. The author evidently wrote the scenario in the throes of discomfort that possessed him after a visit to a factory.

"Thrown to the Lions."—Five reel Red Feather drama featuring Mary Fuller. We haven't seen much of Mary lately, have we?

"The Unwritten Law."—Seven reel Owl Feature production. Beatrix Michaelena plays the lead.

"When Might Is Right."—Knickerbocker star feature with Henry King in the lead.

"Why Mrs. Wentworth Lied."—Three reel Imp production with Matt Moore and Jane Gail working out the reason.

Stationary Photoplays.

Castle—Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, "The Love Mask," Lasky production, featuring Cleo Ridgeley and Wallace Reid. Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, "Molly Make-Believe," Famous Players drama, with Marguerite Clarke in the lead.

Colonial—"Her Eternal Light," World Film production, featuring Kitty Gordon. Also Burton Holmes travelogue.

Fine Arts—"The Ne'er Do Well," Selig picturization of Rex Beach's novel. Kathlyn Williams and Wheeler Oakman are featured.

La Salle—"The Moment Before," Famous Players picturization of Israel Zangwill's famous play. Pauline Frederick is featured.

Strand—"A Child of the Paris Streets," Fine Arts-Triangle production with Mae Marsh and Robert Harron in the lead. Also an excellent musical program.

Studebaker—"David Garrick," Pallas Pictures production. William Farnum is featured.

Ziegfeld—"The Come Back," five act Metro drama, featuring Harold Lockwood and May Allison. Other attractions.

IN these days of meteoric appearance and disappearance of new cars, it is worth while to consider financial and manufacturing soundness before investing in a car. The builders of the Allen have been continuously in business for 25 years. Allen service, after a car is purchased, is as certain and dependable as the car itself.

MOLINE-KNIGHT "40"

"A Royal Car for His Majesty the American Citizen"

You couldn't ask for a more even, smooth flow of power

Will you give us just fifteen minutes in which to demonstrate this?

What's your hobby? What is it you wanted in other cars you have owned and didn't get?

Power is pretty important, isn't it? Power is what makes the wheels on your car go round—Power is what takes you where you want to go when you want to go—and brings you back again.

Let us then assume that all other points in the Moline-Knight "40" are equal or better than any other car you have known—we will be ready to prove this later. You have dropped in to see us and we are ready for a demonstration.

The Knight Motor delivers MORE POWER size for size than any other type—due to the Knight mechanical principle of construction. Perhaps the Moline-Knight Motor is different from the motor of any car you have ever owned before because of the sleeve valves — it has positively operated valves. This simply means that in the Moline-Knight Motor there is a positive opening and closing of the valves and that the compression does not depend upon the seating of the valves.

Instantaneous getaway—quick and sure response

As we start you will notice the ease of getaway—the quietness without the jolt, strain or effort of the start. Once under way, you FEEL the power, not in a succession of explosions and jerks, but in a smooth, uninterrupted flow.

You KNOW that in this car you have a reserve power there when you call upon it. Then you involuntarily begin to compare to their disadvantage other cars you have known.

Beautiful in comparison with any car

Your wife will be delighted with the graceful lined body, the extra depth of the comfortable upholstery, the roominess inside of the tonneau, the so much desired easy riding qualities due to the lack of vibration from the engine and the special spring construction.

The Moline-Knight "40" sells for $1,450 and is easily worth every cent of it—worth more than $1,450 in comparison with some cars you know. It's a Seven Passenger Touring Car—that is, it has two disappearing auxiliary seats with lots of room for seven occupants. You get 40 H. P. guaranteed. You pay nothing for extras—it comes completely equipped.

Ask your wife when it will be convenient for her to take that demonstration ride—and then phone us—no obligation.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by FANNY BUTCHER

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago book store:

WAR.

"Golden Lads" (Century), by Arthur Gleason.

FICTION.

"Seventeen" (Harpers), by Booth Tarkington.

"Nan of Music Mountain" (Scribners), by Frank Spearman.

"Just David" (Houghton-Mifflin), by Eleanor H. Porter.

"The Little Lady of the Big House" (Macmillan), by Jack London.

"The Return of Tarzan" (McClurg), by Edgar Rice Burroughs.

"Our Miss York" (Penn), by Edward Bateman Morris.

NONFICTION.

"Patience Worth" (Holt).

Charles G. Norris

WRITES GOOD FIRST BOOK.

CHARLES G. NORRIS is the author of "The Amateur" (Doran), a book about New York art life that's decidedly worth reading. He's 35, and he's been at fiction writing about a year and a half. When he decided to write fiction he was art editor of the American magazine.

Those facts are practically the only ones about his life which have been disclosed to the public, because Mr. Norris wanted his book to sell itself and not be bought because he was somebody's brother or somebody else's husband. The name sounded familiar, but his publishers did not say anything about literary relationships in his life, so he has gone down in the public prints as the author of a good first book and that's all.

The other day Sinclair Lewis, himself a member of the craft of promising young authors, whose "The Trail of the Hawk" is too good too miss, and who, by the way, has gone to his home town, Sauk Center, Minn., for the summer, said, "How do you like Charley Norris' book?" and after we'd agreed that it "belonged" he said, "Charley ought to be able to write. He's Frank Norris' brother, you know, and Kathleen Norris' husband."

I hope Mr. Norris won't feel hurt at being labeled a relative, but the bit of news is interesting.

An interviewer went to see Ray Stannard Baker the other day at his home in Amherst, Mass., and asked him how David Grayson happened to exist. He was born, Mr. Baker said, in 1906. At that time Mr. Baker's home was in a small town in Michigan and his work of special article writing took him all over the country and made his life a dreadfully strenuous one of traveling and muckraking. He was often so dead tired physically and so sick at heart spiritually about the stuff he had to write about that he took to keeping a notebook and writing in it little sketches of gentle country life. With a number of others he had just taken over the American Magazine, and to meet the demand for "copy" he got out his notebooks, pieced the sketches together, and gave them the title "Adventures in Contentment." At that time he felt, he said, that the books and articles he was writing under his own name were of far greater importance than the David Grayson things. He was tumbled over when he found that the Grayson books were best sellers. So shines a good deed in the naughty world of muckraking.

In answer to a questioner, Maj. John Bigelow, the author of "World Peace" (Kennerley), is a son of the late John Bigelow, who was United States minister to Paris under President Lincoln during the civil war and a brother of Poultney Bigelow Kaiser Wilhelm's closest friend in America.

News comes from Moscow that Maxim Gorky is dangerously ill with pneumonia in a hospital there. Whether or not it is a result of his activities in connection with war work the cable does not say. He has certainly been an ardent worker the last eighteen months. War has been hard on him. First his son was wounded and now a literary complication has arisen and the second volume of his autobiography (Century), which was to have appeared in English this autumn, is held up indefinitely because the translation for an English publisher has been locked up in Berlin for months, there to remain until the war ends. The entire English edition of printed sheets is interned with it. "My Childhood, the first volume of the autobiography, was so popular in this country that the American publishers are trying to get through Washington the release of the Gorky sheets. The English publishers declare that they are helpless in the situation.

Burton Kline, author of "Struck by Lightning" (John Lane), tells how he broke into the game. From his home in Virginia he made his way to Boston determined to take the town by storm. He presented himself and his ambitions to Edward Everett Hale, who told him to go home as fast as steam could take him. A visit to Charles Eliot Norton resulted in the advice to go home and make boots. "After all, an honest living is a noble achievement," said the great man. Disregarding the last part of the advice, young Burton Kline did go home and wrote a satire on the whole trip, which was accepted and printed.

"Where the Path Breaks" (Century), a war book, which is written by a person of such romantic tendencies that he—or she—chose the pen name of "Capt. de Crespigny," is obviously not the work of ny soldier, and it sounds an awful lot like Florence Barclay's stuff, whose "The Rosary" you probably haven't been able to forget. The publishers won't say.

"Adventures in Thrift" (Bobbs-Merrill), by Anna Steese Richardson, is a ook which is not only good reading but a most essentially usable volume. In story form it tells how the ogre of the high cost of living was conquered in the wilds of a modest home. It is the record of experiments which Mrs. Richardson made herself and it tells exactly how she made them and does it so pleasantly that any woman will want to go and do likewise.

"The Citizens' Book" (Stewart & Kidd) is the record of the civic achievements of the city of Cincinnati. The dedication reads: "This is a book for the citizen who would know what his city was, what it is, and how it became so; for the citizen who wants his city to grow better, who has ideals for its improvement, or who is seeking for such ideals; for the citizen who is willing, working with others, to help make Cincinnati (or any other city) a community which contributes the greatest possible good to each of its members."

Margaret Deland conceived the idea of a dollar fund, which is called the American authors' fund for the relief of wounded soldiers of the allied nations. A circular which is being sent out reads: "Realizing the debt of American letters to the literature of the allied nations, we, the undersigned, feel that it would be a significant and friendly thing for American writers as a body to express in some practical way their sympathy and admiration for the soldiers of liberty now lying wounded in France. To this end we are asking writers of the United States to contribute $1 each to a fund." Mrs. Deland says that "everybody with two or three exceptions has written a book, and if they all give a dollar I think we can finance the allies and Mr. Morgan need not be called upon for further loans." Among the names signed to the petition are Alice Brown, Winston Churchill, Margaret Deland, Hamlin Garland, Katharine F. Gerould, Robert Grant, Arthur Sherburne Hardy, William D. Howells, Basil King, A. Lawrence Lowell, Arthur Stanwood Pier, Agnes Repellier, Kate Riggs (Kate Douglas Wiggin), T. Russell Sullivan, Booth Tarkington, and Mrs. Terhune (Marion Harland). Contributions are to be sent to the State Street Trust company, 33 State street, Boston, Mass., and will be acknowledged.

ART

By Louise James Bargelt

THE Palette and Chisel club, which opened its exhibit last Tuesday night at the Art institute, continues to draw crowds within its rooms. The graphic and applied arts are generously represented by book plates, designs, illustrations, and letterings, and a splendid assortment of paintings. These paintings are many of them by men who have repeatedly won honors and prizes. Among the artists whose pictures are now hanging in the exhibit rooms are J. H. Carlsen, E. Martin Hennings, Rudolph F. Ingerle, Walter Ufer, and Edgar Payne. No less well known and appreciated are the names which stand out in the graphic art section, including R. F. Babcock, Bernhardt Kleboe, Emory Seidel, and De Alton Valentine.

Those people who are attracted by the radical and the bizarre will take keen interest in the sculpture exhibit which is offered by Stanilaus Szukalski. He is only 21, which accounts, perhaps, for the hopelessly pessimistic view he takes of life and its problems. When another one and twenty years have come and gone he may be almost cheerful.

There is no doubt that his work is strong. It leaves a vivid impression. It is horrible, too. He molds in clay the torments of the soul. When he would show "justice" he makes a figure distorted beyond all human semblance. When he would portray the despair of a musican over a lost chord, he resorts to an anatomical display of a hand clawing madly for something that has gone. I am told that his knowledge of anatomy is wonderful. There is no doubt that the spirit behind them is revolutionary, tempest tossed. A genius? Perhaps. Time will tell, development will decide.

The Art Students' league also is showing some exceptionally commendable work. They have an entire room devoted to their paintings and they make an excellent showing.

The following is a list of the prizes which were awarded the various paintings by a jury in which were: Mr. Ralph Clarkson, Mr. Charles Francis Brown, and Mr. Louis J. Millet.

The group of three paintings by Mr. Wilson Irvine took the first prize of $150. "A Sister," by Martin Hennings, received honorable mention, as also did Mr. Victor Higgins' "Sketch of the Art Institute."

The following prizes were awarded to the pictures which were exhibited by the Students' Art league:

The W. O. Goodman prizes of $50 and $25 went to Anthony Angarola and Anita Willets Burnham. The three prizes of $100 in all given by the Municipal Art league went to Arthur W. Hall, Mrs. Julia S. Griffith, and Miss Gertrude Spaller. The first two were for watercolor paintings and the last one for mural decorations.

The T. J. Keene prize of $10 went to E. R. Kirkbride. The Julia F. Griffith prize of $5 went to Sidsell Nelson and the honorable mention for the best portrait went to Hermine Stellar.

An exhibition of the Swedish club of Chicago opened April 29 with a reception in the evening. The work of many notable artists was exhibited, including paintings by Charles Hallberg, John F. Carlson, Alfred Janson, Mr. Nyholm, and Miss Lagercrantz. The exhibition will continue until May 7.

Last night a series of lectures on modern art commenced at the Moulton & Ricketts galleries, 71 East Van Buren street. The subject was "Ralph Blakelock and His Work," by Mr. Raymond Weyer and the pianist was Miss Franziska Heinrich.

Among the artists to be discussed on coming Saturday nights will be Daingerfield, Sargent, Inness, Symonds, and Martin. The entire series will be complimentary by Mr. Ricketts for the benefit of art lovers of Chicago.

Blakelock exhibitions continue to flourish in the city. Young's art gallery contains an exhibit of nearly 100 original Blakelocks. The exhibition will continue for another week. Reinhardt reports during the last week a large attendance in his galleries where he is offering an exhibit of Blakelocks and charging $1 admittance, the proceeds to be devoted to the now celebrated Blakelock fund.

Owners Drive This Car

¶ Many a man, who for years had not been in the front seat of his own car, now drives his Owen Magnetic. Men who never have been able to drive a car drive this.

¶ There is no diversion so pleasantly absorbing as running an automobile—when you feel safe. But of late years there have been so many cars on the road and such difficulty in driving that many have given up this pleasure—feeling that only professionals now were competent to handle a car.

¶ Now the pleasure of driving is made available again by the wonderful simplicity and ease of control of the Owen Magnetic.

¶ One little finger lever does nearly all the work. You start and stop, increase and diminish speed, almost as naturally as when walking. Traffic dangers vanish because the full power of this car is as truly your servant as are your own muscles.

¶ And, whether you drive or not, a ride in an Owen Magnetic cannot be equaled by any other sensation of motoring. You are "cushioned along" with no jerk or jar. The power flows from engine to wheels, magnetically, without the use of harsh gears. Speed is controlled like water from a faucet.

¶ The mechanical supremacy of this car is matched by the artistic supremacy of the bodies with which it is equipped—either from stock or to order.

MOTORS AND MOTORCYCLES

Conducted by J. C. Burton

Here Are Some Sure Remedies for Your Motor Car's Spring Fever.

SUCCESSFUL touring, touring without the inconveniences brought about by mechanical derangements in the automobile, depends in a great measure upon the preparedness. To get the car in fit condition in early spring before the real touring season begins is to get the most enjoyment out of the summer's trips. This applies to the cars only a few months old as well as to those which have been in service a year or more.

Before any work is attempted the garage or shop should be made ready to receive the car. The place should be clean, all tools should be in their places, and there should be the proper supply of oils, greases, gasoline for cleaning, kerosene for flushing, and small bits such as cotter pins, nuts, bolts, and gaskets. Supplies should be well looked into because it may mean a loss of much time if every gasket replacement means a trip to the supply store. You know those parts of your motor, clutch, gearset, and axles which might require replacement. You will know better than any one else the cotter pin sizes, the gasket material, etc., which will be needed and if you do not, then, after reading this story you will get a good idea as to just what parts are really necessary.

Assuming that the shop is ready to receive the car, it is most important that the car be in such condition that parts inspection will not call for a mud removing act. Hence pay $1 or $2 and have the car properly cleaned.

After the washer has done all that he can in removing mud and dirt, get busy yourself in the shop and do a little cleaning yourself. A man can work best when his surroundings are clean. You will find it worth while to clean the motor with kerosene or gasoline, getting all the mud and grit from the outside. It also makes it safer, since the dirt can easily make its way to the interior when a part is removed. Use gasoline freely and, if possible, get a stiff brush and scrape the dirt from its lodgings. If the garage in which you have the car washed has a motor cleaning apparatus, pay 25 or 50 cents and have the motor cleaned with kerosene under pressure. Most good garages have such apparatus and it does the work in a few minutes.

The owner usually is aware of any serious mechanical faults with the chassis, and if there be such it is unwise to attempt to do this sort of repairing unless thoroughly familiar with the work. For example, if the motor should knock due to loose rod bearings, or if the clutch thrust bearing is worn, replacement or repair of these should be done by the service station. Do all you can, but do not attempt difficult repairs. You will find it will take a great deal of time, whereas the service station can do the work quickly and the job will be a lasting one.

Suppose, for example, that you know the motor to be carbonized because it continues to fire after the ignition switch is thrown to off position, also because it knocks on the slightest grade, overheats and will not take a heavy load. If the owner has had previous experience in removing carbon, he is advised to do the work himself, especially if the motor has a removable cylinder head, for then the work is comparatively easy. If carbon removing is to be done, the scraping method is suggested and a set of scrapers may be purchased for $1. If the owner wants to save time, or if he cannot do this work, Chicago repair shops will do the work of removing carbon at 35 to 50 cents per cylinder. The shops use the oxygen method, which is quick, efficient, and cheap.

GEARBOX-REAR AXLE. DRAIN FLUSH WITH KEROSENE REFILL WITH HEAVY OIL

If carbon is removed it is suggested that the valves be ground, and, while this work may be done by the owner without much trouble, if he is the possessor of a valve spring lifter and grinder, the shops usually charge but $4 to $5 for the work. However, this may mean much to some owners. Valve grinding may be necessary in other motors also. If the compression in the cylinders varies, grinding may be necessary, yet the valves should not be suspected unless it is known that the piston and rings are not loose and there are no compression losses through cylinder leaks.

It is rather hard to tell whether there is leakage past the piston without actually fitting the piston and rings in the cylinder. Testing for leaks is an easy matter. Get an oil can, and, while the motor is running, force a little oil around the base of the cylinder plugs, spark plugs, also at the inlet manifold connection, to the cylinder, and other joints. If small bubbles appear when the engine is running there is a leak. Sometimes one can tell an inlet manifold leak by feeling with the hand.

If the cylinder plugs leak, the plugs should be removed, the threads cleaned, and some paste stove blacking or graphite lightly spread over them. If the motor has a removable cylinder head and it leaks, a new gasket is needed. The gasket should be lightly covered with shellac before being replaced. Do not use too much shellac, for the excess may get into the water jacket or cylinder. Also in replacing the cylinder head be sure to tighten the nuts properly. First tighten one nut slightly, then take another in the opposite corner and tighten it slightly, then take another on the opposite side, and so on. If the nuts on one side are tightly drawn and then those on the other side, the head may be sprung and leaks result. Be sure the face of the cylinder head is perfectly clean and also the gasket. Clean every part with a cloth before replacing.

After the leaks have been stopped, tighten all nuts and bolts on the motor. Tighten the nuts holding the timing gear case cover, tighten the motor holding-down bolts, the nuts holding the cylinders down, and all parts that can be tightened with wrenches. If a lock washer is missing, get a new one for, the nut may become loose in a day or so. Tighten the nuts holding down the push rod guides, or the nut holding the clamp which holds the guide in place. Most owners are familiar with the parts of the motor which require tightening after use, but it is best to go over each part so there will be no trouble from loosening later on in the season.

After tightening these parts, proceed to the various systems. The water system may not require much attention. To be safe, drain the system and refill it with a saturated solution of washing soda in boiling hot water. This will have a tendency to remove deposits. Allow the solution to remain in the system for a few minutes, and, if possible, operate the motor for a few minutes while the solution is in. Then drain and refill the system with clear water. Do this flushing twice to be sure all soda solution has been removed.

Examine the connections to the radiator, especially those made of rubber. Remove the rubber ones and examine the interior. Sometimes the rubber disintegrates on the interior and clogs the system. If this condition exists, get new hose, for it does not pay to try to repair the old hose. With clear water in the system operate the motor and look over every connection for leaks. New packing may be needed in the pump nut. If the motor is syphonically cooled, there is no pump, of course. But above all, stop the leaks. In repacking the pump nut, use asbestos rope graphited. The rope may be bought in the supply store. Rub a little graphite into it yourself. Finish up the water system by examining the radiator for leaks and tightening the holding down nuts. Do not attempt to repair radiator leaks yourself. It is delicate work.

The ignition system is next. Examine the wiring carefully for insulation breaks, corroded terminals, and loose connections. If a small insulation break is found use electrician's tape to repair it. If the break is large, use rubber tape and over it electrician's tape. In all but Ford cars the system employs either a magneto or ordinary battery unit. Both have an interrupter, mechanically operated, and a distributer. Place a drop of kerosene upon the interrupter points and clean the distributor board well and oil it very lightly. In the Ford system the commutator should be well cleaned and oiled and the four-unit coils checked. Tighten the connections at the bottom, and, if necessary, adjust the vibrators. A drop of kerosene on each one will help keep it clean. If any points are uneven, use an interrupter file. It costs about 10 cents at the supply store. If the points are badly burned, get new ones. Tighten, clean, and lubricate.

It is not recommended that the owner do much work on the starting and lighting system. The best the owner can do is to clean the commutator, dress the brushes, inspect the wiring, and check the battery. The unit or units should be held firmly in place. The battery electrolyte should be tested for specific gravity. This is done with a hydrometer, which costs $1. This instrument should indicate 1.280 or more. If the gravity is below 1.280 then the battery is not fully charged; if it is as low as 1.25 have the battery charged from an outside source. It costs 25 to 50 cents. The battery service station will put it in shape at very little cost. If the gravity reading of the cells varies there may be a leaky jar.

If the cell gravities after charging vary very much have the service station make an examination. Clean the battery terminals. Sometimes a green deposit is seen on one terminal. This should be scraped off as if sufficient of it is deposited the battery may not give service. A little vaseline or cup grease on the terminals will prevent corrosion of this sort. See that the solution completely covers the plates. If it does not add distilled or rain water until the plates are covered. The battery support should be substantial and, if weak, should be reinforced. A poor support may cause trouble. Check the wiring of the whole starting and lighting system, and above all see that the connections are clean and tight.

The lubrication system should be cared for next. Drain all oil from the motor. Take two quarts of kerosene and pour a little into each cylinder until the oil is used. Then crank the motor or operate it for a few seconds even without oil. But only for a few seconds. This is done to work the kerosene through the moving parts to clean them. Allow all kerosene to drain through and about one hour later refill to level with fresh oil. In some motors with basins in the case it is best to remove the cover and mop it out. This also affords an opportunity for examining the interior of the motor at the bottom and for mopping out the crankcase. Be clean. Use kerosene freely for cleaning. Use clean oil for lubrication.

Proceed now to the clutch. If it is a cone and has been giving fair service lubrication of the throwout collar and oiling of the connections from the pedal will be enough. If it has been slipping Fuller's earth or neatsfoot oil should be lightly and evenly spread over the surface. This applies if it is leather. If of fabric a little kerosene will remove grit and oil. If the clutch is a dry disk a flushing with kerosene usually is sufficient to make it hold. In a running in oil disk clutch drain the case, flush with kerosene two or three times, and operate the motor so as to work the kerosene between the plates. Then drain and refill with fresh oil or a mixture of oil and kerosene as the maker recommends.

All the average owner can do for the gearbox is to drain it and flush it with kerosene. Allow the kerosene to remain in while the motor is turning over. Do this twice and the case will be comparatively clean. If possible remove the cover and mop the case. Then refill with a slightly heavier oil than was used during the winter. Get a good gear compound or oil. Do not use grease. The universals should be cleaned if possible and repacked with graphite or grease.

Proceed to the rear axle and treat it in the same fashion as suggested for the gearset.

The whole braking system should be gone over carefully. If the bands are suspected of being worn they certainly should be replaced. The job is an easy one if the owner has done any riveting, and the dismantling and assembling does not require much experience. The connections from the brake pedal to the bands should be gone over and the joints well oiled. If adjusting is necessary clevices usually are provided for this. The hand brake should likewise be carefully examined. If the brakes drag—that is, scrape against the drum—use a flat tire tool or a screwdriver to force the band away. A gun full of kerosene on the fabric bands makes them hold a little better. Test the brakes on the road later on. The car should be driven at about twenty miles per hour and the brakes applied. Both wheels should slide at the same time. If not, the brakes are not pulling equally and should be made to do so.

The steering system is the last to be taken care of, although in importance is equal to the others. Remove excess play in the system either by adjusting the drag link or the gears in the post. Repack the post case with grease or graphite and lubricate all joints from that on the steering arm to the steering knuckles on the front axle.

Remove the rims from the wheels and clean them thoroughly. Use graphite paint to prevent the rims from rusting and "freezing" the tire in place. Jack up each wheel and test it for looseness. Grasp the wheel firmly at opposite spokes and push and pull as hard as possible. If side play is found remove it or have it removed. In many cars the front wheel bearings are adjustable, in others they are not. Do not allow the wheels to wobble. A good shop will charge little to put the wheels in alignment. It means you will reduce tire wear if the wheels operate in alignment. Replace the wheel bearings.

Before taking the car out get the maker's instruction book and carefully get a mind's view of the lubrication system. Do not forget to refill every grease cup and oil hole. Lubrication is most important to free running and long life. Lubricate freely and often.

When the car is taken on the road test it in one mile's running. Test the brakes; test it for pulling power, for pickup, etc.

OUR APRIL 15TH MODEL DESIGNED AFTER THE SHOWS

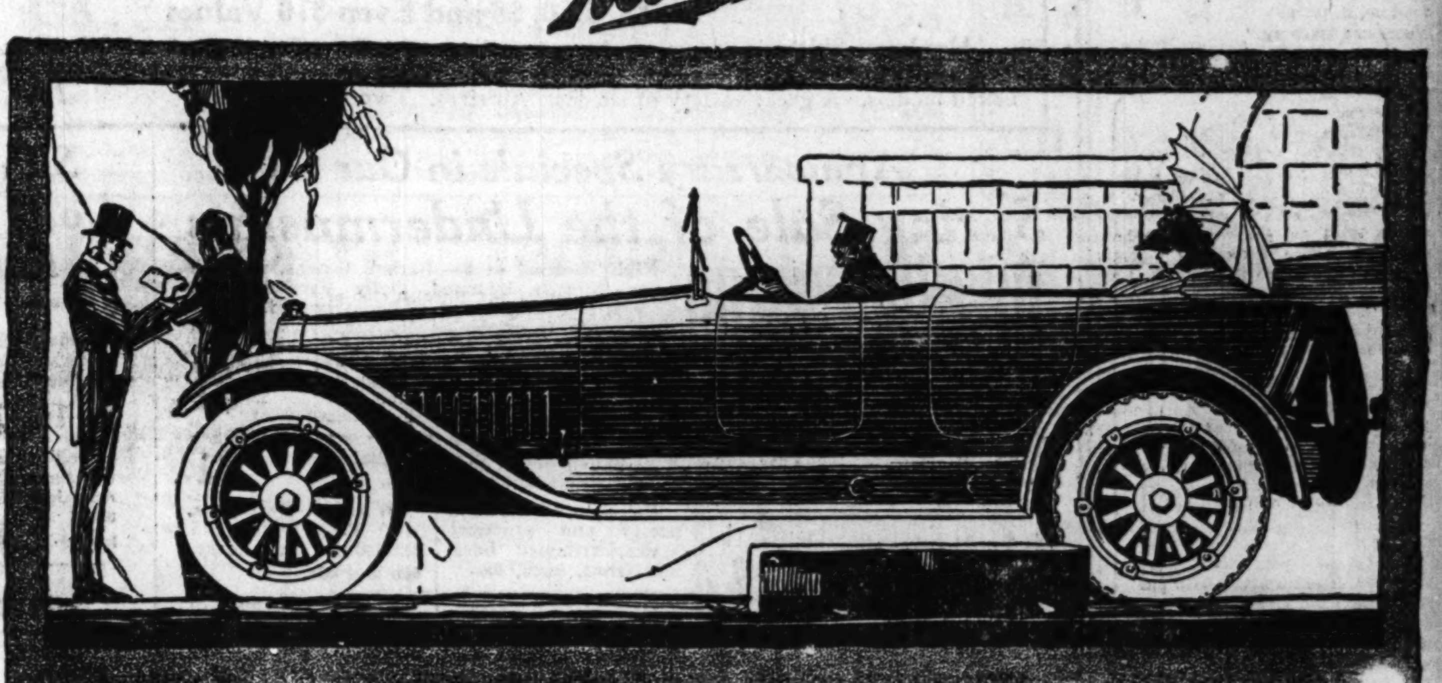
Mitchell

$1325 F. O. B. RACINE
For 5-Passenger Model



257 Cars in One

We now have the Mid-Year Mitchell, completed after the New York Show. Combining all the best new ideas that were shown there. Designed by experts who first compared 257 of the latest models, to embody their best in one car.

Each great designer, every season, contributes new ideas to cars. The Mitchell designers contribute their share.

No one car has all of them. One designer has excelled in one feature, one in another. The ideal car of the season would be a composite car. And that's what we offer in this new-model Mitchell.

The Best-Liked Ideas

Some new ideas were fizzles. Some were immensely attractive. On each one our experts secured the motorists' verdict.

They picked out the lines which were voted the handsomest. They chose the new features which men and women liked best. Then they completed this new model to come out in the spring, and combine every last-minute feature in body and equipment.

This never was done before. This New Mitchell, therefore, is a show in itself. It shows all the approved ideas. You will find it by far the most interesting car on exhibit.

Exclusive Springs

This is the only car which has the Bate cantilever springs. They offer ease of riding which was never known before.

You will never believe what a difference they make until we take you over a stretch of rough road. The car rides ruts as a boat rides waves. This, to women, is the most appealing feature found in any car this year.

30-Year Service

The Mitchell, we believe, holds the record for service. Six Mitchell cars that we know of have averaged 164,372 miles each. That means over 30 years of ordinary service. And all are running daily.

The Mitchell is distinguished as being the choice of the ablest engineers. We have a long list to send—on request—of great engineers who have chosen the Mitchell.

The Mitchell is long, roomy, impressive. Its wheelbase is 127 inches. It has a power tire pump, reversible headlights, ball-bearing steering gear, gasoline primer on instrument board, and many other features which make this car a favorite with men.

26 Extra Features
Because John W. Bate Saves Us 20%

The New Mitchell has 26 extra features—things you want in a car—which other cars don't offer.

Most of these are exclusive to Mitchell. And no car at any price has more than four of them.

We invite you to see these extras. Judge for yourself what each one means. Judge how much you would miss it. When you see 26 of them in a single car, we think you will want that car

Due to 10,000 Savings

Those extras are paid for out of 10,000 savings made by John W. Bate, the efficiency expert.

Our buildings—covering 45 acres—were designed by him. He has equipped them with 2092 time-saving machines of the most efficient sort.

In this model plant—where every second is saved—we build 98 per cent of this New Mitchell car. We build it for half what it would have cost in our factory of 1910. We build it for 20 per cent less, we believe, than any other factory could build a like car.

Those are the reasons for these 26 extras. They are due to John W. Bate. Any man who sees them will have new respect for factory efficiency, carried to the farthest limit.

Come, let us show them to you.

With high-power high-speed six-cylinder motor; wheelbase, 127 inches; anti-skid tires on rear; complete equipment, including engine-driven tire pump, reversible searchlights, etc.

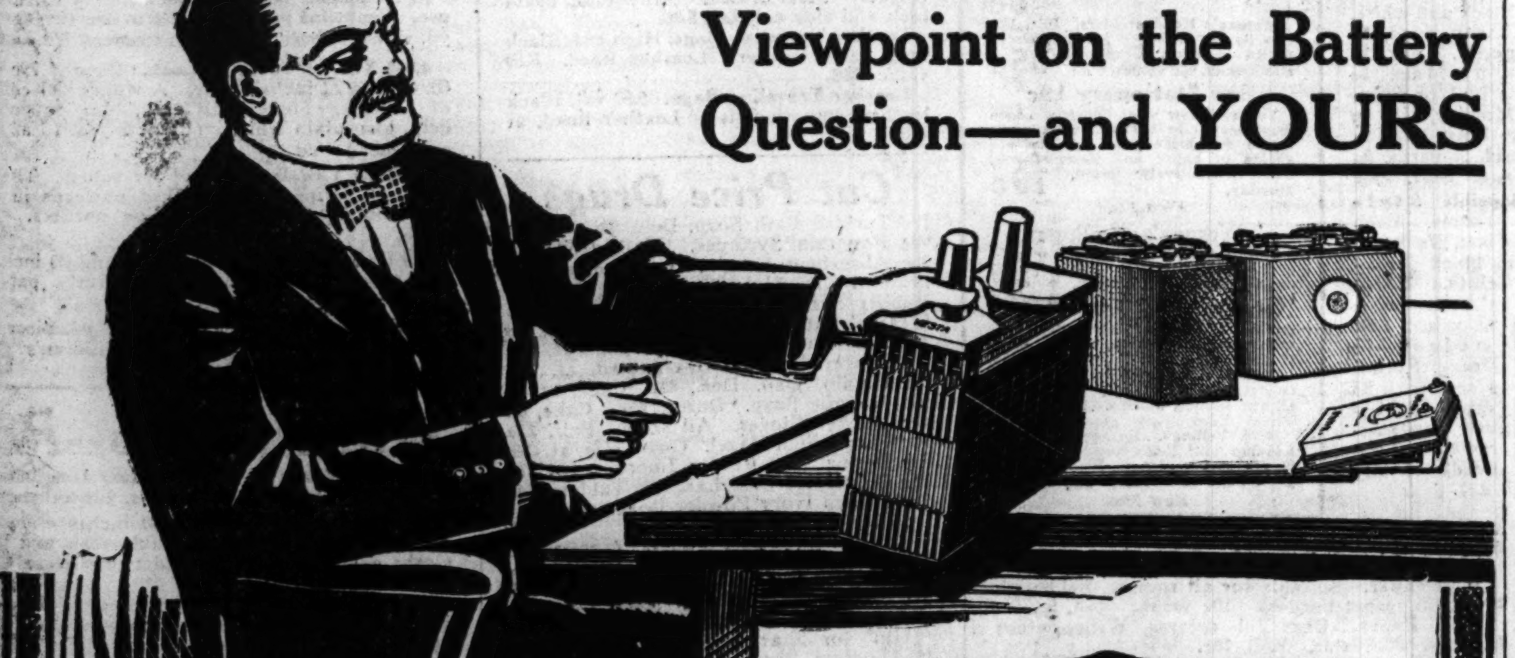
The Purchasing Agent's Viewpoint on the Battery Question—and YOURS



VESTA STORAGE BATTERY

If you were a purchasing agent buying 10,000 batteries for equipment you would buy a good battery. The reputation of your car would demand that.

But would you buy an extraordinary battery at $1.50 apiece extra?

But you, Mr. Motorist, are not an automobile purchasing agent. It is not a question of $15,000 extra cost to figure into your car. The extraordinarily good Vesta costs no more at retail than other batteries. You cannot afford to be without this extra quality which costs you no more.

Vesta batteries last twice as long as other makes, not because we say so but because there is a real reason for this extra life.

This reason lies in the new Vesta Indestructible Isolator, an exclusive patented Vesta feature. These isolators prevent short circuits, the most common cause for battery deterioration, and the most expensive battery damage to repair. No other battery has them.

Before you buy a new battery or figure on replacing your present battery, learn about this feature. Any of our service stations will explain it to you or we will send you upon request our free booklet—"What's Inside"—which explains this feature clearly and shows you why Vesta Batteries last twice as long.

Vesta batteries are made in all sizes and types and are interchangeable with every known system of automobile starting, lighting and ignition.

"Yes, my mother was stung by a queen bee."

"Have you ever traveled?"

"Look at my shoes."

"I notice you've had your hair cut. What's your barber's name?"

"You like his work, eh?"

"No, I want to warn my friends against him."

MAJESTIC.

Jack Henry, Rose Gardner, and Joseph B. Roberts in "The Bachelor Dinner":

"You'd better laugh before you get married."

"Why?"

"Because you don't get a chance afterwards."

"You don't say so."

"It's the truth. Do you know that father only laughed once after he married mother?"

"When was that?"

"When she caught her tongue in the wringer."

PALACE.

Allen and Howard:

"It's pretty hot, isn't it?"

"What's pretty about it?"

"Still, it's a nice little town."

"Yes, Cook and Peary have nothing on you."

"Why?"

"Discovering 'burgs.'"

"It's a prohibition town, too."

"Good night, town."

"It's named Ellsburg."

"They forgot to put on the H."

"Tomorrow's a big day here."

"Twenty-four hours long, eh?"

"Do you like tea?"

"I like the color of it."

"Maybe you'll try some wheat bread that mother made."

"No, I prefer rye."

"But that's so heavy."

"Put a little rock in it."

McVICKER'S.

Sophie and Harvey Everett:

"I was out to see your brother at the insane asylum today."

"What did he have to say?"

"O, he's crazy to see you."

"How many make a million?"

"Very few."

"I've got a horse that can go to beat the band."

"Then the band must be on foot."

"I hear you were in a fight today."

"I had a fight, but I wasn't in it."

"You say your mother has the mumps; you want to look out—mumps are contagious."

"She's my stepmother—she wouldn't give me anything."

"The man who was run over by the cars the other day is now out of danger."

"That's good."

"He died this morning."

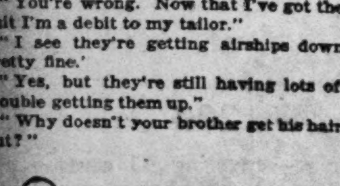
"My, that is a swell suit. You're a credit to your tailor."

"You're wrong. Now that I've got the suit I'm a debit to my tailor."

"I see they're getting airships down pretty fine."

"Yes, but they're still having lots of trouble getting them up."

"Why doesn't your brother get his hair cut?"



"Shear fright, I guess."

"What is next to an oyster?"

"The shell."

"I have a suit of clothes for every day in the week."

"Where are they?"

"This is it I have on."

"Chicago is a beautiful city. Would you believe it, today was the first time I ever saw a patrol wagon."

"How did you like it?"

"Why, I was carried away with it."

"What is the difference between an elephant and a mosquito?"

"What is the difference?"

"The shape."

"How did you lose your hair?"

"Worry."

"What did you worry about?"

"About losing my hair."

"Did you ever take a bicycle trip?"

"Once."

"Where did you go?"

"Straight over on my neck."

MOTORS AND MOTORCYCLES

Conducted by J.C.Burton

Exhaust Echoes

Notwithstanding the fact that the war departments of a great many of the warring nations of Europe have commandeered the motor car shops for the manufacture of guns, shells, and other war equipment there are still some manufacturers in those countries building motor cars. This is strongly evidenced by orders received from time to time by the Timken-Detroit Axle company for axle shipment. One of the latest orders was from the Holland firm of Spyker Trompenburg, large manufacturer of high class pleasure cars and the only car builder in that country. Timken-Detroit axles for both pleasure and worm drive commercial cars are now being used by automobile manufacturers in Great Britain, France, Holland, Russia, and Sweden.

Improvements in the construction of Argo cars, together with the higher cost of materials, have made it necessary for the company to increase the selling price of the touring car from $435 to $455 and of the roadster from $385 to $405—a raise of $20 on each model.

Frank Rea, mayor of Perth, Australia, is one of the recent Overland purchasers in the antipodes, according to word received from there. McCallum Smith, managing director of the Sunday Times of the same city, was another purchaser of the same make of car.

The Sterling Motor Truck company of Chicago, a direct factory branch of the Sterling Motor Truck Company of Milwaukee, has changed its location from 2637 Cottage Grove avenue to 1324-26 South Michigan avenue.

Tomorrow being moving day, two concerns identified with the local automobile trade will celebrate the occasion by taking possession of new buildings. The Kelly-Springfield Tire company will open its service branch for motor truck tires at 2251 Michigan avenue and the Federal Motor Truck company will get into its new headquarters at Twenty-first street and Wabash avenue.

A headlight concentrator, designed to furnish a bright light on Fords when the cars are being slowly driven, now is being made and marketed by the Van Sicklen company, which with the Elgin National Watch company is manufacturing the Van Sicklen speedometer. All Ford cars since the 1914 model are equipped with electric headlights, the lighting current being supplied by the same low tension magneto which supplies the current for ignition. The strength of the electric current generated by this magneto depends upon the speed of rotation of the magneto, and since the magneto is built into the flywheel of the engine, the current strength varies as the speed of the engine. Consequently, while the engine is running at a speed necessary to drive the car about twenty-six miles per hour, the electrical strength of the magneto is eighteen volts, or just sufficient to properly light two nine volt bulbs in "series." But when the speed is decreased to about thirteen miles per hour the magneto registers only nine volts, which would be just the proper strength to light up one bulb brightly, but far too weak for the two. If it was possible to short circuit one bulb while the speed was so decreased and send all power available in the lighting circuit through the other, the other would burn just as brightly as both would at twice the speed. The Van Sicklen concentrator does this automatically without the slightest danger of injuring the magneto or burning out either bulb.

A step forward in improving automobile service throughout the United States has been registered by the Olds Motor works of Lansing, Mich., in the establishment of a permanent school for Oldsmobile service men at its plant. The first meeting of the school was attended by more than 100 service men from all parts of the country. Meetings with an equal attendance are promised regularly in the future. The purpose of the Olds Motor works is to make each service man wearing its monogram as thoroughly familiar with car theory and construction as the factory engineer himself. They are to be expert diagnosticians, men who can probe quickly and surely to the seat of any trouble, and in most cases avert damage before it is done.

The fact that improvement in the body design of automobiles scarcely kept pace during the years following the beginning of the manufacture of automobiles, with the progress made in the mechanical end of the product is a circumstance frequently commented on. The last few years, however, have seen an extraordinary advancement in the building of bodies, both from the standpoint of comfort and beauty. The Stewart-Warner Speedometer corporation of Chicago claims that this is due almost entirely to the general adoption of its Stewart vacuum system. "Until our vacuum system was perfected," says an official of the Stewart-Warner corporation, "it was practically impossible for the manufacturers to turn out those low, comfortable, stream line bodies which are so popular today, because so many of them were using the gravity system for getting the gasoline to the carburetor and, of course, that meant that the gasoline tank had to be mounted quite high in the front of the car, generally under the front seat. Now they are usually at the back out of the way.

On the mail route between Lamar and Springfield, Colo., a Dodge Brothers touring car is giving great service. The round trip is approximately 100 miles, and in many places the roads are bad and there are steep grades to be negotiated. The car daily carries an average of 1,500 pounds of mail and from one to four passengers, and has traveled more than 15,000 miles. According to carefully kept figures, the repair expense has been but $20.29. The average consumption of gasoline has been nineteen miles to the gallon and 900 miles on a gallon of oil.

Mr. Harry R. Hargis, manager of the local Savage tire branch, says that there are two things that would save a lot of tire expense for motorists. These are a proper rack and a proper covering for spare tires. When a tire is carried on the running board, unprotected, it soon dries out considerably and becomes covered with surface cracks. These detract greatly from its mileage when put into use. The jolting to which the tire is subjected on the running board does not help its lasting qualities any, either. This is not an argument against carrying spares. It is only good judgment to carry one spare tire. More than one spare should be carried if a long trip is contemplated. Spare tires should, however, be protected by a cover as nearly light and moisture proof as it is possible to secure.

Nothing collects a crowd in China with the success that the Rev. William F. Junkin, an American missionary, has had in going about with an Indian motorcycle and sidecar. In a letter to his classmates of Austin college, who made him a gift of the machine for his work, Mr. Junkin writes that it always causes interest, pleasure, amusement. Even high ladies venture to leave the inner quarters to which they are limited by ancient custom and let public opinion go to the winds by coming to the big front doors to watch the "gas cart" driven by the "foreign devil" go by.

The increasing demand during 1916 for closed cars of the all year round variety is one of many interesting features of the automobile business this spring. This is said to be true especially in the case of medium priced cars such as the Abbott-Detroit and other makes of that class. The seeming change in the popularity of the various signs of motor vehicles is due largely to general improvements in construction and the demand for an automobile which will be practicable for either stormy or clear weather, in the opinion of Brent Neal, manager of the Abbott-Detroit branch.

Dramatis Personae of the Speed Spectacle.

NO. 8—PETE HENDERSON, MAXWELL.

PETE HENDERSON, whom Eddie Rickenbacher, captain of the Maxwell forces, has selected as his 1916 teammate, can count the races that he has driven on the fingers and thumb of one hand.

You are right, Clarice. Five is the correct answer. But how in the world did you know that I wasn't referring to a three fingered hand?

Henderson made his debut as a driver in the Des Moines speedway race last August at the wheel of a Dusenberg. In his first start, he finished sixth and captured $400 in prize money. His next appearance was at Elgin two weeks later when he was numbered among the also rans in each of the events on the watch city card.

The youngster came back strong in his next two starts, however, finishing fifth in the 100 mile contest at Providence, R. I., and duplicating this performance in the 350 mile Vincent Astor cup race, the inaugural event run on the Sheepshead Bay speedway.

It was in the spring of 1913 that Henderson left the classic halls of Drake college, where he was taking a course in automobile construction, to pump oil into the motor of a Mason. He is a Canadian by birth and in the off season receives his mail at Fernie, B. C.

He applied to Eddie Rickenbacher for a job on Fred Dusenberg's racing team when Baron Rick was assisting the St. Paul designer in building the Masons. Henderson's light weight was a recommendation and he had a personality that appealed to his present boss, but he was not of age and Dusenberg refused to employ him unless he first obtained his father's consent. Rickenbacher rendered first aid with pen, ink, and paper, writing to Henderson pere who acceded to the request and made Rick his son's speed guardian.

Henderson first rode with George Mason, the most obese driver that ever put foot on the throttle of a racing car, and then served as Eddie O'Donnel's mechanician when the latter was given a mount.

Henderson has an older brother, Jack, who is a Dusenberg mechanician. Jack cast his fortunes with the racing teams because he decided that his mother did not raise him to be a soldier. He was subject to military service in British Columbia, but did not relish the idea of being a Tommy Atkins so ran away from home last February and joined the Dusenberg outfit in San Francisco.

Power!!

Few of us have the need or desire for a racing car.

We are quite content to let the "other fellow" take his chances at 70 miles an hour—while we spin along comfortably and safely with the speedometer needle registering 25 or 30.

But every man wants Power in his automobile—and particularly the man who tours.

It is good to sit behind a motor which responds eagerly—bouyantly—to the slightest touch of the throttle.

It is good to know that you need only "step on" the accelerator—and the steepest hills will flatten out like smooth boulevards.

It is good to realize that you command a vast store of reserve power which will easily take you through the heaviest sand roads "on high."

It is good to know that your automobile is a staunch, sturdy, dependable help-mate—not a treacherous weakling that will lay down when the real work begins.

In a word, it is good to own just such a car as the Paige seven passenger "Six-46".

This car is a thoroughbred—every inch of it.

It is just as handsome as an automobile could possibly be, and easily capable of going 60 miles per hour if you desire so much speed. But—first and last—it is made for work—consistent work—day in and day out work.

"Fairfield" owners don't have to make apologies or "offer excuses". Their cars are out of commission at one time only—when they are locked up in the garage at night.

And—best of all—you can readily establish these facts for yourself.

This car is by no means an "experiment". It has been put to the gruelling test of more than a full year's road work by thousands of owners.

All that you need to do is get in touch with the nearest Paige dealer.

Let him prove his case. Let him introduce you to men who have invested their money in the "Fairfield". Listen to their experiences—ask for their honest opinions.

Do this—while the Dealer can still make immediate deliveries.

A Health Policy

Nowadays there's no good reason for having poor lighting and starting from a "dead" battery.

Insure your storage battery against loss of life. There's no premium to pay—just ask for a Willard free inspection card.

Then come around once a month and have your battery examined. Whether it's in good condition or not is surely worth knowing, especially when it's free.

Remember: when it comes to batteries—we're experts.

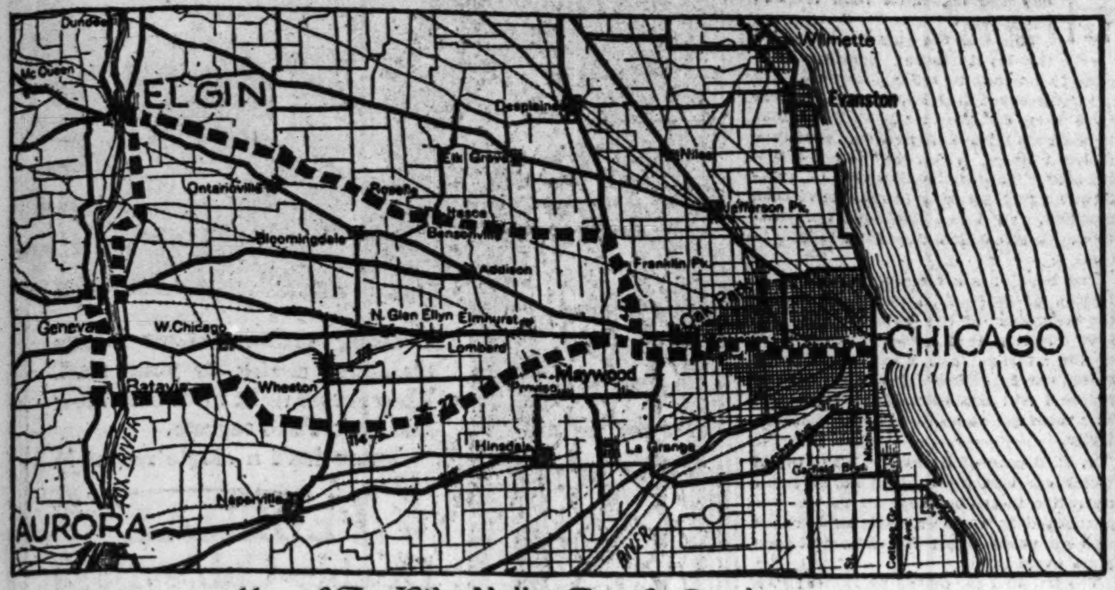
Where Shall We Drive To-Day?



Map of Fox River Valley Tour for Sunday

ALTHOUGH we have not had the sort of April weather the last few days that is ideal for motor trips, the desire to get into the country is still uppermost in most of our minds and we have not had sufficient rain to seriously injure the gravel roads.

All road reports indicate that the gravel roads are in much better condition than one would expect with so little really warm weather, and, although we cannot boast of as much really good road in northern Illinois as is to be found in Indiana, the country especially to the west of Chicago, in the vicinity of the Fox river valley, is more attractive; in fact, it is an ideal region for short trips. With the improvements completed by counties and under state aid, which are already under way or will be in the next month, roads in this territory will be enormously better in another year.

The following route is all gravel or stone, although some of it is far from perfect condition. It is free from detours under present conditions, however. Some of it follows well known routes, but for the most part the trip is on roads not so much used by regular traffic.

Leaving Chicago, starting from Michigan boulevard, go west on Jackson boulevard straight into Garfield park, where you turn right, crossing trolley on Madison street. Just beyond turn left past the Burns monument, going straight west out of park on Washington boulevard, which you follow to end at Marengo avenue.

Here turn right one block and then left, continuing straight west to end of street on east side of Desplaines river. Turn left two blocks to end of street at Madison street and here turn right, crossing Desplaines river, and follow trolley to Fifth avenue, Maywood.

Continuing this trip, turn left at square on Grove avenue, to end of same at National street. Here turn left past Elgin watch factor yand at top of hill turn right around school with trolley onto St. Charles street. Go straight south on beautiful road for four miles, where you turn right under railroad, and just beyond curve left under second railroad. From here on the road is more winding, but very beautiful, with fine views overlooking the Fox river valley.

On the north side of St. Charles pick up trolley again and follow same to library and park at Main street, where turn right, crossing Fox river to Second street. Here turn left and go straight south on river road into Geneva. Keep straight ahead through Geneva, shortly joining trolley, and follow same just three miles south of Geneva to Batavia.

About three and a half miles beyond Batavia, keep right at three corners, and go about half a mile beyond to first left hand road, where turn left a little over a mile to first four corners. Here turn right half a mile to first left hand road again, where you turn left. The road from here is practically straight to Maywood, passing about two miles south of Wheaton, where the Starved Rock trail is picked up and followed all the way into the city.

This route comes into Maywood in St. Charles street, and by following the Starved Rock trail markings it is easy to identify the right turn onto Ninth street, which is followed to Madison street; turning left on same with trolley, follow the same route into city as is used coming out.

To Mark Dixie Highway.

ONE of the first divisions of the entire Dixie highway to arrange for a special road marking day, is that of the western division between Louisville and Nashville. President D. W. Rider of Elizabethtown, Ky., of the divisional association, has sent out notices to all of the counties on his division to secure their markers from the Dixie Highway association at Chattanooga and be ready to put them up on June 1, in order that the close of the day set apart for this work may find the entire Dixie highway between the cities mentioned thoroughly marked.

From the inquiries which the association has received, other counties and divisions which have been made acquainted with the action of the Louisville to Nashville division are preparing also to observe a special marking day about June 1.

On marking day Judge Rider is planning a big automobile parade and holiday along the entire division, and the highway will be alive with machines all day.

A National System for Automobile Credits

GUARANTY PLAN

AUTOMOBILE Time Payments

Largely because the automobile industry is so prosperous and so tremendously absorbed in the gigantic task of keeping pace with the demand for cars, there has been no organized system of credit applicable to the purchase of an automobile.

Universal systems of credit are available for the purchase of farm implements, talking machines and other musical instruments, typewriters, sewing machines and innumerable other articles.

But the purchaser of an automobile has been confronted with the necessity of paying cash or else of arranging for credit on some improvised plan.

Local automobile dealers and local banks have coped with this situation as best they could.

But the legitimate demand long since outgrew such limited credit facilities.

The Guaranty Securities Corporation was formed for the purpose of establishing nationally a sound, conservative system for the standardization of automobile credit.

The Corporation is controlled by men of large means and broad experience.

The Guaranty Plan does not encourage the buying of automobiles by persons for whom such a purchase would be an extravagance.

It aims to make credit available anywhere and at any time for firms and individuals who are properly entitled to buy an automobile on credit.

The Guaranty Plan is applicable only in the purchase of cars of recognized reliability which are produced by permanently established responsible concerns, with wide and adequate service facilities to insure that the merchandise value in the car will be maintained.

The purchase can be made through responsible dealers in such cars.

Dealers in approved cars who are authorized to sell under the Guaranty Plan display the emblem of this corporation prominently in their places of business.

Go to your local dealer and ask him to show you the Guaranty Plan Purchase Contract which you would be required to sign.

The contract is a simple, straightforward purchase agreement.

Its requirements and provisions are clearly stated, are as simple as those of an ordinary real estate purchase agreement and very similar.

It makes credit available for those who are properly entitled to it, but for those only.

It enables the dealer to sell cars on time payments without any extra expense, without sacrificing any part of his profit and without tying up any part of his capital.

It removes the demand upon local banks for discounts for this form of loans when their funds are more urgently needed in other channels.

But it enables the banks to participate in these discounts to the extent they desire and at such times as they desire, by purchasing debenture bonds secured by the purchasers' notes.

These debentures are issued by this corporation in several convenient denominations, are protected by ample collateral, by the entire capital of this corporation and by other safeguards so that they are short time investments approved by the largest banks of the country.

The plan is operating successfully, and its operation will be extended conservatively to meet the requirements of the public, recognized dealers, and co-operating financial institutions.

Inquiry is invited from those who desire to purchase automobiles, from responsible dealers and from banks who desire further information.

Vacuum System

$10

Cut Your Gas Bills

A Stewart Vacuum System on your car will cut your gas bills from 10% to 20%. That's an item of considerable importance nowadays.

Any car lacking this system is a waster of gasoline, out of date and cannot be depended on to supply gasoline to your carburetor under all conditions.

The Stewart Vacuum System is a small tank, about 4" x 10", located under the hood, connected to the carburetor, manifold and to the gas reservoir in the rear of the car. The suction from the engine through the manifold sucks the gas into the Stewart Tank and it flows from tank to carburetor.

This means no more forcing of gas through the carburetor causing a waste of from 10% to 20%.

Above all, if you are buying a new car be sure that it is equipped with the Stewart Vacuum System. It will cost you nothing extra.

Over 60% of all automobile manufacturers have adopted it as regular equipment.

If you are not going to buy a new car this spring bring your old car up to date and cut down unnecessary gasoline expense.

Can be readily installed on any car now in use.

Price $10—complete.

Stewart Products on a car are the safest guide as to the quality of the car as a whole. In selecting your next car be sure it is fully equipped with a Stewart Speedometer; Stewart Tire Pump; Stewart Warning Signal and Stewart Vacuum System. It will cost you nothing extra, for most cars are so equipped.

If possible, please furnish me with the best route from Chicago to French Lick Springs, Ind. L. C. D. Chicago.

I would advise you to go by way of Indianapolis, although a shorter route is by way of Lafayette, Crawfordsville, and Bloomington. Leaving Chicago over the southern boulevards to South Chicago, go through South Chicago, Hammond, Highlands, Schererville, Crown Point, Thayer, Roselawn, Remington [at this point do not go through business center of town, but at northern edge turn square left nearly six miles], Wolcott, Montmorenci, Lafayette, 131.3 miles; Frankfort, Kirklin, Rossion, Indianapolis, 67.6 miles; Southport, Greenwood, Whiteland, Franklin, Edinburg, Taylorsville, Columbus, Cox Crossing, Sweet Ireland, Waymansville, Freetown, Clear Spring, Leesville, Bedford, Mitchell, Orleans, Paoli, Prospect Corners, and West Baden to French Lick Springs, 131.2 miles. The total distance is 330.1 miles.

Will you please publish the most direct route to take from Wichita, Kas., to St. Paul, Minn.; also the distance and the condition of the roads in general?

From St. Paul I want to go to Bismarck, N. D., and from there over the most direct route to Wichita, together with the intermediate mileages.

G. S., Wichita, Kas.

Proceed first to Newton, 25.6 miles; thence through Emporia, 83.3 miles; Kansas City, 129.6 miles; St. Joseph, 63.3 miles; Des Moines, 193.2 miles; Mason City, 128.5 miles; St. Paul, 142.5 miles; Alexandria, 141.2 miles; Fargo, 123.4 miles; Bismarck, 207.5 miles. Total distance, 1,238.1 miles. From Newton to Kansas City the route is over the Santa Fe trail and consists of good dirt and gravel.

From Kansas City to St. Joseph you would follow the Interstate trail, which is marked by blue and white bands on the telephone poles. The roads are natural dirt and gravel and average quite good in anything but exceedingly wet weather. The road to Des Moines is about the same and is marked by red and white bands, as is the route to Mason City. The section between Mason City and St. Paul also is over the Interstate trail and consists of dirt and gravel roads. The Northwest trail is followed from St. Paul to Alexandria and will be found fairly good. The balance of the route to Fargo is only fair, but will not be likely to cause you much trouble. The first one hundred miles to Bismarck is good gravel, but the balance will be found fair to poor, many sections being sadly in need of improvement.

In returning from Bismarck to Wichita go to White Rock, 78.8 miles, over the Meridian road, which consists of natural dirt. Then go through Brookings, 132.8 miles, over fair to good dirt roads over prairie country, bad in wet weather. Frm Brookings drive through Sioux Falls to Sioux City, 151.8 miles over good dirt most of the way. The distance to Omaha is 112.5 miles and the road is fair to good dirt. Then go through Lincoln to Hiawatha, 217.2 miles, over rolling country, with roads that are mostly good in dry weather. The distance to Belleville is 142.8 miles over a section of the Pike's Peak Ocean to Ocean highway, which is good dirt all the way. The turns are marked by painted signs on the poles. Take the Meridian road, 81.8 miles, over natural dirt, to Salina, and from there, also on the Meridian road, drive to Wichita, 100.8 miles.

Before making this trip we would advise you to buy a copy of volume 5 of the Automobile Blue book.

Will you kindly let me know if Western avenue between Garfield boulevard and Ninety-fifth street is in good condition and open for motoring?

J. M. KAISER, Chicago.

It is doubtful if a poorer piece of road than the one you refer to is to be found in the vicinity of Chicago and motorists are warned against attempting to use it. Western avenue between Garfield boulevard and Seventy-first street practically is impassable and those desiring to reach the Beverly Country club, Rich Country club, Morgan Park, Blue Island, or any other southern points tapped by Western avenue, are advised to drive south in Michigan avenue to Garfield boulevard, west to Halsted street, south to Ninety-fifth street, and west to Western avenue. This route consists entirely of asphalt. According to the plans of the commissioner of public works, Western avenue from Garfield boulevard to Seventy-first street was to have been resurfaced last fall, but a number of things prevented the improvement. First the street was torn up to lay telephone cables and later on again was torn up for the construction of a sewer. The street department now is handicapped through lack of funds and for this reason motorists are being urged to make early payment of their wheel tax, which is due May 1. As soon as this money begins coming in, work on a number of streets will be started. First to come in for attention will be connecting links between the principal arteries in and out of Chicago. It is unlikely that the Western avenue improvement will be completed much before June 15.

Mileage Contest Shows Long Life of Motor Parts

HOW far do automobiles in every day use travel on their original equipment?

This was the question which led the Hyatt Roller Bearing company to institute its mileage contest. The data so secured is so important and there have been so many requests for it that it has been printed in an attractive illustrated booklet, which now is being distributed. The public libraries in automobile manufacturing centers have been supplied, and copies also have been sent to the Congressional library at Washington.

The booklet is a testament to the perfection of automobile manufacture and the endurance of the various parts. The first question that comes into the mind of the average man who purchases a motor car is, "How far will my car run before I will have to replace some part?" The booklet answers it very satisfactorily.

F. E. Slason of Plainville, Kas., whose Buick car won the contest, states in his narrative in the booklet that the car was purchased in October, 1909, and that it was six years before it had its first complete overhauling.

The Mitchell car owned by James Lewis of Shelton, Conn., which won the second prize, once was driven off a forty foot embankment. The steering wheel was broken and other damage to the car resulted. By tying a board to the spider of the wheel, however, it was possible to steer the car, and it was driven off under its own power.

A Mitchell car owned by the S. T. & E. R. R. Co., Stockton, Cal., won the seventh prize. It practically built and maintained a railroad. Today, with cast steel rims attached to the wheels, it is running over the railroad right of way, doing general service work.

Amateur Race Attracts Cars.

ASPIRANTS for the amateur speedway championship crown, which will go to the nonprofessional driver who pilots his car into first place in the western interclub race at Speedway park May 20, will work out in full force this afternoon, including many new entries that have been received in the last week.

The interest in the race for the last two weeks has increased at a rapid rate and a number of amateur drivers are trying to find cars that are fast enough to stand the pace, and before the race is run the list of starters may be up to thirty or forty. Many of these will fall by the wayside in the elimination contests, as the rules call for only five cars of the same make.

So far the Mercer leads in the number of entries and those that have been tried out. The Stutz and National cars come next in line, closely followed by the Cadillac. However, the entry lists are not closed as yet and there will probably be a limit number of each of these makes, together with three or four Packards and Coles before the final lineup.

The cars already in the running, together with their driver owners, are: William Connery, W. J. West, Andrew Ortmeyer, and J. B. Nellegar Jr., Nationals; A. W. Bromsted, W. J. Barnes, Washington Porter, F. C. Sawyer, E. H. Young, William Robbins, C. H. Robbins, Otto Antonson, G. F. Griffin, and William Leet, Mercers; E. C. Patterson, Frank Warren, and F. L. Church, Cadillacs; H. N. Scott, Locomobile; L. F. Mutter, Packard; P. C. Beh, A. Clemmens, Gordon Thorne, Frank Loeffler, W. R. Sproul, J. F. Offield, S. Herman, and W. N. Rupp, Stutz, and William Thomson, Battle Creek, Mich., a Kasidah, a new car that is being put on the track, the features of which are more or less of a mystery to the Speedway officials.

The McCarty Automobile company, which has the local agency for the Case, will introduce the Detroiter car to Chicago motorists tomorrow, the debut marking the taking on of this line by the McCarty company.

Four Overland cars are now plying as up to date stage coaches between Phœnix, Roosevelt Dam, and Globe, Ariz., over what is known as the Apache trail. Two railroad companies have a traffic agreement with this stage line to route transcontinental travelers whenever desired over this road.

When the Saxons dominated England they were lords and masters of their women. Suffrage for the gentle sex was not dreamed of by them. But the ages have made changes and the Saxons have kept pace with the times. For that reason alone the selection of a Saxon roadster as the car to bear Mrs. Alice Snitzer Burke from New York to San Francisco in the interest of the votes for women movement was in line with the progress of Saxon ideals. Officials of the Saxon Motor Car company, however, consider it a distinct tribute to the sturdiness and reliability of the motor car. Mrs. Burke, accompanied by Miss Nell Richardson, expects to cover 10,000 miles of ground between New York and the western coast, and every foot will be traveled in the little roadster.

Questions and Answers

What are the most common methods of valve placing and how many types are there in use? What type of construction is supposed to be the best?

A. H. S., Moline, Ill.

The three most common methods of placing the valves in internal combustion motors are all valves in the head, or at the top of the cylinder, all valves at one side of the motor, half on one side and half on the other. The type with valves at the top is known as a "valve in the head" motor and the advantage claimed is that with the valves so placed they open directly into the combustion chamber and that it is possible for the gases to flow with less friction and greater efficiency as regards heat losses. Exponents of the "L head" type of motor, which carries all valves at the side, maintain that greater compactness is obtained and that the piping is more easily installed. Builders of "T head" motors claim that with valves on both sides of the cylinder it is possible to make use of larger valve members and ports of greater area for the passage of gases. I would not venture an opinion as to what is the best type, as each one has its advantages.

Can you tell me in a few words and in a simple manner that may be understood by a layman why it is necessary to change the speeds in operating gasoline driven automobiles?

C. K., Chicago.

I cannot explain the question any better to you than by quoting Page, who in "Automobile Design, Construction, and Repair" says: "The gasoline engine develops power in direct proportion to its speed up to a certain point, and it will slow down whenever an overload is applied. More power is needed in climbing hills than in propelling a car on the level, and if the gasoline engine were directly attached to the rear wheel with a definite, unvariable ratio, it would not be possible to climb hills unless this reduction of speed between engine shaft and rear wheels was low. In order to enable the power plant to develop its full power it is customary to provide some form of change speed gearing to permit of altering the ratio of drive between the engine and the wheels to suit road conditions. The usual ratio on the direct drive or highest speed varies from three to one to five to one in pleasure cars. This means that the engine crankshaft will make from three to ten turns while the rear wheels are revolving once. As a gasoline engine is not reversible, it is customary to incorporate gearing that will permit of reversing the car motion in the change speed gear set."

Can you inform me as to the origin of the motorcycle? In what year was the first one built and what was the name of the inventor?

E. A. R., Chicago.

In 1885 Gottlieb Daimler, who built the first practical internal combustion engine and whose name is closely associated with the evolution of the automobile, conceived the idea of constructing a two wheeled, power propelled vehicle. It was a crude and cumbersome affair, but it justly may be regarded as the forerunner of the modern motorcycle. At that time the only power used by motor vehicles was steam and electricity, and the few machines could be operated only for limited distances. Therefore, Daimler paved the way for the automobile and motorcycle of today, when he used an internal combustion engine as the source of power in his first two wheeler. In 1889 Daimler went still farther when he took out patents on a double inclined cylinder motor, which was the first multiple cylinder conception. Daimler, by the way, also must be given credit for the invention of the first practical carburetor and thus solved the problem of producing a combustible gas from liquid fuel.

YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF to become thoroughly informed as to the relative merits and the relative values of the cars offered you.

IT MEANS SO MUCH—several seasons of pleasurable motoring, or weeks and months of disappointment and chargin. All depending on whether you choose right or wrong.

IF IT'S A SIX—a seven-passenger car—you have set your heart on, you can't be too careful this year. This year more than ever before.

FOR THIS YEAR you've heard new and wonderful claims made for some Sixes—new words in the advertising vocabulary—new feats in engine building.

IF—IF—THEY MAKE GOOD—all well and fine. But—if—not—what then?

SO IT BEHOOVES YOU to look well before you leap. Safety First.

THERE'S ONE SIX—and we know of only one—that you can tie to with absolute certainty that it will live up to reputation—measure up to your every requirement. One Six whose tremendous demand this year is based on tremendous performance in the past.

THERE'S ONE SIX that did not need to be re-designed this year—only refined in minor details—to retain its supremacy.

THERE'S ONE SIX that has led all others in popular favor and yet for which no sky splitting adjectives were necessary to describe its virtues.

THERE'S ONE SIX that has outlived almost as many other Sixes as Reo the Fifth has outlived other four-cylinder cars.

AND THERE'S ONE SIX that is known wherever motor cars are known as "The Gold Standard" of Sixes—because of its tried and proven quality.

THE FAME OF THAT SIX rests not on artificial exploitation nor verbal pyrotechnics, but on true worth as proved by performance in hands of owners.

WE'LL SHOW YOU THAT SIX—though the demand is such that every Reo is snapped up the minute it leaves the factory; we'll keep a Reo Six on the floor all the coming week to show you—that you may study and see wherein lies the quality that has gained for this Reo product the title "The Gold Standard."

WE'LL SHOW YOU that, because of the class of men who make them; the experience that goes into the designing and the manufacturing; the quality of materials and finish; Reos are 24-karat pure—"The Gold Standard" of automobile values.

IF YOU'D BE SURE that when you've drawn your check you have secured the Six that is, beyond question, the greatest Six obtainable at any price, you have it in this Reo Six.

WE DON'T DESIRE to discount anything anyone might choose to say about their product—goodness knows the man who has Reos to sell needs be envious of no other man—but we do say "this is a good year to be careful" what new Six you select. Some of them are too new. And too good to be true!

IN SELECTING A REO you can be sure—absolutely sure—that you have a car in which there is no experimental, no untried, no unproved factor. If its a Reo, it is the "Gold Standard."

SO MAKE IT A POINT to come in and say "Howdy" and look the Reos over.

WE WON'T IMPORTUNE you to buy—that isn't our way. We'll answer any questions you may choose to ask, courteously and gladly. And we'll show you the proofs of everything we say.

FURTHER THAN THIS it's up to you. We'll deem it only a friendly call—unless you desire to make it a business one.

BUT WE REPEAT: If you'd have a Reo and have your Reo in May, the order must be in our hands at once. Demand is tremendous—hopelessly in excess of the possible supply. So if you've delayed till now, don't delay further.

A WORD TO REO OWNERS: From the above you might infer that you are not invited. On the contrary you have a standing, and a perpetual, invitation.

AND THIS WEEK we are particularly desirous of seeing all Reo owners—nothing will so tend to stimulate Reo enthusiasm among prospective buyers as a few smiling Reo owners mingling in the crowds.

YOU KNOW—and they know you know—so they'll want to ask you.

YOU OWE IT TO REO to come in during the week and tell your friends about your Reo—performance and low upkeep cost.

SO YOU'RE INVITED—doubly.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

APRIL-MAY

The Wood Thrush.

WHEN the wood thrush and the catbird begin to sing at sunset the spring twilights have begun. The robin's evening song has preceded theirs, but the robin is too obvious for the processes of spring. It is because he is so obvious that he, more than any other bird, is the announcer of spring, but, like the speaker of the prologue who comes in front of the curtain, his function is to deal in the obvious. He is to say that something is to begin—that a drama of interest and importance is to be shown when the curtain is raised. He is not a part of it—he is the herald of it.

The robin's song is the advertisement and announcement. It carries the thrill of announcement. It arouses expectancy, but it is not the play. In his part he is, as he ought to be, familiar and intimate. The processes of the drama are otherwise, being, as they ought to be, shy and subtle.

At the robin's song the folk who have been wearied by waiting, as folk will be wearied by waiting for a certain event, arouse themselves, and there is a rustle of expectancy. The evening song of the wood thrush is a real part of the drama. It is the voice of the spring. It gives the twilight a sound which is as wonderful as the colors of the sunset. It gives perception at the close of day in spring two senses, whereas in winter there has been only one.

When the lilac and the orchards bloom, later, perception has three senses. It is real spring when perfume and sound and color proclaim the fact of the new birth.

The song of the wood thrush means the awakening of the second sense and the consequent expansion of sensation in which is the essence of spring and the essence of life.

The Eastern owner of this boat has placed the offer to sell it with me as his Chicago representative, and has named a price which any prospective purchaser must recognize as a tremendous bargain. The owner has a still larger boat and does not wish to maintain both.

L. O. A. 114 ft. Beam 14 ft. 3 in. L. W. L. 103 ft., 5 in., total depth 9 ft., 9 in. Wood construction, designed by Binney and built by Lawley. REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

BUSINESS PROPERTY—SOUTH.

FORCED SALE.
I own a building containing 6 stores and 26 flats. Annual rentals $8,400.
I am obliged to sell it to protect other investments and will accept the best offer I can get.
There is a loan of $35,000 with 2½ years to run at 5%. The loan was originally $20,000 more and was made by a private party who has twice renewed it for five year periods without commission and will undoubtedly be glad to do so again if desired.
The property is on the best main South Side business st., in line of advancing values, less than 2½ miles from the loop. Always rented and in good condition. My interest is worth twice what I will probably be obliged to accept for a quick deal, and offers a genuine opportunity for a profitable investment. Write me for full particulars, examine it, and make me an offer.
If sold by a broker will pay com., but a private party can save this for himself. Address L K 337, Tribune.

Latest News from Washington

About the Land Situation.

[Special Excursion Tuesday, May 9th.]

WASHINGTON, April 8. — "FARM LAND VALUES ARE INCREASING ALMOST BY LEAPS AND BOUNDS. Figures made public by the department of agriculture show that values for the United States, taken as a whole, INCREASED 25.7 PER CENT IN THE LAST FOUR YEARS and 11.5 last year. The figures are based upon reports from the department's field agents. The value of farm lands without improvements is estimated at $45.50 per acre, compared with $40.85 a year ago; $40.30 two years ago; $38.50 three years ago, and $36.23 four years ago."

THIS EARNING beats placing money out at interest. The above increases have been general all over the country, but it stands to reason that newer districts that are being brought under cultivation have enhanced at a still more rapid rate. This is clearly shown in the Swigart Tract of Manistee, Mason, Lake, and Wexford Counties, Michigan, where the values have had the impetus of many settlers moving in and a development movement on a large scale. Therefore no better investment is possible to make, with assured profits and absolute security, than in lands in this tract.

IF OWNING LAND means something more to you than investment, then there is a great incentive for acting now. Low priced farm land is growing scarcer every day and values are rising not only in the same proportion but also in proportion to the increased cost of the things that land produces. Beans alone give lands in this tract a greater earning power per acre than most agricultural lands in the United States. Michigan is the greatest bean state of them all.

IT WON'T COST ANYTHING to learn about the opportunities to be had in the Swigart Tract. Drop a postal for the literature and we will mail it or call at our offices and get it, and also a large map. See samples from our crops of clover, rye, wheat, oats, corn, alfalfa, vetch, timothy, beans, potatoes, vegetables, and fruits, and let us show you stereopticon pictures of the district.

MY NEXT SPECIAL CAR EXCURSION will leave Chicago Tuesday, May 9. Round trip from Chicago, including railroad fare, meals, and lodging, $12.50. Accommodations for both men and women. Automobiles free. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

George Swigart, OWNER,

FOR SALE—OWNER OF SUCCESSFUL
HIGHLY PRODUCTIVE
1,600 ACRE ORCHARD AND FARM.
WILL SELL

20-Acre Farm for Only $300

ON TERMS OF $10.00 CASH AND $5.00 MONTHLY.
WITHOUT INTEREST OR TAXES.

I am having splendid success with my 1,600 acre orchard and farm in Southeast Missouri. Have 100 acres in peaches, 136 in apples, 6 in grapes, 8 in strawberries, 4 in blackberries and raspberries, and 150 in vegetables, grains, and grasses. The balance will be planted to grapes and fruit trees next spring. The peaches have been running over $100 per acre, berries and grapes $300; tomatoes, $100 [$10 per ton at the canning factory], etc. Apples just coming into bearing.

I have a large amount of land surrounding my 1,000 acre orchard and farm, much more than I will ever be able to get under cultivation myself, and will sell 10 and 20 acre tracts at $300, on terms of $10.00 cash and $5.00 monthly, without interest or taxes.

FARMS FREE TO LIMITED NUMBER.

For a limited number of persons I have an arrangement whereby they can obtain a farm tract free.

My location is in Southeast Missouri, midway between the Ozarks and the lowlands. Elevation above sea level about 550 feet.

Before offering any of my land for sale, I went to the authorities of the seven nearby states having the so-called "Blue Sky" laws and asked them to pass on the printed matter I had prepared and to send their expert land men to inspect my orchard, farm, and land offered. After doing this, and also investigating my financial responsibility and past business record, they quickly granted permission to sell my land in their states.

A few acres here, properly looked after, will bring you a splendid income besides providing the best of everything for your own use. $100 to $800 clear profit per acre can be made. Fruits, berries, vegetables, grains, and grasses will produce these results. A single cow can be made to pay $12 clear profit every month. $100 will build you a cozy, comfortable home in our mild climate that will seem like a little palace compared with the ordinary, crowded, brick bound city flat.

With a few chickens, pigs, and a cow, fruits, berries, vegetables, and a little meadow to start with, your health, wealth and happiness come into your own hands. You are boss of all, with room to grow, and no one is big enough to come in and give you orders. We have good schools, churches, rural free delivery, and mutual rural telephone lines and good towns.

FREE RAILWAY FARE

to purchasers; 90 days' time to visit land and make your selection; money back after one year if dissatisfied; payments stop in case of death; money loaned for improvements; perfect title; immediate possession.

I have made about 50 kodak views in and around the big orchard and farm and on the land I am offering, and have had them reproduced in a 16-page pamphlet, in which also I have placed all the information to be obtained regarding the topography, soil, climate, water, rainfall, healthfulness, productivity, products, and about everything you want to know; also 50 letters from men in Chicago and nearby towns who have gone down to look and who have bought. I'll gladly send you a copy if you will write.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

CAPITAL:

IF! IF!! IF!!!

IF you were convinced that you could make a SAFE investment of $200, $400, $600, $800, or $1,000 that would bring you 10% per month or BETTER, would you make it?

Several hundred people have already made it—merchants, bankers, professional and business men of the highest type, the price has advanced sharply and will go much higher; it should double, treble, and quadruple WITHIN A FEW WEEKS.

I'll be fair with you—I'll show you the other side and point out the only risk, if it IS a risk; and I'll not urge you against your judgment; it isn't necessary.

Hundreds have bought and hundreds more will buy as soon as they learn about it if there is any left. Whether YOU buy or not is important only to yourself and the other fellow—he'll take what you don't buy and he cannot get what you do buy.

If you have the money, DON'T MISS THIS; if you haven't the money, don't ask about it—it will only make you unhappy, and what's the use?

ARE YOU OPEN TO CONVICTION?

A GOOD ASSOCIATE WANTED TO SHARE A SURE FORTUNE.

I am a stranger here, but I am a well known, thorough business man and a gentleman; I have spent $50,000 in the preparation of a real estate operation of great magnitude in a well known city of an adjacent state. I control absolutely a large amount of property, the sale of which is assured at a tremendous profit. A real fortune! The proposition is one of extraordinary merit, nonspeculative, highly attractive to large and small investors owing to its safety and assured high income paying character. I want a responsible, reliable, experienced business man of my brand able to assist me financially, either personally or through his financial and banking connections, in completing my deal [almost closed]. A fortune awaits the man who can and will do it, but he must be a true, good man to become my partner. Best references expected and given. Positively no information but at interview only and to bona fide inquirers. Address H T 447, Tribune.

If you will drop a postal to George W. McFatrich, M. D., Pres. of Northern Illinois College, he will gladly send you preliminary circular giving terms and time required. GEORGE W. McFATRICH, M. HUBBARD-ELLIOTT

COPPER

LEASED

Our Seattle, Washington, correspondents advise us by telegraph that the HUBBARD-ELLIOTT directors have ratified lease to eastern parties of their property, and the company will do considerable work themselves this year. This is exceedingly glad news to our clients, as we have been waiting patiently to confirm this news before sending it out.

In our opinion this takes the HUBBARD-ELLIOTT COPPER PROPERTY out of a speculative class and puts it into the investment class, which should make the stock very valuable, especially as the raw copper itself is selling at the highest price known for years. WE CANNOT RECOMMEND THE PURCHASE OF HUBBARD-ELLIOTT COPPER TOO STRONGLY.

REMEMBER, we advised the purchase of HUBBARD-ELLIOTT COPPER at 12c on March 12th. Again on March 19th we advised the purchase of HUBBARD-ELLIOTT COPPER at 15c and 16c a share. Again on March 26th we advised the purchase of HUBBARD-ELLIOTT COPPER at 20c a share. We told you the stock would go higher. We ran ads in all the leading newspapers to that effect. We sent our clients letter upon letter regarding this—begging and urging them to buy. Those who have followed our advice have now made handsome profits.

Our advice now is to buy more—buy all you possibly can carry. The stock now is on a firmer foundation and the opportunity to make money on these shares is stronger than ever, and we hope that you will not pass up this opportunity, but send us your order.

REMEMBER, WE HAVE NOT A CLIENT ON OUR BOOKS WHO HAS EVER LOST A DOLLAR ON OUR ADVICE. WE MADE MONEY FOR THEM IN SUCCESS MINING, INTERNATIONAL MERCANTILE MARINE, MARSH MINING, AND OTHER STOCKS, AND WE HAVE MADE MONEY AGAIN FOR THEM IN HUBBARD-ELLIOTT, AND WE AGAIN URGE YOU TO BUY AS MUCH OF THIS STOCK AS YOU POSSIBLY CAN.

Wire us your order at market to reserve as many shares as you possibly can carry, as this good news should put the stock way up. So get in quick and don't delay.

TERMS OR CASH.

We have traded for a great many cars of almost every make, being very conservative as to the allowance for same and the vintage you will find in this large stock of used cars, none but the latest and best known high grade cars at surprisingly low prices; cars that have been driven only a short distance; others that have been completely overhauled and refinished, look like new, and, as far as service is concerned, will give you more real mileage and last longer than any cheap new car. Another thing, the pride of ownership of a good high grade automobile, even though it has been used some, is greater than in a new car of an inferior make.

A REBUILT CADILLAC
It's a Safe Used Car to Buy
SPECIAL VALUES NOW

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory, the entire car repainted and refinished like new, all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service value these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

ODD PIECE SALE

Sample & Misfit Garm'ts

20% TO 50% OFF.

Would it interest you if you had a chance to purchase a staple article at a discount of 20, 30, or 40 per cent?

We operate fourteen large tailoring stores on the broad policy: "If you do not want the garments you ordered made we keep them, WITHOUT ARGUMENT. If the cloth is too heavy or too light, too somber or too bright, or if your family disapproves your selection."

In order to carry out this policy we have to find a market for the goods which are returned, and have established our "Returned Garment Section," where every garment is priced in plain figures at from 20 to 50 per cent less than the original selling price, the reduction depending upon the style of the garment, the cut, and the size.

Before buying your spring clothes it should be worth your while to look at either of our departments.

A SUMMARIZATION of the May 1 moving and general renting situation is something like this: There probably is more moving than for several years owing to the great number of new apartment buildings erected during the last year, and which have been offered at most attractive terms to tenants.

Many vacant flats will be carried over, owing to the large supply on the market, the older buildings being particularly affected.

While some buildings in certain favored localities have been able to maintain rents and are without any vacancies, concessions have been the rule, particularly during the last two weeks. This applies especially to older buildings in certain sections.

Situation Grows Better.

The situation, however, is considerably better than it promised to be two or three months ago.

There has been a heavy movement toward the new south shore district south of Jackson park, toward Oak Park and Austin on the west side, to Rogers Park and the district north of Lincoln park on the north side, and to certain sections on the northwest side.

Many vacant stores and offices will be carried over in the downtown district, and with few exceptions owners have been making material concessions to tenants.

Vast Amount of Flat Building.

That many vacant flats should be carried over was inevitable because of the vast amount of flat construction during the last year and a half, and which seems to have reached a climax during the four months of the present year, as evidenced by the figures of the city building department.

No amount of energetic or skillful campaigning on the part of agents or tempting concessions in a rental way could begin to fill all the apartments on the market for the simple reason the supply was far in excess of the demand.

In certain favored localities, however, where the buildings are of a good character and the general surroundings attractive, owners have been able to keep their buildings well filled and without any concessions in a rental way, but they are exceptions to the general rule.

Small Flats in Demand.

According to all accounts the best renters have been the one, two, three, and four room apartments with in-a-dor beds and kitchenets in the smaller apartments. While some vacancies will be carried over in this class of buildings, owing to the great number which have been erected, they undoubtedly have rented more rapidly than any other class of buildings.

Of course, it depends somewhat on the locality, there being little demand for them in the more exclusive residential districts of the city, such as that just north of Lincoln park, in Rogers Park, and in the district south of Jackson park, but, generally speaking, owners and agents have experienced little difficulty in keeping them well filled at good strong rentals.

Drift to New Sections.

Another interesting feature has been the pronounced drift toward certain new sections in various parts of the city. Heretofore the drift has been generally from the south and west sides to the newer districts in the north and northwest parts of the city. It has not been of a particularly pronounced character, but the tendency has been clearly apparent for the last decade.

The south and west sides, however, finally have drift zones of their own, and the movement has been of a particularly heavy character. The south side developed the south shore district south of Jackson park, the rapid upbuilding of which during the last year and a half has been one of the most spectacular features in the growth of Chicago.

Buildings Attractive.

The buildings have been of a particularly attractive character, which, together with the handsome new club house and grounds of the South Shore Country club, have attracted a host of people from the older and more congested parts of the city. The drift in that direction during the present renting season is said to have been particularly heavy.

The many new, high grade apartment buildings in Oak Park and Austin, together with the generally attractive surroundings, have drawn thousands from the older buildings in the more thickly settled parts of the west side. It is estimated that buildings containing at least 600 apartments have been erected in the two towns during the past year.

F. R. DE YOUNG WILL SPEAK.

Frederick R. De Young, a member of the state legislature, will be the speaker at the Tuesday luncheon of the Cook county real estate board, his subject being: "Is the Pending Tax Amendment a Good One?" H. M. Hansen will act as toastmaster.

BERWYN WANTS ELEVATED LINE EXTENDED TO SUBURB

An effort is being made by the citizens of Berwyn, immediately adjoining Chicago on the west, to procure an extension of the Douglas Park branch of the Metropolitan Elevated railroad through the municipality. An ordinance having almost unanimous backing of the citizens will come up for passage this week, and there is hope the railroad company may be induced to accept its terms and make the desired extensions. The plans call for a line parallel with West Twenty-second street running to the west line of Berwyn at Harlem avenue, with a branch extending south near Oak Park avenue through the center of the city to Ogden avenue and thence southwesterly to Harlem avenue. The proposed franchises call for a 5 cent fare to the heart of the city, thus making it possible to go from Berwyn to Englewood or Evanston for a single 5 cent fare. Coincident with plans for this extension are plans for the development of the adjacent territory. In anticipation of the adoption of this ordinance, business men and citizens of Berwyn and many outside investors are preparing to erect new buildings and extend their facilities for handling the business expected to come upon completion of these extensions.

COLD WEATHER RETARDS BUSINESS OF SUBDIVIDERS

There was little doing in acres of vacant, outside of the purchases made for immediate improvement, and there was general complaint among subdividers that the continued cold weather is having a bad effect on the market. The belief is and has been that with anything like favorable weather conditions a good market seems assured.

Lake Forest furnished the only acre transactions of any interest. In one Clifford M. Leonard purchased fifty-eight acres of land on the west side of Green Bay road, Lake Forest, from the C. O. Young estate. This is adjacent to the land recently acquired by Lawrence Williams. The land was purchased through John Griffith. Some time ago Mr. Leonard purchased 160 acres directly opposite the estate of J. Ogden Armour. It is said that he is undecided where he will build.

Mr. Griffith also has [illegible] for Mrs. Gron to W. M. Burton five acres at Sheridan and Bushwood roads, consideration not being dolsclosed. Mr. Burton probably will improve with a new residence.

Mary R. Badenoch has purchased from the William B. Ogden estate fifty-three lots between Fifty-first and Fifty-fourth streets and Western avenue and Rockwell streets, for $15,000. C. R. Craig Jr. was the broker. The lots will be retailed.

GOOD MOVEMENT IN APARTMENTS

Flat Property Active, but Below Showing of the Previous Week.

There was a fairly good movement of apartment house property during the week, although the showing was hardly up to that of the previous week, both as regards the number as well as character of the properties represented.

The largest deal of the week was the sale by Rose Trosky to William N. Rumely of Sycamore, Ill., of the twenty-four apartment building of four and five rooms at 835-42 Galt avenue, just east of Sheridan road, for a reported consideration of $95,000, subject to an incumbrance of $47,000. The building occupies a lot 100x125 feet, and is stated to have a gross annual rent of $13,690.

In exchange the purchaser conveyed the property at 1304-06-08 North La Salle street, lot 60x150 feet, with three dwellings, at a reported valuation of $20,000 clear, and the store and flat property at 807-09 West North avenue, extending back to Clybourn avenue, where it is known as 1583-87, at a reported valuation of $25,000 clear. C. C. Spotswood was the broker, representing both parties.

24 Flat Building Brings $88,000.

The high grade twenty-four apartment building on a lot 90x171 feet at the southwest corner of Estes avenue and Paulina street has been sold by S. M. Seator to Theodore T. Decker for a reported consideration of $88,000, subject to an incumbrance of $51,000. The apartments contain three, four, and five rooms, and the building is said to have a gross annual rent of $12,700.

The purchaser gave in part payment the six apartment building at 4461-63 Clifton avenue, lot 60x150 feet, and the 88½x125 feet of vacant at the southeast corner of Irving Park boulevard and Drake avenue at a valuation of $37,000. J. B. McCloud represented Mr. Seator and T. Ackenhaus of Cassinelli & Co. represented Mr. Drake.

Murray Wolbach sold to Harvey B. Jacks the twelve flat building at the northwest corner of Sixty-eighth street and Ridgeland avenue, for a reported consideration of $51,000, subject to an incumbrance of $35,000, the purchaser giving in part payment two two flat buildings also in the South Shore district. Glen J. Gooder of W. K. Young & Bro., represented both parties.

Mr. Wolbach also sold to Charles E. Walters the three story apartment house in Clyde avenue, 159 feet north of Sixty-eighth street, east front, 56x125, for $32,500, subject to $16,000. Mr. Wolbach has also sold to Albert C. Manz the six apartment house in Central avenue, 326 feet south of Sixty-seventh street, west front, 56x125, at $28,500, subject to $19,500.

Deal in Halsted.

The property at the northeast corner of Thirteenth place and Central Park avenue, lot 68x149 feet, with apartment house improvements, has been conveyed by Elias Epstein to Joseph Greenwold for an indicated consideration of $53,000, subject to an incumbrance of $35,000.

The four story apartment building at the southeast corner of Calumet avenue and Forty-ninth street, lot 50x130 feet, has been sold by Ralph De Nardo to Sarah E. Tierney for an indicated $46,400, subject to $41,400, the purchaser giving in part payment the property in Drexel avenue, 192 feet north of East Fifty-eighth street, east front, 48x130 feet, for an indicated $17,150, subject to $12,150.

William E. Nesbitt sold to Elizabeth P. Gunlock the flat property in Farwell avenue, 416 feet east of Sheridan road, lot 49½x174 feet, for an indicated $35,000, subject to $19,000.

John P. Graue sold to William R. Connor the property in Grace street, 237 feet west of Sheridan road, north front, 137x182 feet, for an indicated $30,500, subject to $20,500.

Outside Business Deals.

Outside business property did not make a particularly good shoing during the week, although there were two transactions of more than ordinary importance.

The most important of the two deals in question was the sale by Fred Becklenberg to Alonzo C. Mather, president of the Mather Stock Car company, of the property at the southeast corner of Sheridan road and Columbia avenue for a reported consideration of $100,000, subject to an incumbrance of $55,000.

The other transaction covered the property at the northwest corner of Forty-seventh street and St. Lawrence avenue, which was sold by Edward I. Bloom, the builder to Valdemar Michaelsen for an indicated consideration of $90,000, subject to an incumbrance of $45,000. The lot fronts 125 feet on Forty-seventh by 120 feet on St. Lawrence avenue and is improved with a new two story store and flat building.

BIG DEMAND FOR FACTORIES PUZZLE TO REALTY MEN

Real estate men in the east are commenting quite freely upon what they say is a quite remarkable demand for factories, says the American Contractor. It is to them an almost entirely new proposition. Their experience has been that only once in a great while have they been called upon to provide a prospective customer with an industrial plant. In fact, the occasions have been so rare that they scarcely ever took the trouble to list this want.

The inference, of course, immediately arises that it is the manufacturers of munitions who are at the bottom of this new inquiry. That, however, is not the fact. Only a small fraction of the inquiry arises from that source. The keen demand has been created in consequence of the war and is directly related thereto, but it is not for the manufacture of arms and other war supplies that the factories are wanted.

LAKE AND CLINTON CORNER WILL BE SOLD AT AUCTION

The fee of the property at the northwest corner of Lake and Clinton streets, 111x80 feet, will be offered for sale at the judicial salesroom of the Chicago real estate board at 11 a. m. May 12. The sale is in pursuance of a decree of partition, the title of the case being Hiram S. Cable vs. James S. Cable and others.

BARTLETT & CO. WILL OPEN RAVINIA HIGHLANDS TODAY

Frederick H. Bartlett & Co. announce the formal opening today of Ravinia Highlands subdivision, a large tract adjoining the residence district of Highland Park. It contains 289 lots.

Leases and Loans.

It generally is the case that in the week preceding May 1 there are many leases of business space reported in the downtown market. Last week, however, there were comparatively few, evidencing the present dullness in this market.

The general renting department of Willoughby & Co. reports having leased for J. V. Steger to Wolf Bros. company, importers of diamonds, the store at 30 East Jackson boulevard for ten years at a term rent of $62,500.

Also for Lyon & Healy to E. B. Rosenthal the store at 202 South Wabash avenue, and part of the second floor, for two years and ten months at a term rent of $22,667; also to the Chicago Washing Machine company the store at 200 South Wabash avenue for two years and ten months for a term rent of $8,500.

Sprague Moore closed several interesting leases in the south side automobile district. He leased to the Federal Motor Truck company for Arthur B. Jones a garage to be erected by Mr. Jones at the southwest corner of Twenty-first street and Wabash avenue. The lease is for a term of years at an annual rent of $4,800 and will be used by the company as a salesroom and service building.

The same broker has leased for the estate of E. J. Lehman to the Allen Motor Car company, manufacturers of the Allen car, the store at 2526 Michigan avenue at an annual rent of $3,600. Mr. Moore also leased to the Ford Motor company for Elmer Beach the building at 2415 South Michigan avenue for a term of years at an annual rent of $3,900.

The two story and basement building, white tile front, at the northwest corner of West Madison street and Karlov avenue, has been leased by Dennis D. O'Keefe to the Farrar Drug company for a term of years at a term rent of $55,000. Alterations costing $10,000 will be made and the drug company will occupy the corner part of the main floor, leaving an "L" shaped store to rent. The second floor will be equipped for seventeen doctors' offices, with a large reception room. A. D. Harding negotiated the lease.

Mark Levy & Bro. have leased for Herman H. Goodfriend the ground floor and basement in the new building at 3010-14 West Lawrence avenue, just west of Kedzie avenue, to the Humboldt Furniture company, for a term of years at a reported term rent of $34,750. The lessee company is now located at Western and North avenues. The lease is said to be at a record rent for that vicinity.

The National Biscuit company has leased from Bessie B. Adcock the plot southwest corner of Wentworth avenue and Seventieth street, 75x75, for fifteen years from Sept. 1 of this year to Aug. 31, 1931, at an annual rental of $2,666. The lessor agrees to erect on the land not later than Sept. 1 of this year a standard brick agency and stable building known as building type 25 for automobile delivery, to cost not more than $18,000.

Among a number of leases reported by E. Orris Hart & Co. is the lease for C. H. Hill and H. W. Cook to A. A. Frank of the store at 110 North Dearborn street for five years at a term rent of $17,100. For Robert Rosenthal to Arthur Mitchell store and basement 61 West Madison street for term rent of $10,000; also for E. W. Blatchford through H. O. Stone Co. to the Standard Electric Manufacturing company entire sixth floor at 216 North Clinton street at a term rental of $8,000.

John R. Magill & Co. report a number of minor leases.

Three 4½ per cent loans were closed during the week. In one the New England Mutual Life Insurance company loaned $100,000 to John T. Boddie. It is secured by the fee of the property at 8-10 North Clark street, 41x80 feet, east front, sixty feet north of Madison street. It was valued by the board of review at $250,839.

Another one was by the Merchants' Loan and Trust company, trustee, to Mrs. Emily D. McCord, secured by the fee at the southeast corner of Randolph and Clark street, 30x70 feet. The loan is for $175,000 for five years. The board of review valued the property at $289,606, of which $10,000 is in the building. The land is under lease to Frank W. Alter et al. for ninety-nine years from March 1, 1911, at an annual rent of $17,500 for the first year, $22,000 for the succeeding five years, $23,000 for the next five, and $24,000 for the following eighty-eight years.

In the other loan, which was negotiated by H. O. Stone & Co., Farrie McMahon, trustee, negotiated a loan of $30,000 at 4½ per cent on the property at 411-19 South Clark street, 100 feet south of Van Buren street, lot 50x106 feet, with old improvements. The assessed value of the property is $140,000.

There were also many building loans, mostly at 6 per cent.

Record was made of a bond issue loan by S. W. Straus & Co. to Charles F. Henry of $155,000, seven years, at 6 per cent, secured by the new Highland apartments, which Mr. Henry is erecting on 100x150 feet of ground at the southeast corner of Greenview and Birchwood avenues. The building is to cost about $235,000, and in the purchase of the land J. B. McCloud acted as broker.

Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company have made a loan to Axel H. Johnson of $55,000 on the property northeast corner Briar place and Cambridge avenue, 74x127, now being improved with a twelve apartment building.

VAST BUILDING PLANS PROMISE A RECORD YEAR

Figures for Four Months $17,000,000 in Excess of Those for Same Period Last Year.

Building operations throughout the city continue on a steadily increasing scale, as evidenced by the figures of the city building department. If they continue at the same rate during the remainder of the year, as some persons affect to believe, they will largely exceed the record figures of 1911, which were a little in excess of $105,000,000.

For the four months of the present year the figures are nearly $40,000,000, as compared with a little over $23,000,000 for the corresponding period of 1915 and $2[illegible],544,400 for the same period in 1911. As most of the permits are for apartment buildings, however, the supply of which undoubtedly is just now much in excess of the demand, it is not believed the present volume of building will be maintained much longer.

Several Big Projects.

Among the several big projects announced during the week one of the most interesting is the erection of a building to contain 175 apartments and to cost about $280,000, at the northwest corner of Sheridan road and Pratt boulevard, by Charles H. Kusel of Kusel & Harris, on property just acquired by him. The plot in question fronts 178 feet on Sheridan road and 150 feet on the boulevard, and it was purchased from Christ K. Damascus for a reported consideration of $50,000.

The proposed building, which will be erected at once, will contain eleven stores and, as stated, 175 apartments of one and two rooms, with kitchenettes and bath, dining rooms, and living rooms. Milton D. Schwartz was the broker representing both parties, and will have charge of the building when completed.

Greenhouse Property Sold.

A transfer of the Wittbold greenhouse property in Buckingham place, 125 feet east of Halsted street, made a matter of record during the week, is preliminary to the construction by Louis and Fred Wittbold, conveyed to the Buckingham Court apartments on 225x125 feet of frontage. The tract was first conveyed by the Wittbolds to the Chicago Title and Trust company, and then the trust company conveyed to the Buckingham court apartments. It is understood the building, which will be of high grade character, will contain thirty-eight apartments and one store and will cost in excess of $100,000. The Wittbold company will occupy the store for retail purposes.

The erection of a seven story and basement mercantile building to cost about $90,000 in the north central business district is announced. It will be erected at the northwest corner of Grand avenue and McClurg court, one block west of the outer Lake Shore drive, and near the municipal pier.

Building Ready Jan. 1.

It will be erected by Winston & Co., will be of reinforced concrete construction, will occupy a lot 50x118 feet, and will be ready for occupancy Jan. 1 next. Lammers-Schilling company, printers, commercial artists, and designers, now at Sherman and Polk streets, have leased one-half of the building from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, for a term of years at a reported term rent of $97,350. Winston & Co. represented the lessor and the Bowes Realty company the lessee.

August W. Quanstrom, the builder, will erect a store, office, and flat building on 100 feet of ground on Sixty-seventh street, 270 feet west of Stony Island avenue.

MEMBERS OF THE ALLIES' COUNCIL OF WAR—In order to promote co-operation of the armies of the entente powers on the various war fronts councils of war are now regularly held in Paris. The first conference was held on Dec. 6-7, 1915, and the second, on which occasion the above picture was taken, was held on March 12-13 of this year. From left to right (standing) are: (1) Gen. de Castlenau, France; (2) Sir Douglas Haig, Great Britain; (3) Gen. Wielemans, Belgium; (4) Gen. Gilinsky, Russia; (5) Gen. Joffre, France; (6) Gen. Porro, Italy, and (7) Col. Pachitch, Serbia. In the background are Russian and French under officers.

THE KING AND QUEEN OF ENGLAND—King George recently donated $500,000 of his private fortune for the benefit of the British soldiers. The photograph, taken on the occasion of a recent visit of the royal couple to the Irish guards at Warley barracks, shows, besides King George and Queen Mary, Lord Kitchener (to the queen's right) and John Redmond (in top hat in the background).

CEREMONIES IN HONOR OF GEN. VON EMMICH—Gen. von Emmich, the conqueror of Liege, died in December and his funeral was held in Hanover on Christmas day. In Berlin military ceremonies were also held and above is one of the photographs taken of a public square during the event. Gen. von Emmich, it was reported, died of arterio-sclerosis. Against the advice of the emperor he kept in active service until a short time before his death.

INDIAN MAIDEN WHO SAYS SHE WILL NOT MARRY AN INDIAN—Kamamah, the "Cherokee Butterfly," daughter of one of the best known chiefs of the Cherokee tribe, Connector Delehi, says that the male Indian is too unenergetic for her and she intends to marry a paleface for the improvement of the race on both sides. She is college educated and her home is in Tahlequah, Okla. She is 20 years old. (Photograph by Paul Thompson.)

NIJINSKY AND FAMILY—Nijinsky, the famous Russian ballet dancer of the Serge Diaghileff Ballet Russe, held as a prisoner of war in Austria, was unable to appear in the first New York engagement and the Chicago engagement of the ballet. He was exchanged by the Austrian government and arrived in New York in time to take part in the return engagement in that city. Nijinsky's wife and their child, who is being brought up on a special diet and has already begun to learn to dance, came over with the dancer.
